Keenan Sworn In As New Police Chief

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Police Chief Paul Keenan, 50, took the oath of office as Quincy's 17th police chief Tuesday during a mid-morning ceremony in City Hall.

Keenan told The Sun after the ceremony that he planned to meet with the patrol officers' union on Wednesday, his first full day on the job. He hopes to establish common ground with the members, have an airing of department needs, and set an agenda with the union.

Keenan succeeds Chief Robert Crowley whose last year was marred by fierce controversy between the department's command staff and the patrol officers' union. On several occasions, each side filed court complaints and legal actions against the other.

SHERIFF Michael Bellotti praised the work of the selection committee.

"We are a well-disciplined department. I don't see any major discipline on the horizon," Keenan said, stating that Crowley was "the right person at the right time."

However, Keenan said he would inject his own approach into union issues.

As for the department's command staff, Keenan said that he does not plan any sweeping changes but there will be several shifts at the top level.

One of Keenan's first goals is to "get a handle on the budget." He noted that the department's 2009 budget was cut by two per cent during the spring budget review.

As for the department's approach to crime, he cited issues with drugs and the importance of community policing.

"One of my priorities will be the drug unit," said Keenan, adding that he does not believe Quincy's drug problem is worse than other

City Halts Use Of Billboard 'Til New Hearing

By TOM HENSHAW

Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca has ordered a new hearing into the controversial siting of an 82-foot electronic billboard overhanging the Southeast Expressway from 315 Willard St. West Quincy.

Duca ruled that Media Vision, Inc., did not receive two of the required variances from the building code when the Zoning Board of Appeals approved the placement in June, 2007.

"Therefore, you must cease and desist the use of the billboard forthwith, until you receive a favorable decision from the Zoning Board of Appeals," said Duca in a letter to Jonathan Serra, president of Media Vision.

No date was set for the new hearing.

The land on which the billboard is located is owned by Biondi's Service Center but leased for 25 years to the New York firm of Boston Outdoor Ventures and handled locally by Media Vision of Revere.

Duca was acting on an appeal from Thomas M. Maloney Jr. of Maloney Capitol Company, whose attorney, Matthew Lawlor, questioned that "the billboard really has obtained all of the zoning relief it needs."

Duca found that the billboard also needed zoning relief under state and city regulations governing the alteration of non-conforming structures, that is, the addition of the billboard to the property.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch lauded Duca's decision to rehear the matter.

"When we took office," he said, "I was deeply troubled by the permitting of this project and our administration is pursuing every avenue to correct any mistakes made previously."

"This process will also help us ensure that something like this never happens again."

Meanwhile, Biondi's Service Center sought a restraining order against Mike

Senate Bill Would Adjust State Health Care Funding

The State Senate has approved a bill that would phase in long overdue rate adjustments for human service providers who contract with the state to deliver services to the elderly and the disabled.

"Human service providers have gone far too long without a rate adjustment," said Sen. Michael Morrissey. State funding for the system has remained relatively stagnant during the last 20 years in spite of rapidly increasing operating costs and a growing population of people who need services."

The bill requires the Division of Health Care and Policy to establish a predictable and adequate rate-setting schedule that will help provider mitigate operating costs and retain employees.

It now goes to the House for consideration.

New Recycling Program Underway

Single Stream recycling is now underway in Quincy as well as in the towns of Braintree and Weymouth.

DPW Commissioner Lawrence Prendeville reminds residents the new recycling program is part of the tri-town collaborative effort between Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree. The partnership was formed in a successful attempt to find the best pricing for curbside collection of trash and recycling. The Single Stream recycling system adds to these savings by increasing recycling and decreasing solid waste.

A packet explaining Single Stream recycling along with a recycling sticker were mailed to every household in Quincy last week. To begin Single Stream recycling simply place a Single Stream recycling sticker on an existing barrels. The larger barrel accommodates more material making it easier to recycle more items. Now you can put your paper, plastic, metal and glass all together in one container, hence the term, Single Stream. No more separation is necessary by the resident or by curbside collector, saving time and money. All separation is done at the material recovery plant in Avon, which is operated by Recycle America.

Those who prefer, can still use their existing blue recycling bin. Single Stream recycling stickers are available at the DPW at 55 Sea Street. They can also be mailed to residents by calling 617-376-1953 or by email recyclequincy@ci.quincy.ma.us.

The following is a list of material that may be recycled under Single Stream.

- All paper, not contaminated by food
- All colored paper (staples, paper clips OK), paperboard (cereal boxes, shoe boxes)
- Newspapers, magazines, catalogs, telephone books, soft cover books, paperback books, junk mail, envelopes of all types, cardboard, brown paper bags
- Plastic bottles and containers named 1-7, soda, juice, water bottles (glass or plastic), milk and juice cartons, milk jugs, bleach detergent, shampoo bottles

- Clean food containers (cottage cheese, margarine, yogurt)
- Glass bottles/jars (any color)
- Aluminum (pie plates/trays/foil)
- Clean metal cans (tin/steel/aluminum)

What not to include:

Senate Bill Would Promote Energy Efficiency Reform

The State Senate has approved the Green Communities Act, a sweeping energy reform package that focuses on developing energy efficiency and renewable energy sources across the Commonwealth.

"It is becoming increasingly evident that we must take the necessary steps of moving ourselves toward greater energy independence," said Sen. Michael Morrissey, Senate chair of the Joint Committee on Energy.

"This bill provides various incentive and assistance for new renewable energy development and continued support of our existing renewable and alternative energy facilities and programs."

The legislation directs the Department of Energy Resources to establish a green communities program under which cities and towns can use state grants and loans to finance energy improvements.

The bill awaits final approval by the House.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 2, 1900, in the sky over Germany, Count Ferdinand Graf von Zeppelin successfully demonstrates the world's first rigid airship. The 420-foot, cigar-shaped craft was lifted by hydrogen gas and powered by a 16-horsepower engine.

• On July 4, 1914, director D.W. Griffith begins shooting "Birth of a Nation," one of the most controversial movies in the history of American filmmaking. Griffith spent about $100,000 to make the silent film, a Civil War epic that used groundbreaking techniques, including multiple camera angles.

• On June 30, 1936, Margaret Mitchell's novel "Gone with the Wind" is published. A New York editor encouraged Mitchell to make one important change to the manuscript: the heroine's name. Mitchell agreed to change it from Pansy to Scarlett, now one of the most memorable names in the history of literature.

• On July 5, 1946, French designer Louis Reard unveils a daring two-piece swimsuit he dubbed the "bikini," inspired by a U.S. atomic test that took place just days earlier off Bikini atoll in the Pacific. Reard kept the mystique alive by declaring that a two-piece suit wasn't a genuine bikini "unless it could be pulled through a wedding ring."

• On July 6, 1957, Althea Gibson defeats Darlene Hard 6-3, 6-2 to become the first black tennis player ever to win Wimbledon. Gibson won the U.S. Open in 1958, and was named Female Athlete of the Year by The Associated Press in both years.

• On July 3, 1971, singer Jim Morrison is found dead in a bathtub in Paris. Morrison, 27, was taking a sabbatical from his hit rock band, The Doors, when he died of heart failure, likely caused by a drug overdose.

• On July 1, 1995, legendary radio disc jockey Wolfman Jack, born Robert Smith, dies. Smith became famous while broadcasting from Mexico in the 1960s. Because Mexican stations had five times the power of U.S. stations, a large portion of the United States could receive Wolfman Jack's show each night.

No Paper Ballots Here

It will be back to paper ballots in many states this Presidential election.

But not here,

Punch-card ballots aren't coming back either.

"No way," says City Clerk Joseph Shea. "They won't be back."

The controversial punch card voting in Florida in 2000 led many states to turn to electronic touch-screen voting systems.

But after malfunctions in equipment in the 2004 and 2006 elections a good many of those states are returning to paper ballots this fall.

Those famed (or) infamous hanging chads and questionable dents on the punch card ballots in 2000 led to a recount which gave Bush the Electoral College votes to win the Presidency over Al Gore.

Just the mention of paper ballots is enough to make Shea shudder.

He remembers those election nights when it wasn't unusual for a precinct or two to struggle in at 8 or 9 a.m. the following morning.

Nowadays with the opti-screen system the official results are usually known by 8:30 or 9 p.m.

Shea's predecessor, John Gillis, and then Mayor Frank McCauley took Quincy out of the dark age of paper ballots.

Gillis, for years, had been trying to get rid of the paper ballots that were counted by hand and could easily be miscounted.

The famed Walter Hannon-Joseph LaRaia mayoral recount of 1975 still stands as a prime example of what could go wrong.

The results that election night showed that Hannon had squeaked out a third term by a 134-vote margin over LaRaia.

A later recount, however, gave LaRaia the mayor's office by 483 votes.

The paper ballots were counted in blocks of 50 votes; six of which were counted as Hannon's but the recount showed they were actually LaRaia's.

That touched off "trying to steal the election" claims. But a court inquest called by Atty. General Frank Bellotti and Dist. Atty. William Delahunt found human error in the election counting but no evidence of wrongdoing.

Scenes From Yesterday

Water Tower and Abigail Adams Cairn, Quincy, Mass.

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a 1915 view of the old water standpipe that was next to the Abigail Cairn on the top of Penn's Hill in South Quincy. A climb up the spiral stairway to the observation platform at the top of this water tank provided spectacular views of the entire Boston area and the Blue Hills. Built in the 1800's by the privately owned Quincy Water Company, this 60-foot high tank held over 400,000 gallons of water. The water was pumped up here from the old Quincy Reservoir, also known as Braintree Dam, through the company's pumping station on Penn Street. By 1900 the water company had been taken over by the city and it became the Quincy Water Department. The city then began buying its water from the newly formed Metropolitan Water Commission. The standpipe was demolished several years ago and today trees and houses block views from the Cairn. 21st Century Delegates To Debate Vote On Declaration Of Independence Visitors to the Adams National Historical Park on this year's Fourth of July can be transformed into delegates to a special meeting of the Continental Congress to debate and pass the Declaration of Independence.

President John Hancock will wield the gavel as delegates from the 13 United Colonies argue, sometimes heatedly, over the necessity and nature of such a declaration that will decide the fate of a nation.

There will be two sessions of the Congress on Friday, July 4, the first at 12 noon and the second at 3 p.m. in "Independence Hall," recreated in the Carriage House at the Old House, Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St.

After the debate, each 21st century delegate will affix his or her name to the document, ring the Liberty Bell, receive a copy of the Declaration of Independence as a memorial to his or her efforts and savor the victory by munching on a Liberty Cookie.

The Middlesex County 4-H Fife and Drum Corps will herald the official reading of the declaration to the assembled patriots.

Later, on the evening of the Fourth, visitors are invited to join John and Abigail Adams (Sam Goodyear and Abigail Schulman) and Thomas Jefferson (Bill Barker) as they present Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play, the story of the turbulent friendship between two Founding Fathers.

Excerpts from their letters exchanged over 50 years are woven into a script full of rich, poignant and prophetic language, a heart-felt dialogue that communicates the spirit of the times and the pivotal events that shaped the history of America and defined its character.

The play will be presented in the theater tent at the Old House at 7 p.m. and is free and open to the public. Limited seating is provided in the theater so visitors are urged to bring their own lawn chairs. Limited street parking is also available.

Police Chief Keenan Has 'Tough Shoes To Fill'

I congratulate the new Quincy Police Chief, Paul Keenan.

Chosen by an impartial committee, he is the best of the bunch, which had very qualified candidates. And if Chief Keenan is as articulate and persuasive as his brother, City Councillor John Keenan is, then he is a great addition to the department.

But Chief Keenan has to fill the shoes of Chief Crowley and that will be very tough. Chief Crowley did step on some toes, but I believe he made the police force more accountable and more professional.

I hope new Chief Keenan works with the police union, but not be soft with it. The police department and police union work for the citizens and residents of Quincy. We pay their salaries and we want the best of their abilities.

Boom Times Seen For Building Trades

By FRANK MCCAULEY

Clarence Burgin, president of the Quincy Savings Bank, predicted that with rental of homes gradually rising to a point where they will be sufficient to bring a fair return of real estate, new construction will soon start and that the building trades will boom.

He said that "those who wish to build but who are waiting for lower building and material costs are due for almost certain disappointment. Real estate is moving toward higher rentals which will soon make it possible to again enjoy an adequate return on real estate investment."

COMMITTEE NAMED TO OBTAIN DATA

ON PROPOSED PARKING AREA

Councillor Roy A. Means appointed a committee of residents to obtain specific data on the proposed Quincy Center parking lot. The committee included Frank Remick, owner of Remick's Department Store, Hancock St., Quincy, chairman; Harry Kerr, Ward Two Councillor John W. Savage, Judge James A. Mulhall and Henry J. Hickey. The committee was authorized to contact the owners of the proposed parking area between Hancock Street and the railroad, ascertain their lowest cash price, determine the cost of improvements, estimate the number of cars it might accommodate and also to investigate the possibilities of raising revenue through the sale of filling station concessions, parking charges and the like. (Editor's note: This area would eventually become the Charles A. Ross Parking Area, named after Charles A. Ross who was the city's mayor during its construction period.)

Cpl. Durkin Death Ruled A Suicide By Army Probe

Ar dheis De go raibh a hanam.

"May her noble soul be at the right hand of God."

It was the Durkin family's final Gaelic tribute on their website to their lost sister, Ciara.

The Army ruled last week that National Guard Cpl.

Ciara Durkin, 30, died by her own hand under mysterious circumstances last fall at Bagram Air Base in Afghanistan.

Her body was found Sept. 28 with a single bullet wound in her head and her M-16 rifle near at hand. She was buried Friday in Arlington National Cemetery across the Potomac from Washington, D.C.

Family members living in Quincy, were unavailable to comment on the suicide ruling by the Army, which called its nine-month investigation into her death "very thorough and detailed."

Thomas Gorman Running For Commissioner To Eliminate County

Thomas E. Gorman, the Dedham realtor and parttime golf writer, is back for another shot at election as Norfolk County commissioner with the "sole purpose" of eliminating the job and the whole county government.

"There is no service currently provided by county government that can't be done more effectively at the state or local level," said Gorman. "There isn't a single town in Norfolk County that isn't strapped for cash."

"Eliminating this duplicative piece of bureaucracy would free up much needed money that could then be used to save the jobs of teachers, police officers and firefighters."

Gorman, a Republican, would face Democratic incumbents Francis O'Brien of Dedham and John Gillis of Quincy if the two veteran commissioners decide to seek reelection in November.

He ran for the same office in 2006 and garnered nearly 75,000 votes in a losing effort.

If elected, Gorman pledged to sell off county assets, including Presidents Golf Course in Quincy and the county administrative offices in downtown Dedham with the host communities getting dibs on them.

Oversight of the Norfolk County court system and Registry of Deeds and Probate would be shifted to the state and the sheriff would retain control of the jail but report to the State Department of Public Safety.

That sale should be worth more than $8 million to be returned to the county's cities and towns.

The Norfolk County Agricultural School would be transferred to the Blue Hills Regional School Committee. The county health insurance and pension system would be combined with the state systems.

"At one time," said Gorman, "county government played an important role in providing critical services for a number of small communities. But those days have long since passed."

"The reality is that county government, as currently constituted, is now a non-essential bureaucracy that costs our communities millions of dollars a year to operate."

Gorman noted that Norfolk just one of five counties in Massachusetts retaining that form of government. Middlesex, Worcester, Hampshire and Essex Counties were among those abolished in 1997.

"Eliminating waste in government isn't a Republican or Democratic issue," he said. "It's about protecting our tax dollars by ensuring that our government is as small and efficient as possible while still providing core services."

Gorman has been a town meeting member in Dedham for 26 years and a member of the Norfolk County Republican Club and the Dedham Republican Town Committee.

He is also a member of the Citizens for Dedham Neighborhood Alliance, the Dedham Citizens Action Group, the Neponset Valley Chamber of Commerce and the American Association of Notaries.

FOOT NOTES

FALLEN ARCHES

Flatfoot is a condition caused by fallen arches. When standing, if all parts of the foot are touching the floor, or if shoes have excessive wear toward the inside, flatfoot may be present. A rigid flatfoot occurs when the natural arch of the foot disappears either when standing or when the foot is raised. This type of flatfoot causes the most problems. Flatfoot can be inherited or acquired later in life. An injury can cause a dislocation of the talus bone, which can result in a fallen arch. This disorder can be painful, especially for people who stand much of the day. There are a variety of treatments a podiatrist can offer.

There is no reason to suffer and continue to experience discomfort from fallen arches, deformed toes, heel pain, toenail problems, and the other myriad conditions that can affect your feet. At QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, you'll receive the highest quality medical foot care coupled with the personal attention you expect and deserve. Our approach is conservative, gentle, and caring, and we welcome your call, 781-986-3668, for an appointment for family footcare. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S: Wearing high heels can be very difficult for women who have fallen arches.

Boating And Water Safety

Although somewhat out of the realm of fire prevention and fire safety, 27 miles of coastline along Quincy and our concern for public safety compel me to take this opportunity to encourage residents to boat responsibly and respect the water overall.

While I defer to the expertise of our own Harbormaster, Patrick Morrissey, and members of the Quincy Police Department Marine Units, this column affords me the opportunity to pass along some written suggestions pertaining to water and boat safety for our residents.

The statistics below, compiled by the U.S. Coast Guard from 2006 accident reports indicate some of the shortfalls of human behavior contributing to boating and loss on the water, while they are opportunities for us to examine safety concerns and learn from them.

(In 2006 there were 710 fatalities, 3,474 injuries and nearly $44 million in property damage due to boating accidents. 90% of drowning victims were not wearing life jackets. Alcohol was the leading contributing factor in approximately one-fifth of all boating fatalities. About 70% of all boating fatalities occurred on boats where the operator had not received boating safety instruction. The most reported type of accident was a collision with another vessel. Capsizing and falls overboard are the most reported types of fatal accidents and account for 59% of all boating fatalities.)

Make certain you carry appropriate personal flotation devices for all aboard. Children under the age of 12 are required to wear PFDs at all times while on deck. Coast Guard fire extinguishers are required on boats where a fire hazard can exist.

All boats are required to have three flares. An emergency radio is preferred while boaters should maintain a watch on Channel 16 and familiarize themselves with distress call procedures. Sound producing devices are required to signal a boat's position during limited visibility along with a bailing device should a vessel take on water.

Never boat while under the influence of alcohol; impaired boating is extremely hazardous as the statistics indicate. Get a vessel safety check annually and in doing so; any unsafe condition may be proactively brought to your attention and addressed. And lastly, take the time and enroll in a boating safety class. They are offered by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Massachusetts Environmental Police, to mention just two.

Education is power and in this instance, knowledge of boating, navigation and waterway safety can become the foundation for a lifetime of family boating fun. It has for me.

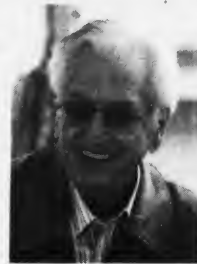

Finally, should you witness an individual struggling in the water, common safety policy suggests, reach, throw or row. Often times would be rescuers become victims themselves or part of the problem.

To avoid becoming part of the problem, extend a pole or rope to a drowning victim, throw a flotation device or other buoyant objects toward the victim or row out to the victim if a boat is available. Each situation dictates its own solution; think and respond properly while not reacting irrationally.

Have a safe and fun summer!

cities. The problems, he said, are "in every city, not just Quincy."

Community policing will be a major thrust of Keenan's leadership as he called "community policing, one of my priorities."

Keenan was sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea during a brief ceremony attended by some 130 persons who applauded as Mayor Thomas Koch described Keenan as the best choice for what Koch called, "the most important position in the city."

"We have a gentleman who has come up through the ranks and has the respect of his brother and sister officers," Koch said in commending the new chief who is, also, his brother in law.

Keenan was recommended for the $154,000 post by a five-member independent committee headed by Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

Koch described the screening process he initiated after Crowley announced early in March that he would retire June 30.

"We had a little predicament obviously with Paul being my brother in law," said Koch, describing his own personal quandary.

At the time, Keenan, Captain Alan Gillan, 48, and Captain Michael Miller, 44, were the three top candidates. Gillan had the highest score.

After being advised "to take it outside the normal process," Koch asked Bellotti to help select Crowley's successor.

"From that point on, I had no conversation on the subject," Koch said.

Bellotti directed the search for the new police chief at Koch's request and selected the four committee members who discussed issues and screened the candidates.

"We put together a great committee," Bellotti said of the screening committee consisting of Police Chiefs James Hussey of Cohasset and Richard Wells, Jr. of Milton; retired Judge Maurice Richardson, formerly presiding justice of Dedham District Court, and President Dr. Carmen Mariano of Archbishop Williams High School.

In mid-May, Captain Gillan withdrew his name from consideration, leaving only Keenan and Miller.

"We'd be doing the city a disservice" said Bellotti of any possibility of excluding Keenan because of his relationship to the mayor.

Bellotti, also, had strong praise for Miller, saying he was articulate and had considerable leadership ability and that the 44 year-old Miller is "somebody we saw that will be back."

Bellotti, also, praised the department, saying, "By every measurable conceivable assessment, this is a great police department."

During Tuesday's ceremony, Keenan received a standing ovation from the 130 plus persons in attendance. He said he was told that a police chief's happiest days are "his first and his last."

"I know it was difficult. The selection process was fair," said Keenan, noting that he and his competitor Miller are still friends.

Keenan, also, praised Crowley, citing his 38 years of police work, all but two with the Quincy Police Department.

Crowley, said Keenan, "entrusts to me the most professional police department" in the state.

Keenan brings 25 years' police experience to the department's top job. He joined the force in 1983 as a patrolman, was appointed sergeant in 1991, lieutenant in 1995, served as head of the detective bureau and was appointed captain in 2005.

Keenan served on the executive board of the superior officers union for 17 years.

A native of Quincy, Keenan and his wife, Karen, live in Hanover. They have four grown children.

Keenan graduated from North Quincy High School in 1976, earned his bachelor's degree from Southern New Hampshire University and his master's degree from Curry College.

Crowley Considering State Investigative Post

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Former Police Chief Robert Crowley said Tuesday that he's considering an investigative position at the state level now that he has retired from the top post in the Quincy Police Department.

"I'm looking to jump back into some type of investigative work," said Crowley who said he's been offered a position as an investigator for the state.

First though, Crowley said he's heading for a Cape Cod vacation before he makes any decisions.

Crowley spoke with The Sun early Tuesday as he waited to congratulate his successor, Chief Paul Keenan. Monday was Crowley's last day as the city's police chief. He announced his retirement in March.

While he waited, several dozens friends and admirers wished him well. City Clerk Joseph Shea swore in Keenan as the new chief.

"I wish Paul Keenan and Mayor Koch all the success," said Crowley

Crowley described the Quincy Police Department as "the most disciplined and well-trained in the state" during the interview. He, also, cited major strides in technology. "We're more than 100 percent better than we were."

"I'm very proud of what my investigators have done," said Crowley, citing advances in solving sexual assault cases, drug cases and "making matches with DNA."

"All our detectives are now trained in retrieving finger prints and DNA," said Crowley who also described a number of cold cases that have been solved

Crowley credited his predecessors Chief William Falco and Chief Frank Mullen with beginning the progress. In addition, he said the department was awarded $5 million in grant money through Homeland Security funds.

"I want to go quietly," said Crowley who thanked former Mayor William Phelan for appointing him and said he and a dozen friends celebrated his retirement with a dinner late last week.

City Halts Use Of Billboard 'Til New Hearing

DiAngelo of Crescent Street, a frequent picket of the station, to keep him more than 100 yards from their property.

DiAngelo was to appear to answer the restraining order in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham yesterday (Wednesday) at 9 a.m.

And City Solicitor James Timmins was still awaiting word from the State Outdoor Advertising Board whether or not it would review the matter and possibly implement revocation proceedings.

"Their counsel told me it will take a while," said Timmins.

Lawlor asked Duca for the cease and desist order but also had requested that the building inspector order the immediate removal of the billboard until additional zoning relief had been obtained.

This Duca declined, saying he would "refrain from ordering that he (Serra) remove the billboard at this time due to cost and other practical issues."

"I am unable to respond at this time to your allegations that the billboard may not be built or located in conformance with the variance decision because the petitioner has not yet submitted the as-built construction plans."

The as-built construction plans are needed before a public hearing, Duca said, "so I can determine if the construction and location of the billboard complies with the variance decision."

Special Programs At Library During July

Monday, July 7, will be a busy day at the Thomas Crane Public Library and its branches with "Bubble Mania" opening the children's summer programs and registration beginning for three others.

Casey Carle's BubbleMania: Comedy with a Drip!, a program for children 5 years old and older with their families, will be presented at 11 a.m. in the atrium of the main library, 40 Washington St.

The unique program combines high energy entertainment with artistic achievement. Casey's creations grow from intricate and imaginative bubble art forms to "trapping" people inside bubbles.

Registration will begin for Leopold Learns a Lesson, a puppet show by Maggie Puppets to be presented Friday, July 18, at 11 a.m. at the Wollaston Branch Library, 41 Beale St.

It's based on a folktale from Malawi and tells of Mama Chui, a proud leopard, and her son, Chongo, a bratty bully, who frighten smaller animals and play tricks on larger ones. They do not share in the work but eat all the rewards. Something must be done.

Registration is limited to Quincy residents ages 3 to 8.

Open House July 12 At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, recently designated a National Historic Landmark, will offer a public open house on July 12 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m. All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Call 617-376-1330 or stop by the Wollaston Branch Library to register.

Registration will begin for Rice Dough Sculpting, molding fanciful figures from glutinous rice flour, to be presented Saturday, July 19, at 10:30 a.m. in the large meeting room of the main library.

Molding flowers, birds, animals and human figures from clay and rice flour is a popular folk art in both urban and rural areas of China. Workshop leader Chuau Yu Dao will display some of her own work.

Registration is limited to Quincy residents ages 7 and older. Call 617-376-2411 or stop by the Main Library Children's Room to register.

Registration will begin for Wall Mask Program, the creation of a unique piece of wall art, to be presented Monday, July 21, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 518 Sea St.

Natural materials such as burlap, wood and leather are used to create a realistic or fantastic mask of your own design. Add a hanger and you will have a special piece of wall art.

Registration is limited to Quincy residents ages 8 and older. Call 617-376-1325 or stop by the Adams Shore Branch Library to register.

Monkey puppets will be featured during the week of July 7 in the Art-to-go program, a series of drop-in art activities that travel throughout Quincy's library system.

Drop in anytime between 3 and 4 p.m. Mondays at the Main Library, Tuesdays at Adams Shore, Wednesdays at North Quincy or Thursdays at Wollaston to make a craft.

The projects are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

The Central Mass Repertory Theatre comes to Quincy Tuesday, July 8, with a performance of "Dueling Storytellers," in which Aesop meets the Brothers Grimm and they challenge each other to a storytelling duel.

The program is the first in the six-week Summer Storyteller Series, a program for children ages 5 and over and their families that is held in the large meeting room of the Main Library.

The summer pajama storytime will highlight two favorite storytellers, Joan Goodman July 8, 15 and 22, and Diana Kane July 29 and Aug. 5 and 12. Both will present stories for kids 2 to

Wollaston Firefighters Visit Beechwood Knoll Kindergarten

Wollaston Fire Station's Ladder 2 under the leadership of Lt. Ed Columbus, recently visited the Kindergarten at Beechwood Knoll School.

Firefighter Steve Sweet donned his complete fire gear and explained how his Scott Air Tank provided air for him to breathe. F.F. Sweet demonstrated how he looks for people using his tools as he crawls on the floor. He told the boys and girls to get out of a burning building and not to hide inside.

The children loved going outside to see the fire truck. Firefighter Shawn Darcy extended the ladder and climbed to the top, while the children cheered.

Firefighters Matt Walsh, Sweet, and Darcy opened the fire truck's compartments revealing many axes, a powerful drill, and the Jaws of Life.

Kindergartener, Gerard Gannon said, "My favorite part was when you showed me the hook and ax."

Alison Cahill loved the stuffed Dalmatian that sits behind the Ladder Truck's driver and Sarina Lau and Johnny Cristiani thought that F.F. Darcy was very brave to climb the ladder.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Build a Basic Home Repair Kit

Q. I'd like to get a complete set of tools for my home. What makes up a basic tool set? — Jamie B., Valdosta, Ga.

A. Most home-improvement and hardware stores sell "starter" sets for first-time tool buyers. These include many of the basic items you'll need for minor home repairs, such as pliers, standard and Phillips-head screwdrivers, and assorted sizes and types of wrenches. However, you will need a few more things to complete your home repair kit:

- A curved claw hammer and nails — Make sure the hammer is at least 12 ounces in weight and comfortable to hold. Buy a variety of nails in different sizes and types; most stores offer nail sets.
- Adjustable wrench — A 10-inch adjustable wrench (or a plumber's wrench) is a versatile tool around the house. Make sure the worm gear operates smoothly and doesn't wobble.

- Rotary power drill — More important than a power screwdriver and probably the most convenient decorating accessory you will ever have. Make sure the drill has variable speeds, a reverse switch and can hold drill bits up to 3/8ths inch.

- Steel tape measure — The model should have a lock button to hold the extended tape in place; purchase one with at least 25 feet of tape. A 1-foot ruler and a yardstick make good companions.
- 24-inch carpenter's level — It should have two bubbles: one for measuring horizontal level, and the other for marking vertical plumb.

- Handsaw — Buy a saw marked "general purpose" to handle any variety of wood. Look for a steel blade, about 26 inches long, with a wooden handle.

- Hacksaw — This thin saw cuts metal; the blades are replaceable and come in several grades for cutting different strengths of metal.

- Pocketknife and utility knife — The pocketknife comes in handy for all sorts of tasks; the utility knife has a retractable (and replaceable) blade.

- Putty knife — Used to apply and work plaster, spackle, or — yes — putty. You should have two sizes: a 1-inch blade and a wide-blade wall scraper.

- Sandpaper, steel wool, metal file and wire brush — These come in handy for a variety of cleaning and sharpening tasks.

- Duct tape, electrical tape (yes, they're different) and three types of glue: epoxy, white (PVA) and wood glue.

- Spackling compound and wood putty — These make filling holes and gaps in walls and wood easy.

Finally, having both a stepladder and an extension ladder will allow you to tackle hard-to-reach repairs, both indoors and out.

Five Tips For The Homebuying Season

(ARA) - It's time to gear up for the busy spring and summer homebuying season.

Buyers and sellers alike have come to expect that there are greater options available during this time of year, as more people tend to be in the market for a new home. So what is behind this trend and how can you make the most of the buying and selling season?

Why Now?

The Kids.

Many homeowners, especially those with school-aged children, prefer to plan their move around the summer. By starting the homebuying process in spring, most children can finish the year at their current school and start fresh at their new school in the fall.

The IRS.

Tax refund checks start hitting mailboxes in spring. For people in the market for a new home, a tax refund is an added bonus that they can put towards the down payment.

The Weather.

For people living in northern climates, the thought of moving during winter holds little to no appeal. As the weather turns milder, the idea of making a move becomes more realistic for many.

How do I Make the Most of the Season?

If you're one of the many millions of Americans buying or selling a home this year, you'd probably prefer to make the move as smooth as possible. Start early.

"From searching and touring houses to the negotiation, home inspection and closing, buying the home that perfectly fits your needs can take a lot of time, especially if you don't know the process," says Frank Destra, managing director and senior vice president of national sales for Ditech, one of the nation's leading online mortgage lenders. "By learning and understanding the steps in buying a home, you will be ready to go through the process and complete it efficiently so you can soon begin enjoying your new home."

Here are some tips from Ditech that will help make your spring or summer move stress-free.

1) Review Your Credit Report. Whether this is your first time buying a home or your 10th time, it is always in your best interest to keep an eye on your credit report to make sure your credit history is accurately reported. Your credit history has an impact on what loans you can qualify for as well as the interest rate you will be offered. Report any errors to the credit reporting agencies right away, so that your credit report is accurate when you're ready to apply for home financing.

2) Get pre-approved.

Getting pre-approved is one of the first steps in the home buying process. By getting pre-approved, you will receive a loan commitment for up to a certain amount from your lender before you find a home, based on a review of your credit and finances. Pre-approval makes your home search more efficient by allowing you to focus only on the homes you know you can afford. It also is beneficial to have a pre-approval letter in your possession when you submit an offer on a home, so the seller knows you are serious about buying the home.

3) Know what you want.

Sitting down and figuring out what kind of home and neighborhood you would prefer in the beginning of your home search will save you a lot of time. Make a list of the features that are most important to you. Start with determining the number of bedrooms and bathrooms as well as other personal requirements you might have such as an office versus a den, one or two stories, etc. Also, think resale before you ever set foot in a home. The neighborhood, schools, parks, shopping, transportation accessibility, and proximity to key points in the city are all characteristics that will remain important when you decide to sell your home at some point in the future.

4) Review financing solutions.

There is a variety of financing options available to homebuyers, and your particular situation will play a factor in figuring out what financing solution might work best for you. An experienced loan officer will take the time to review the home financing process, define terms, and listen to your concerns to get you a loan that fits your needs. In addition, home lenders such as Ditech (www.ditech.com) offer a number of online resources, such as payment calculators, glossaries, etc. to help homebuyers better understand which financing options might be right for them.

5) Negotiate.

Once you find the home of your dreams, work with a real estate agent to negotiate the price and present your offer. Motivated sellers may be willing to reduce their price, or even pay part of the closing costs. Also, if you are looking at new construction, make sure any incentives being offered are tied to the home. For example, if a builder offers a cruise or flat-screen TV, ask for the value of the item to be discounted from the purchase price of the home. You are purchasing a home and that should be your focus — not the giveaways.

Get More Space With A Basement Remodel

(ARA) - The day you've dreaded has finally arrived: your household is bursting at the seams. You need more space, but you're not keen on the idea of entering the real estate market right now. And eco-conscious consumer that you are, you don't relish the idea of increasing your home's environmental impact with a costly addition.

You're not alone. The bigger is better mentality that defined the "moving up" trend of the past 20 years seems to be the latest casualty of the real estate downturn. As a result, many homeowners are opting to stay put and increase their living space by remodeling the homes they have. Many are doing so without the cost and eco-impact of building an addition. Instead, they're creating more living space by turning areas like basements, garages and even outdoor patios into usable square footage.

Finishing a basement is one of the most cost-effective remodeling projects, according to Remodeling Magazine's 2007 Cost vs. Value report, with homeowners seeing an average 75 percent return on investment when they sell the home in the first year. The cellar-to-living-space trend can be especially helpful for owners of older homes, many of which have large unfinished basements.

Finishing a basement is a complicated job and generally beyond the scope of most do-it-yourself homeowners. One of the quickest and easiest ways to finish your basement is with a finishing system like the Owens Corning Basement Finishing System, N₂. Wall panels with built-in thermal and acoustic insulation are professionally installed around the room. Mold and mildew resistant, the durable, dent- and stain-resistant panels easily turn a concrete basement into usable living space without the months-long disruption and mess of a traditional drywall remodel. The Basement Finishing System, N₂ allows you to convert your basement in about two weeks. Visit www.basementfinishing.com to learn more about this basement remodeling option.

Still unsure if a basement renovation will be worth your investment? Consider these additional facts:

- If you've been in your home for a while and you have equity built up, it will likely be easier to finance a remodel with a home equity line of credit than to secure a mortgage to buy a new home.

- Remodeling Magazine's 2007 Cost vs. Value report shows that for mid-range projects, additions cost an average of $200 per square foot, depending on where you live in the country and the scope of your project. By contrast, a basement remodel will cost much less than that.

- Finishing a basement can allow you to reclaim main-floor areas whose intended use went by the wayside as your living situation became more crowded. For example, you can move the treadmill out of the bedroom and into your new basement gym.

- Finally, you'll be turning under-used space into an asset that will not only enhance your enjoyment of your home, but will add dollars to the selling price when you finally do sell someday down the road - after the real estate market's inevitable recovery.

"Expanding your living space without increasing your home's overall footprint pays off in terms of homeowner satisfaction, too," Todd Hall, product manager at Owens Corning, says. "You're getting much-needed extra space, at a lower cost and less environmental impact than if you were to build a new addition. Because finishing a basement is less expensive than building an addition, there's more flexibility to customize as well."

This Season, The Outdoors Are 'In'

(ARA) - Outdoor living spaces are quickly becoming the favorite upgrade for homeowners around the country. Outdoor improvements are gaining ground on the perennial favorites - kitchen and bath renovations - because of the added value and comfort they add to a home.

The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) predicts the demand for luxurious outdoor environments will continue to rise over the next 10 years because of the low swing in the housing market. Homeowners are investing more in upgrades for their homes, rather than buying new ones.

The latest in outdoor living spaces emphasizes luxury with enhancements like hot tubs, built-in gas grills and wet bars, with pavers being the most popular building material. There are now manufactured products that are making it easier to convey stone's charm, but with a fraction of the cost and hassle of the real thing.

"The look of hardscape - non-plant landscape elements like woodwork, masonry or stone - really imparts a unique thumbprint to any outdoor setting," said Ken O'Neill, vice president of Belgard Hardscapes, a leading U.S. manufacturer of pavers and retaining wall products. "Whether it's a patio floor or an expanded outdoor bar, the look of hardscape gives an air of sophistication, serenity and communion with the natural world."

Landscape designers have long used pavers to create patio floors, retaining walls, terraces, pool decks and accent edging. New products, designed to look more like natural stone, are now inspiring the use of pavers, rather than stone, in more upscale outdoor settings.

"We're seeing designers and homeowners incorporate products like our Celtic Wall - a modern interpretation of prehistoric celt stone - throughout their outdoor living environments," said O'Neill. "These products look very natural and blend with the surrounding environment to keep outdoor living natural and organic."

Belgard products achieve the rustic and random appearance with False Joint Technology. Large blocks are made up of a group of stones that give the appearance that each stone has been hand-placed. This grouping cuts installation time and gives a more refined look.

Matching natural stone's durability and beauty, pavers do not require heavy maintenance and can reduce labor costs associated with professional installation.

The look of pavers can be used to achieve major visual impact in a large-scale setting, such as a tiered patio complete with a built-in fire pit, retaining walls and paver flooring. Another trend is to use products to create secondary outdoor living areas. In addition to a main patio that opens from the back door, you can create smaller, more intimate seating areas in secluded parts of the yard away from the house.

With so many options for pavers and retaining wall products, a backyard makeover is an easy upgrade to any home.

Home Treadmill or Clothes Rack?

Q. After I retired, my husband bought me a treadmill so I could work out at home. At first I thought this would be a great idea, allowing me to exercise whenever I wanted, but this hasn't been the case. I find myself walking past the treadmill in our bedroom and choosing to do something else with my time. I need to work out and want to use my treadmill. How can I motivate myself to not walk past it and actually use it?

A. Home exercise equipment often becomes another addition to your household furniture. Once brought home, treadmills, stationary bikes and the like frequently find another use — as a clothes rack or laundry hamper. This does not have to be the case for everyone. Finding the best place in your home for a treadmill and making a dedicated space to exercise can make using your treadmill more appealing.

The idea of wanting to exercise at home is great. Having the option to walk or run at home without having to go outside or to the gym can be a great option. But just placing the treadmill inside your home might not automatically motivate you to use it. When you see the treadmill in your room each day, it may make you feel as if you can "exercise later" or "start tomorrow," since the treadmill is not going anywhere.

First, find a place for your treadmill that will be comfortable, motivating and removed from other distractions. If you have the space, find a room other than your bedroom for the treadmill, and try to avoid placing it where you can see other "work" or projects you want to complete. Seeing what else you could or should be doing may "guilt" you into choosing to complete those projects instead of working out. Place music, a television or telephone in this room if you find yourself leaving your workout to do something else.

If you do not have a separate room for your treadmill, try to create a space where you can reach it without stepping over furniture or other household items. Position your treadmill near a window or open space to create a view that can motivate you and eliminate a feeling of "working out" in your room.

And no matter how much exercise equipment you have at home, you will have to continue to make the time to use it. Scheduling time to exercise and sticking with your schedule each day can help you get into a habit of using your treadmill.

Avoid the temptation to use your treadmill for anything other than exercising, and ask others in your home to do the same. One shirt thrown on the treadmill can trigger an avalanche of clothes and other non-exercise items. Enjoy the benefits of exercising at home by planning and remembering why the treadmill is there.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475

Helpful Tips For A Safe Summer

Keeping Kids Safe From Lyme Disease

By DR. BEN KRUSKAL
Harvard Vanguard
Medical Associates

School's out and kids are spending more time outside. Almost 20,000 cases of Lyme disease were reported in the US in 2006; 1,400 of them from Massachusetts. Peak incidence occurs in children 5-9 years old, but Lyme disease can appear in any age group.

Here is what you need to know about Lyme disease before heading outside this summer:

- The easiest way for kids to prevent tick bites is by avoiding wooded areas. If you're not sure, think like a deer: deer ticks live where deer live. If there are deer, there are probably deer ticks.
- If you venture into the woods for a hike or a camping trip, take precautions:

- Apply insect repellent with DEET. Infants and young children may use up to 30% DEET repellents. Insect repellent should not be used for children less than two months old.
- Dress kids in long sleeves and pants, and tuck pants into socks.
- After enjoying a walk in the woods, thoroughly inspect every inch of your children's skin for ticks, paying close attention to the hairline and scalp. Check every 24 hours if you are outside daily.

If your child does have a tick:

- Don't panic. Even if a tick carries the Lyme disease bacterium, in order to transmit Lyme disease it must be latched onto your skin for 36 hours.

- Remove the tick. The best way to remove a tick is to pull it off gently, leaving the tick and its mouth parts intact. Applying heat, alcohol, petroleum jelly or fingernail polish to an embedded tick is not an effective means for removal.

The following is the recommended procedure:

- Use blunt curved tweezers
- Grasp the tick as close to the skin surface as possible and pull upward with steady, even pressure
- Hold this tension for 3 to 4 minutes and the tick will back out from the skin's surface
- Do not squeeze, crush, or puncture the body of the tick because its fluids may contain bacteria

• Immediately dispose of the tick. If you have any concerns, put the tick in a plastic bag and freeze it. If you do become ill you can take the dead tick with you when you see your doctor

• Immediately wash your hands and the affected area with soap and water

• Watch the location of the tick bite. If a red ring develops around the site of the tick bite and steadily expands outward, or if similar rashes appear on the skin elsewhere, see a doctor.

• Treatment for diagnosed Lyme disease includes a round of oral antibiotics. Testing people for Lyme disease is complex — early on, the blood test will be negative; and, once you've had Lyme, the test may stay positive for years or even a lifetime.

Milton Hospital's 'Generations' Video On Local Cable Access TV

Shows like ER, House and Grey's Anatomy have brought the inside of a hospital to the mainstream media, yet most people still associate hospitals with heart monitors, not television monitors.

Milton Hospital is aiming to change this perception within the local community by producing and airing the non-profit organization's first behind-the-scenes video.

Filmed over the winter, Milton's "Generations" is a 30-minute video showcasing advancements in the hospital's emergency department, surgical services, endoscopy centers and more, which were made possible by contributions to the hospital's Generations Capital Campaign. Throughout the video, nursing staff, volunteers, physicians, administration and others offer a behind-the-scenes tour of the hospital's new facilities.

Along with hospital events such as the recent Taste of Spring fundraiser and the Community Health Day, the video serves as another touch point to the community to remind them of the importance of the hospital's work, even if they haven't recently used the hospital's services.

Hospital leaders and members of the wider community have generously contributed nearly $2.5 million to date to the Generations Capital Campaign — bringing the hospital halfway to its goal of raising $5 million.

"Our goal was to film footage of the new hospital areas and the staff in a way that showcases not only the beautiful new building and high-tech equipment, but also emphasizes the compassionate care patients receive here which sets Milton Hospital apart," said Public Relations Manager Jason Bouffard.

The video is scheduled to air on the Milton, Randolph, Canton and Quincy local cable access channels. Parts of the video will soon be available on www.miltonhospital.org.

For more information or to receive a copy of the video, contact the Milton Hospital Public Relations Department at 617-313-1557.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SMOKING INCREASES GUM-DISEASE RISK

Aside from all the other smoking-related health risks, research shows that smokers are more likely to develop gum disease and to have more serious cases than non-smokers. Bone loss, gum recession, and tartar (hardened plaque) all contribute to gum disease that are common among users of tobacco. If the excessive plaque is not removed, the gums become infected and pull away from the teeth. Researchers believe that nicotine and other substances in tobacco may weaken the body's immune response to harmful bacteria and reduce blood flow to the gums. As the bacteria in plaque attack the tissues and bone that support the teeth, the stage is set for loosened teeth and tooth loss, also more common among smokers than nonsmokers.

For severe - and early - gum problems, the real bad guy is tobacco. Not only does smoking lead to bad breath and stained, yellow teeth but recent research also shows that smoking is a leading cause of gum disease. Our goal is to help our patients reach their own unique and highest levels of oral health. All of our patients are individuals, and as such will achieve our goal in different ways and at different paces. No two patients are alike, so no two treatment programs will be the same. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Over 90 percent of patients with oral cancer either smoke or chew tobacco.

38 Competitors, 7 State Champions

Quincy Youngsters Shine At Hershey National Track, Field State Championship

The sport of Track and Field in Quincy just received a major boost with the completion of the Massachusetts Hershey National Track and Field State Championship which was held at Nashoba Valley Regional School this past weekend.

Thirty-eight Quincy youngsters earned the right to compete in this state championship following the Quincy Recreation Department's Hershey Track & Field qualifier held on June 17-18. Out of these thirty-eight city champions, seven finished the Massachusetts finals as state champions. These seven champions will now wait until the rest of the New England region (including Southeastern Canada) completes its state finals and if their times and distances hold up, these seven will be travelling to the Hershey National Track & Field Championships, which are to be held in August at Hershey Park, Pennsylvania.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch congratulated all the Quincy participants who advanced to the state championship. For over twenty-five years the Hershey Chocolate Company has brought together boys and girls from all over North America for three days of sports and enjoyment.

"This grassroots program has no equal and the youth of Quincy have benefited greatly from this participation," said Welch. "We thank Hershey for their continued sponsorship."

Geoff Hennessy, head track coach at QHS/NQHS and head of the Quincy Track Club, was also pleased with how the Hershey Track & Field state finals played out.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, June 23, 2008, Detective William O'Brien received information that a male suspect known to him had an outstanding arrest warrant.

At approximately 10:30 P.M., Detective O'Brien observed a male fitting the description of the suspect enter the 7-Eleven store located at 363 Hancock St. The detective followed the suspect in and then confirmed the suspect's identity. The suspect, upon seeing the detective, walked up to him and said hello. Detective O'Brien then asked the suspect if he had a warrant. As soon as the suspect heard this, he immediately ran for the door and attempted to flee the area.

The detective yelled, "Stop Police" and then had to grab a hold of him as he exited the store. Detective O'Brien was able to take the suspect to the ground, but as he attempted to subdue him, the suspect, on his back, extended both legs in the air and kicked the detective in the legs and torso area.

The suspect then repeatedly threw elbow strikes to the detective's shoulders and upper torso as he continued to resist being placed under arrest. The suspect struggled to get free and then escaped the detective's grasp as the suspect's shirt came off in his hands. The suspect then jumped up and ran off leaving his sneakers behind. As the suspect ran across Hancock Street, Detective O'Brien gave chase through the Sacred Heart Parish parking lot.

Detective O'Brien called Detective Ed Ryan on his cell phone, who notified patrol units in the area. The chase continued over fences and through residential yards of Hodges Street, Newbury Street, Birch Street, and out to Glover Avenue near Cavanaugh Field. The suspect was able to elude Detective O'Brien, however, Communications had dispatched numerous Patrol Officers and they responded to the area to help in the search.

A perimeter was established to contain the suspect and a K-9 Unit was dispatched to the area, with the plan to have the dog sniff the shirt and sneakers left behind at the 7-Eleven Store. Once the perimeter was set up, additional Officers began searching backyards for the suspect. Detective Ryan arrived on scene and joined up with Detective O'Brien.

They began a yard-to-yard search for the suspect, where he was last seen and found him hiding in the bushes near 98 Glover Avenue. The suspect came out peacefully and was placed under arrest for the outstanding warrant in addition to "Causing Physical Injury to a Police Officer and Resisting Arrest."

BEWARE D.A.R.E. DOOR TO DOOR SOLICITATIONS: Marilyn Manning of the Quincy Business Association informs me that at least one individual has been going to businesses in Quincy Square soliciting donations for National D.A.R.E. In return for your donation, you will receive a coupon booklet. This solicitation does not involve the Quincy Police D.A.R.E. program and is most likely telemarketers working for the national D.A.R.E. association, which means that approximately 75% to 85% of your donation goes to a private for-profit group and the rest to D.A.R.E. on the national level. Very little, if any of the donation would ever trickle down to benefit the youth of Quincy. If you are interested in donating to D.A.R.E., the best method is to send the check directly to D.A.R.E. at the Police Department of your choice. In the case of the Quincy Police Department, 100% of the donation goes to services for local children.

Some birds, like the Carolina wren, prefer small structures just a few feet up, while others, such as woodpeckers or owls, like roomier homes much higher up. Securing birdhouses, eliminating the use of harmful chemicals and leaving food, water and nesting materials out (but away from foliage where predators can hide) can encourage birds to nest - and feed on pests - nearby.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

This week, we, as a nation and as individuals, celebrate the birthday of our nation. On July 4th, let us take the time to repledge and renew our faith in our country...

Born of a revolution, this country began with a pledge: liberty and justice for all. Now... more than 200 years later... we, the American people, are still striving for these goals. It's easy to find fault... but it takes dedication and unity to bring about change, as our forefathers did. We have the freedom now to do it peacefully. Let's celebrate that freedom today and honor our nation for what's been achieved. Then, let's join together... with a renewed sense of purpose - to reach our goal.

Today, we sometimes take our rights and freedoms for granted. On this Fourth of July, let us remember that many of our forefathers died for these causes, giving us the gift of a free nation.

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

Like no time before, our city's rich history stands at center stage. With an acclaimed mini-series debuting this year on the life of Quincy's celebrated native son, John Adams, thousands of new visitors are for the first time discovering our city's heritage.

It is my pleasure to introduce The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement as a guide to all things historic about the City of Presidents. And I believe you will find it helpful as you discover Quincy's treasures – The Adams National Historic Park and the presidential homesteads; The United First Parish Church, which serves as the final resting place for John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; The Hancock Cemetery; the Adams Academy and the Quincy Historical Society; Our granite and shipbuilding heritage; and so much more.

Our wonderful history is only part of Quincy's story, and I hope you will enjoy everything our city has to offer. Our miles of scenic, restored beaches, especially a rejuvenated Wollaston Beach. Our acres of beautiful parkland, much of which were donated to Quincy by the Adams family. Our world-class golf courses and restaurants.

We are all proud of our great city, and I wholeheartedly encourage you to discover Quincy.

Sincerely,

'Like Magnet And Steel'

John And Abigail A Unique Historic Team

By TOM HENSHAW

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two

First Father And Son Presidents

Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the second president of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the sixth president of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133

Franklin St.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparking daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrison, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U. S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white

'The Old House' At Peace Field Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamsses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith. "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historical Site.

The Old House at Peace Field, 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. The last full tour of the park leaves the Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis. Due to publicity from the John Adams HBO Mini-Series, tours sell out early, especially on weekends and holidays.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

By TOM HENSHAW

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1925-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great grandfather.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the US Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace Field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onís (Continued On Page 28)

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Y Heritage Heritage

The Clark Family has served at the YMCA for generations spanning more than 100 years. Representing the family, longtime Board member and President of Vulcan Tools, Alex Clark states, "For those of us who really know the Y, we know that what's important is its people—people who share one common goal—to help others... To help single mothers, to help families in need, to help kids attend programs, to partner with the disabled. That's what inspired the three generations before me, and that's what inspires Davis and me now, and what inspires the generation after me—my son Alex, daughter Liz and their cousins, Sarah and Meghan."

Many other Y members have had a strong intergenerational involvement as well. You may recognize the following folks, and there are certainly numerous others. Father and son representations include the Briggs family, the Ashers, the DiNardos and the Hurleys. Daughters, too, joined in the tradition of serving the Y, as represented by the Papani family (daughters, Phyllis Godwin and Dorothy Palmer) and the Crofts family (daughter, Cynthia Crofts-Wisch).

We call it the heritage of the Y—families passing on cherished memories and experiences to their children. Positive character values, leadership training, developmental assets—this is what we're instilling in the young ones that enter our halls, and we continue to pass this on from generation to generation.

United First Parish

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m., mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and free for children 12 and under. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

QUINCY LODGE OF ELKS
No. 943

254 Quarry Street, Quincy

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong? Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

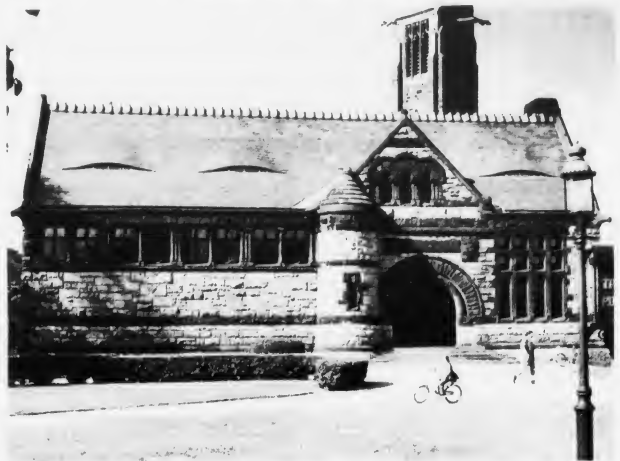

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The new wing was dedicated this year as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock.

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle, Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered an humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington green and Concord bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president, a role he filled when he signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration was signed and that created the United States and there was no other president in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 57, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 9.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Quincy Historical Society At Adams Academy Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to

1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215,

City Hall Seat Of Government For 164 Years

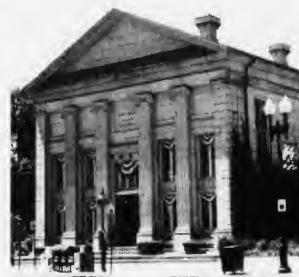

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 164 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virgian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Since 1945, we've been serving the community of Quincy.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hun-

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

PAINTING BY Albert Herter shows John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin at work on the Massachusetts Constitution in the law office of John Quincy Adams Birthplace, Franklin St., Quincy.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite in Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site last year.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

Both statues were commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and are the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy. Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct.

10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquilla" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a conversion to beige to more accurately reflect how it looked in the 1880s when another Eliza Susan Quincy, a historian, began to chronicle information pertaining to the house and family.

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The sixth president of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

FAVORITE ARMCHAIR of John Adams, second president of the United States, in which he was stricken with his final illness, is the centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House in the Adams National Historic Park.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

John Hancock Richest Man?

At the start of the Revolution, Quincy-born John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

WWII Famed Figure 'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 62 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

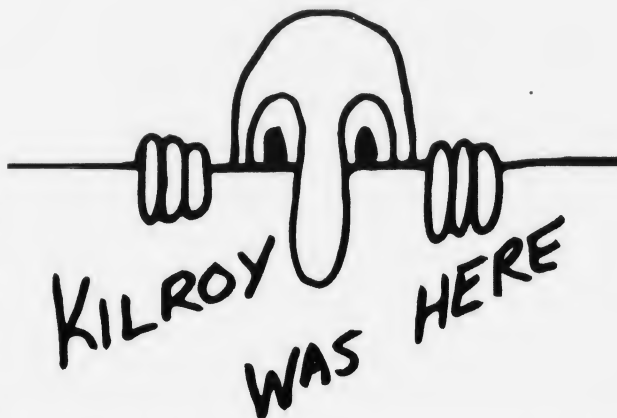

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

Quincy Adams Yacht Yard

The Fore River Shipyard was not the only shipbuilding facility in Quincy that helped to win World War II.

There was also the Quincy Adams Yacht Yard on the Town River in Germantown, which turned from building private yachts when war broke out to constructing wooden-hulled submarine chasers.

At one time, the yacht yard was turning out SC-boats at the rate of two a month to help destroy the German U-boat menace and win the Battle of the North Atlantic and preserve the supply line to Britain.

The yard won the coveted Navy "E" for excellence six times.

Thomas Watson Wins New Shipyard Bridge

The narrow wooden bridge that spanned the Fore River at its mouth proved to be an early impediment to building large ships at Thomas A. Watson's Quincy yard.

So Watson not only lobbied for a new bridge but won the contract to build it in 1902 in time for the cruiser Des Moines to get out for her sea trials.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

Hancock's Other Declaration: 'I Love You And You Alone'

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children,, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy omestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Ecentually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Now that it is a National Historic Landmark, the next step for the Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be acceptance by the National Park Service as part of the Adams National Historical Park alongside the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd. is open to the public on Saturdays, July 12, Aug. 16 and Sept. 13 from 1 to 4 p.m. Tours start every hour and half hour until 3:30 p.m. Special arrangements can be made at other times. Call the Colonial Dames at 617-742-3190 or visit www.ncsda.org/ma/quincy_homestead. Admission is free but voluntary contributions may be made.

Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, the speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secretary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83.

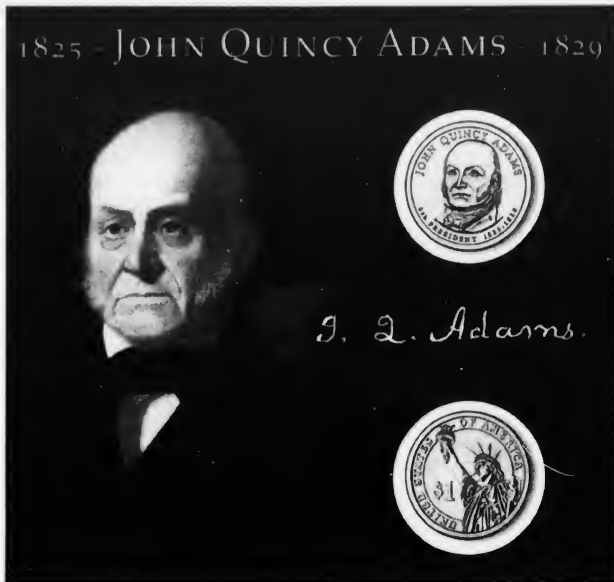

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams's like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrats and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme

SIXTH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

THE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS $1 coin, the sixth in the Presidential Coin Series, was released here May 15 at the National Park Service Visitors Center, Quincy Center. The coin honoring his father, second President John Adams, was issued last year. All the Presidents are being honored in the order in which they served.

Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

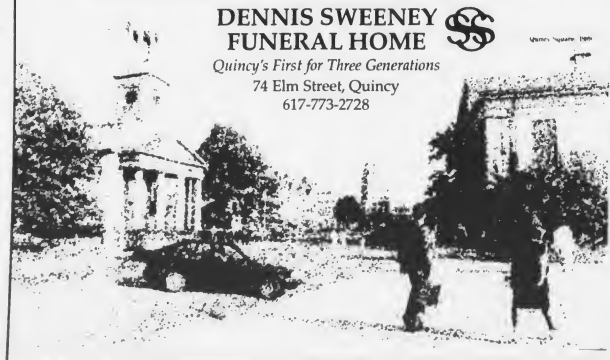

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchness of

Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the At-

Neighbors Had A Nickname Duchess Of Windsor A Former Resident

By HENRY BOSWORTH

No, the Duchess of Windsor was not a Quincy girl but she lived here for a time long before King Edward VIII gave up the British throne "for the woman I love."

She lived in Wollaston in 1917 while she was married to her first husband, a young lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum, which later became the Squantum Naval Air Station.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia maintained a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as a school to train young aviators to fly the new-fangled airplanes.

Assigned as head of the school was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield, the Baltimore belle who later, as a twice-divorced woman, became the Duchess of Windsor when she wed the king who abdicated his throne for her love.

The match touched off a crisis in English royalty. Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937. While living in Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer resided in a second floor apartment on Davis Street in Wollaston.

Legend has it that her neighbors in 1917 thought she was somewhat stuck up and snobbish.

In fact, they nicknamed her "the Duchess."

QUINCY MEDICAL Center began in 1888 as a private cottage hospital with 25 beds to treat lung ailments among the granite stonecutters who inhaled dust particles while at work. It has grown over the years to a 282-bed community teaching hospital affiliated with Boston Medical Center and the Boston University School of Medicine.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

In the summer of 1980, during a six year $175,000 reconstruction project, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

USS Quincy Took FDR To Yalta

Quincy Ships Played Major Role In WWII

By TOM HENSHAW

A Naval office named Chester Nimitz was briefly a resident of Quincy in 1913 while waiting for his submarine to be fitted at the Fore River Shipyard. He remained long enough to marry a Wollaston girl, Catherine Vance Freeman, daughter of a former city councillor.

When, shortly after the greatest American naval disaster at Pearl Harbor, Nimitz was named commander of all American naval forces in the Pacific, Catherine congratulated her husband on taking over the fleet.

"But, my dear," he replied. "The fleet's at the bottom of the sea."

That was the Quincy shipyard's cue to roll up its collective sleeves and get cracking.

Starting on Dec. 7, 1941, and for the next three years, its workers turned out 88 ships, ranging from LSTs (landing ship tanks) to CVs (aircraft carriers), an average of one every 12 1/2 days.

Quincy-built warships, at least one of them nearly 30 years old, fought in battles on the high seas all over the globe in World War II. Two of them were heavy cruisers named for the city of their birth, the USS Quincy,

The first Quincy went down Aug. 9, 1942, big guns blazing, in the Battle of Savo Island, protecting the Marines' landing on Guadalcanal. The second carried President Franklin D. Roosevelt to his Big Three meeting in February 1945, with Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin at Yalta.

The first Quincy, launched June 19, 1935, was on peace-time convoy duty between Capetown, South Africa, and the Caribbean island of Trinidad when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and virtually destroyed America's Pacific fleet.

She was dispatched to the South Pacific in the summer of 1942 and was on patrol in the channel off Guadalcanal in the early morning hours of Aug. 9 when she was attacked by a large enemy naval force and sunk after taking many direct hits. The final message from the stricken ship was one of defiance:

"We're down between them — give 'em hell!"

News of the sinking struck hard at the men and women of the Fore River Shipyard, who had just begun work on a heavy cruiser to be, called St. Paul. They petitioned Washington to change the name to Quincy and it was done.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

The second Quincy, launched June 23, 1943, was one of the scores of warships built by Bethlehem's Fore River Yard, which employed 32,000 men and women, more than the entire population of the town of Braintree at the time, in its Quincy and Hingham locations at their peak, Jan. 15, 1943.

After a brief respite to take Roosevelt to Yalta, it was back to war for Quincy, supporting carrier strikes on Okinawa and the Japanese home islands, finally entering Tokyo Bay on Sept. 1 in time to be present when the Japanese surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri, ending World War II.

The historic shipyard in Quincy Point was founded two miles upriver in Braintree in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Company by Thomas A. Watson, the same man who heard Alexander Graham Bell's first words on the first telephone — "Watson, some here, I want you."

The company was formed to make marine engines but the demand for private yachts was so strong that Watson was forced to move downriver in 1900 to Quincy where the river was wider, the channel deeper and more suited to launch ships.

As early as 1898, the yard began building ships for the U. S.

THE USS QUINCY, built in 1943, the second heavy cruiser to bear the name, had a prominent role in World War II, including shelling the Normandy coast during D-Day in 1944 and bombarding the Japanese homeland. In between, she took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Yalta Conference in 1945. The first USS Quincy was sunk in the Battle of Savo Island in 1942.

Navy, with keels laid for the destroyers Lawrence and MacDonough, a contract in hand for the cruiser Des Moines and two more pending for the battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey.

Another one of those early ships was Nevada, delivered in 1916, which fought its way through two world wars, survived Pearl Harbor and the A-Bomb test at Bikini Atoll and finally had to be sunk by a friendly torpedo.

An adjunct facility called the Victory Plant had to be built to handle the U. S. Navy's overflow during World War I and together the yards turned out 35 destroyers in 27 months, more than all the other shipyards in the country combined, including USS Reid, built in a record 41 1/2 days from keel-laying to delivery.

It was a shipyard annex in Hingham, five miles away down the coast, that workers set records in World War II by building the destroyer HMS Reynolds in 24 1/2 working days and delivering five ships to the Navy in 50 hours.

The battleship USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," delivered May 12, 1942, took part in some 35 engagements during the war, including the sinking of the might Vichy French battleship Jean Bart at Casablanca before she would be turned over to the Germans.

The aircraft carrier Wasp, launched from the Fore River ways April 4, 1939, was escorting transports of Marine reinforcements to Guadalcanal on Sept. 16, 1942, when two torpedoes from the Japanese submarine I-19 struck her in the vicinity of her gas tanks and magazines.

Another carrier, already abuilding at the Quincy yard and designated USS Oriskany, was renamed Wasp and sent off to war Nov. 24, 1943, taking part in the Battle of Leyte Gulf and assaults on the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese home islands.

The carrier Lexington, laid down as a battle cruiser but completed as the US Navy's second aircraft carrier in 1925, was at sea when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor but, less than six months later, she fell to an enemy torpedo in the Battle of the Coral Sea.

As with Wasp, a carrier already on the ways in Quincy and ready to be dubbed USS Cabot, was renamed Lexington and commissioned Feb. 17, 1943, in time to fight through the central Pacific and launch its planes into the action that became known as "the Great Marianas Turkey Shoot."

From the heights in World War II, the once busy Fore River Shipyard fell on post-war hard times, building mostly tankers and freighters with an occasional contract for a submarine, destroyer or frigate. But every now and then it was called on to construct something new and interesting.

Like the world's heaviest ship, the 106,500-ton tanker Manhattan, launched in 1962, the fastest and most powerful super-tanker, which was later converted into the world's largest ice-breaker for a trip through the Canadian Arctic with one barrel of oil to prove that oil from Alaska's North Slope could be transported by sea.

Or the fleet oilers Redstone, Vanguard and Mercury, converted into instrumentation ships in 1966 to track missiles on the firing range, but also used to follow the progress of the Apollo spacecraft as they circle the earth in orbit and raced to the moon.

Or the world's first nuclear-powered surface combat ship, the cruiser Long Beach, launched in 1961, and the world's second, the frigate Bainbridge in 1962. They were among the last ships built by Bethlehem at the shipyard before it was sold to General Dynamics.

The most notable ship construction contracts undertaken during the 13 years General Dynamics operated the shipyard were the ten 436-foot liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers with their great bulbous tanks that were built elsewhere and hoisted aboard the ship by the Goliath Crane that became a shipyard landmark.

For the record, the last ship built by General Dynamics at the 86-yard-old Quincy shipyard was the maritime prepositioning ship Sgt. William R. Button. That was in 1986. Then General Dynamics shut the door.

Dunkin' Donuts Got Quincy Start

Ruth Gordon, Howard Johnson, Lee Remick, Billy DeWolfe Born Here

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown

Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmari but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose Jimenez.'

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the United States, where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate an act of Congress.

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a Quincy company of 300 men put out in whaleboats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whaleboats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whaleboats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy.

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

Hancock's Father A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Adams Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Captain Who?

The original settlement of Quincy was made as a trading post in 1625 by an all male company led by a Captain Wollaston, who was so obscure that his first name has been lost to history.

A few years ago, the historian Hobart Holly, after exhaustive research, concluded that his first name was probably Richard — but, still, nobody knows for sure.

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

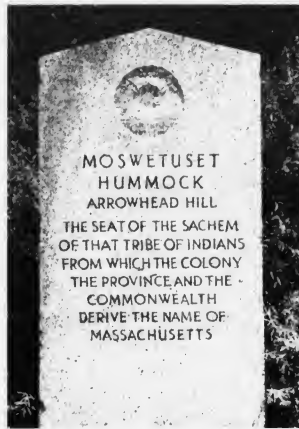

It was only a tiny spot of land no bigger than a football field on the Quincy shore but it gave its name to the state of Massachusetts.

As the historian Neal recalled it in his History of New England, published a hundred years after the Pilgrims landed in 1721...

"The Sachem or Sagamore who governed the Indians in this part of the country when the English first came hither, had his seat on a small hill, or hummock, containing perhaps an acre and a half, about two leagues to the southward of Boston, which hill or hummock lies in the shape of an Indians' arrow-head, which arrow-heads are called in their language Mos, or Mons, with the O nasal, and hill in their language is Wetuset; hence, this great Sachem's seat was called Moswetuset, which signifies a hill in the shape of an arrow-head, and his subjects, the Moswetuset Indians, from whence with small variation of the word, the Province received the name Massachusetts."

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, once a great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

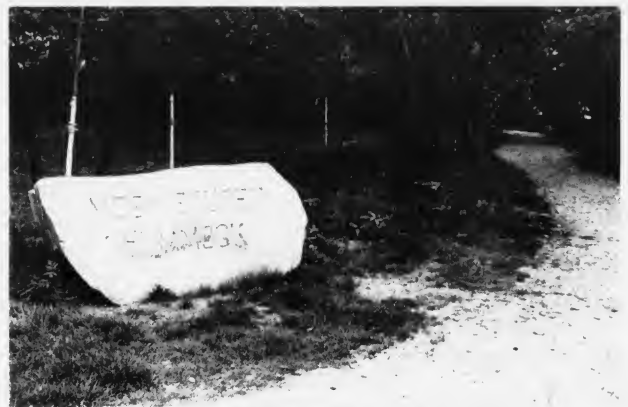

(Robert Bosworth Photo)

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on a hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset

Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Pilgrims from Plymouth that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantom) whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The land included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public.

The Granite Railway First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just grew."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries and in one of them, Jonathan Swingle's quarry, men dug for granite at a The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped;

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. There were as many as 4,000 working in the Quincy quarries during the "Stone Age" of American architecture.

other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

lantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born. Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

Today, Squantum's pioneer flying days of Harriet Quimby, Amelia Earhart, Commander John J. Shea and Captain Harry Sartoris live on in the Aviation History Information Center at the Beechwood Community Life Center where the old Dennison Airport once held sway.

USS SALEM

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

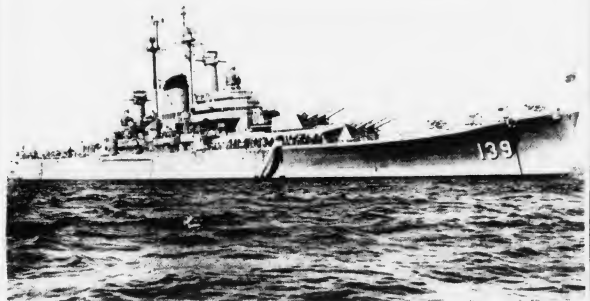

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Hours of escorted and self-guided tours include: Summer - Daily June through September, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Winter - Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Kilroy's mini-golf, June through September, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission: $5 per person. Spirits of Quincy's Past – Hancock Cemetery, next to City Hall. Adams National Historical Park will host a candlelight tour of one of New England's oldest burying grounds, the Hancock Cemetery.

Three centuries of historic figures briefly come back to life to share stories and little known facts about Quincy's past. If you dare to enter the old graveyard on Hancock Street next to Quincy City Hall between 7:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M. on the appointed evening, you will witness the return of members of some of Quincy's first families including the Adamses, Quincys, and Hancockes. Morticia Addams, your ghoulish hostess for the evening, will treat you to a “spirited” good time as she prepares you for a “ghost encounter of the historic kind.”

After haunting the cemetery, all souls will be summoned to the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center for refreshments of spirits and angel's or devil's food cake following the program. All activities will take place at the Hancock Cemetery and Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center located at 1250 Hancock Street in Quincy, Massachusetts on Friday, October 29, 2004. The program will take place between 7:00 P.M. and 9:00 P.M. and is free of charge. For information contact Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175.

Koch Stands Firm

Park Board Reaffirms Track At Faxon Field

The Park and Recreation Board has reaffirmed its support of building a new track facility at Faxon Field as a design firm begins to develop a formal plan to be presented to the School Committee in late August.

Gale Associates, which has constructed numerous track facilities around the country, is now developing feasibility plans for a track facility at the site next to the new Quincy High School, and will have a report that addresses design, parking, drainage and other issues associated with the new track.

"The board reaffirmed its desire to see a new track built swiftly and economically at Faxon Field," said Executive Director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Kristen Powers. "The School Committee has a number of questions, and we expect Gale will have the answers when they complete their work in time for the first school committee meeting in the fall."

The Weymouth-based firm, which designed the Reggie Lewis Track and Field Center at Northeastern University, will conduct the design study for a fraction of the price quoted by the firm that developed preliminary designs for a track at Pageant Field, the Mayor's office said. Those designs were dropped from consideration after a decision by the Park and Recreation Board supported by Mayor Thomas Koch and a group of residents wishing to protect the area as open space.

The cost difference in design work for the Faxon Field site means that no additional money will be needed to design the track facility, officials said.

"With the support of the community and the Park and Recreation Board, Pageant Field will be preserved for future generations, and we are keeping with our commitment to build the best track at the best location in the city," said Koch, who has pressed to preserve Pageant Field for several years. "We know that once Gale has the opportunity to answer the school committee's questions, we will be on our way to a great new track facility for Quincy."

Koch added, "But I will be very clear: I made a promise to many, many people that I would under no circumstances support a track at Pageant Field. And I have every intention of keeping that promise."

Troop Donations Rousing Success

The troop donation drive that accompanied the 99th annual Squantum Fourth of July Parade was a rousing success.

"We collected enough donations to fill 63 care packages and enough monetary donations to cover shipping costs," said Jim Doherty, commander of the Robert I. Nickerson American Legion Post.

The drive, sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers, had members of the post collecting donations throughout the parade and packing the supplies for the troops.

The collections included a wide variety of items such as postage money, flashlights, tooth brushes, batteries, powdered drink mixes, razors, mouthwash, deodorant, international phone cards and gloves.

"I was overwhelmed by the generosity of local residents and businesses and I am grateful for their outpouring of support," said Morrissey. "We couldn't have held this event without their help."

More than 25 packages have been shipped so far and more will be sent out in the next week to troops stationed in other lands, particularly those in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Any money left over from the drive will be used to purchase phone cards for the troops.

"It was an honor to march in the July Fourth Parade with the veterans, as well as two of Squantum's active military personnel, Timothy Kennedy and Cheryl Potter, both of whom have recently returned home on leave from Iraq," said Ayers.

"It was a pleasure to spend the holiday with them and I wish them the best of luck on their return to Iraq."

Anyone who knows of local troops serving overseas should contact Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494 or Ayers' office at 617-722-2230 with his or her address so a package may be sent to them.

Morrissey said he hopes to be able to conduct a similar drive for troop donations around Veteran's Day in time to send more packages for the holiday season.

City Republicans Collecting Letters For Injured Troops

The Republican City Committee is joining forces with CarePacks of Weymouth to collect letters for injured American servicemen.

The letters will be delivered by CarePacks along with 10 Nintendo Wii video game consoles and 10 37-inch LCD TVs to the physical therapy departments at Walter Reed Army Medical Center and Bethesda Naval Hospital next month.

"Many of these injured servicemen have lost limbs or been otherwise gravely injured while serving in Afghanistan and Iraq," said Jennifer Logue, chairman of the committee.

"This is a great opportunity for local residents to say 'Thank You' and to show our troops that we appreciate their service and their sacrifice in the name of freedom."

Letters and cards are welcome from both adults and children and may be addressed simply to "US Soldier" or "US Serviceman," and dropped off in a special collection box at City Hall until July 31.

The letters will be delivered to CarePacks, a non-profit agency, for packaging and delivery to the injured servicemen in mid-August.

A Thank You from John "Okie" O'Connell's Family

We would like to thank all those who joined our family in our endeavor to raise money for the John "Okie" O'Connell Scholarship Fund. Without the support of our family and friends in the Quincy community as well as John's family and friends near and far, this would not have been possible.

The proceeds will help provide scholarships for local students including those with special needs. In addition to providing the scholarships, the fund committee is also pursuing the development of an antiviolence education video to present to youth programs, schools and colleges to teach young people about "the damage one punch can do."

A special thank you to Will O'Connell and Ginny Barry from the Waterclub, Dorothy Collins, Margaret and Maureen Collins, Mary "Mer" Duffy, Pat and Neal Gavin, Maureen Duggan, Maureen Bowes, Deb Pizzi, Meghan McLean, Katie Marchard, and Kristen Connors for all their help in making this a very special day, as well as the many volunteers.

We would also like to thank our sponsors who helped in defraying the cost of John's Golf Tournament at President's Golf Course which took place prior to the fundraiser at the Waterclub, as well as the many businesses/organizations who donated gifts for the fundraiser.

Thank you again for your love and support.

Presidential Wreath Ceremonies to Honor John Quincy Adams Friday

President John Quincy Adams, the nation's sixth president, will be remembered Friday as local and national officials mark the 241st anniversary of his birth.

Friday has been officially designated as "John Quincy Adams Day" in Quincy.

The Navy's William Bullard, commander of the USS Constitution, affectionately known as 'Old Ironsides', and other dignitaries, will speak at the wreath-laying ceremonies beginning at noon in United First Parish Church, Quincy Center.

Commander Bullard will bring a wreath and greetings from President George Bush during an observance honoring Adams in the church, also known as the Church of the Presidents, and at the Adams' crypt on the lower level of the church.

Prior to the church services, a Community Breakfast will be held from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. at Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St.

The wreath-laying observance of Adams' birthday began 44 years ago on orders from President Lyndon B. Johnson. Johnson directed that past presidents be honored each year on their birthdays. This year, the orders were relayed to Commander Bullard.

This is an especially important year as the Adams' historical sites in Quincy have witnessed a surge in tourism due largely to an HBO televised special on the Adams family early this spring.

The John Quincy Adams dollar coin was released to the public for the first time during a special event held this spring at Presidents' Plaza, Quincy Center. The John Adams coin was issued last year.

Arthur Ducharme, director of the Historic Interpretive Program at United First Parish Church, said the increase in tourists from all over the country and the world has been "astronomical" and "constant."

Senator Michael Morrissey and Mayor Thomas Koch will bring proclamations from the Commonwealth and the City of Quincy to the Community Breakfast and the wreath laying.

Ducharme will, also, speak at the church ceremony as will Peter Boylston Adams, a direct descendant of the Adams family; Caroline Keinath, Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historic Park; Mary Claffey, Assistant Editor of the Adams Papers for the Massachusetts Historical Society in Boston; and Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Executive Director of the Quincy Historical Society.

Music for the church service will be provided by soloist Miss Dorothy Adams and Kathleen Adams, both descendants of the Adams family, as well as the United States Navy Brass Ensemble, Newport, RI, and the Quincy Choral Society.

'Response Has Been Very Positive'

New Trash Collections See Rise In Recyclables

Capital Waste Services' first week on the job of collecting trash and recyclables in Quincy has produced a dramatic increase in the amount of recyclables.

The Department of Public Works reported that the newly contracted service that started last week collected an average of 19 tons of recyclables per day, a four-ton increase over the previous daily average.

"Increasing recycling was a major issue when we started negotiating a new trash contract and we hope to see results like these continue as we go forward," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

"Increased recycling accomplishes two very important goals. It saves the taxpayers money and it protects the environment."

The new contract includes financial incentives for the city to recycle more as two companies will be paying the city for recyclables.

DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville said the first week of the new contract went well with an occasional hiccup in service causing only minor problems.

"The response has been very positive," he said. "Most importantly, the complaints we did receive about missed pickups and other issues were almost always addressed immediately."

"This is the kind of customer service we expected from Capital when we signed the contract and that is the kind of service we will continue to expect."

Prendeville said the DPW received some complaints about missed pickups and there was a missed communication about the July yard waste collection, but considering Capital is new to the job, the week went "as well as we could've imagined."

The new contract figures to save Quincy some $150,000, thanks to a three-city deal entered into by the mayors of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth to collaborate on trash services.

Prendeville said residents should continue to see improvements in trash collection.

He reminded homeowners about the new "single-stream recycling" program that no longer requires residents to separate recyclables for collection.

Under the program, residents can use their existing recycling bins or place a "single-stream recycling" sticker on any trash container.

At Last: The Anchor!

A Navy ship anchor will soon adorn the Fore River Bridge rotary as a fitting tribute to Quincy's famed shipbuilding history.

Thanks to Mike Condon, executive director of the USS Salem Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

And, to Mayor Thomas Koch who knows something appropriate when he sees it.

This particular anchor couldn't be more appropriate. It belonged to the heavy cruiser USS Des Moines, sister ship of the Salem. And, like the Salem was built here at the Fore River shipyard.

Condon, who has custody of the anchor, offered it free to the city a year ago for placement at the rotary. But nothing came of it. Maybe it got lost in the heat of that year's mayoral battle.

He offered it again just a few days ago. And an appreciative Koch gladly accepted it.

Koch's office is working with Condon on the mechanics involved. Such as a base for the estimated 22,500 pound anchor to rest on. And getting it to the rotary.

The latter, shouldn't be too difficult.

The anchor is just some 1,000 feet or so from the rotary-on the dock beside the USS Salem.

The Des Moines portside anchor was obtained by Condon from the Navy in August 2006 as an artifact for the museum. And with the thought it might someday be placed at the rotary.

Condon actually rescued the anchor from the scrap pile.

The Navy gave it to him with its blessing before the Des Moines was moved from the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard to Brownsville, Tex. to be scrapped.

With the help of the Navy and many others, Condon got the anchor to Quincy-everyone volunteering their part.

Including, quite importantly, the J.A. Mira Transportation firm of Wilmington who delivered the anchor from Philadelphia to Quincy.

"All of these people who did what they did to get the anchor to Quincy did it as an act of love for the Navy and Quincy's know-how shipbuilding reputation," said Condon.

The anchor, placed beside the 50-foot flagpole with yardarm erected in January of last year will make a most fitting tribute to those who worked at the shipyard turning out the great fighting ships that played a major role in winning World War II.

Such ships as the aircraft carriers USS Lexington and USS Wasp (two), the battleship USS Massachusetts, the cruisers USS Quincy (two), the USS Boston and those destroyers and LSTs.

After the war, Fore River built the cruiser USS Long Beach, the first nuclear powered surface ship and the second, the frigate USS Bainbridge. And then Apollo ships that helped guide man to the moon and those palace-like luxury liners.

Patrick Hosting Reception For Ayers Tonight

Gov. Deval Patrick will host a reception for state Rep. Bruce Ayers tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn Gazebo, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

"I would like to take this opportunity to invite people to meet the Governor," said

Ayers. "It is an honor to have him host this event."

Ayers has been working with Patrick on a number of issues, both statewide and local including the Crown Colony off-ramp and the Wollaston Beach renovations.

THIS IS AN idea of what the anchor would look like at the base of the flagpole at the Fore River rotary. The anchor was superimposed on the photo taken by Robert Noble.

shipyard, should remember with special pride.

The flagpole replaced the Granite Ball that had been at the rotary for some 68 years disappointing Quincy Point residents-especially some of the newer ones who thought the ball had always been there. That it was "Quincy Point's ball."

But it's now back outside City Hall, its original site. It was a gift from the Quincy Granite Manufacture's Association June 25, 1925 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy. The granite leaders stipulated that it be placed outside City Hall where it could be seen by all.

It was moved, however in 1937 when the Fore River rotary was dedicated Wigglesworth Circle in honor of Congressman Richard Wigglesworth.

The ball, which became less visible at the rotary with shrub growth as the years went by, was moved back to City Hall in June, 2006 by Mayor William Phelan with the approval of most residents and especially descendants of the granite workers.

The Granite Ball is back where it belongs and the crown jewel in beautiful Constitution Common.

The anchor of the Quincy built USS Des Moines will be going where it belongs.

One tribute to our famed shipbuilding history. The other to our famed granite.

Both most fitting.

THIS POSTCARD view of the statue of Scottish poet Robert Burns was published in the late 1920's. It is shown here in its original location on a traffic island at the intersection of School and Franklin Streets in South Quincy. The statue was a gift to the city from the Burns Memorial Association and was dedicated in November 1925. Quincy's Clan MacGregor, a 1000-member Scottish fraternal organization, hosted the dedication ceremony followed by an elaborate banquet and concert at their Franklin Street hall seen in the background. The featured speaker was Colonel Walter Scott, the famous Scottish-American philanthropist and humanitarian for whom the Clan's hall was named. The statue was designed by Quincy sculptor Gerald Horrigan and was carved from Westerly, R.I. granite by his father John, a famous Quincy statue cutter. The base consists of three pieces of Quincy granite from the Granite Railway Quarry. In 1974, fears of damage from the Red Line bridge construction on School Street resulted in the statue being moved to its present location at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Granite Street. The School Street traffic island still exists covered with shrubs and flowers and nicely maintained by a private Quincy family. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Pageant Field Most Logical Location For New Track

Parents for Pageant started in April 2008 as a small group of people expressing concern for the moves the Mayor is making in regard to the track at Pageant Field, but it has had a domino effect throughout the community.

It has been a collaboration of two driving forces. One being the neighborhood issues and the other being the track community issue. The neighborhood issues include noise, parking, lighting, traffic and overall comfort of living having a track facility within a residential area.

Flooding is also a real concern and a recognized issue now in the Faxon Field area without the track where the Mayor wants it. What people may not understand is, with the exception of flooding, these issues apply to any residential neighborhood in which the city would propose to place the track. Just ask the people who live next to Cavanaugh Field how much they have enjoyed the track activities in their neighborhood over the last four years. The track community's issue is that they have no track and have had no track since Veterans' Stadium was renovated. That was four long years ago.

Recently the kids and the parents in the track community finally saw a real and ready plan to implement the building of a regulation track but the newly elected official differs in opinion from the prior one. It isn't fair for the children to be paying for adults' difference in opinion.

When working on the petition in different communities throughout the city, we have been applauded for taking action and are greatly pleased by the amount of support we are receiving. To put it into numbers, about 95% of the Quincy residents we ask happily sign the petition. Some of the remaining 5% are those that are not yet knowledgeable on the track.

To the people unaware and those that want more information we refer them to our web site, <http://www.buildquincytrack.org>.

Our web site contains information on the track, the SMMA studies, government official contact information, CDM flooding reports on the Faxon Field area, School Committee meeting videos, FAQs, articles that question the legality of the recent rescind vote taken by the Park and Recreation board to remove the track from Pageant Field and more.

We find one thing very interesting. The city discharged SMMA from a $1.3 million contract to build the track at Pageant Field shortly after the May 7, 2008 School Committee meeting in which Mr. Timmins, City Solicitor, called SMMA "un-credible." Why is Mayor Koch so concerned over the $49,000 lost to SMMA for interest on late payments? He was recently quoted as saying, "I just see the raw number of (roughly) $49,000 and I think of how many desks and chairs we could have bought with that money-so I find it very disturbing," yet he is willing to allow the $106,000 already spent on planning and designing Pageant to be lost. It doesn't make sense.

We feel that Pageant Field is the most logical, timely and cost effective location for the new track. We implore everyone to be more informed about the track by visiting our web site. If you have any questions you can post one from the site and we will reply as quickly as possible.

Committee Proposes $48,500 Salary For Mayor

By FRANK McCAULEY

A citizen study committee has recommended that the salary of the mayor of Quincy should be boosted from $25,000 a year to $48,500 in line with the salaries of similar sized cities.

The committee also recommended that the pay of part-time city councillors be raised from $3,000 to $4,500 per year.

The last time either the mayor or city council received a pay raise was in 1973 when the mayor's salary went from $10,000 to $25,000 and the councillors' from $1,500 to $3,000.

McGahan, suffers from a chronic hearing problem and applies to worker's compensation. To his chagrin, he is stationed at a police caravan near the crime scene.

Living on the periphery of the investigation, McGahan crosses paths with the various people affected by the tragedies and uncovers an unraveling nightmare of guilt and suspicion.

Wollaston Garden Club Tour Enchants 60 Members

Sixty members of the Wollaston Garden Club recently enjoyed an afternoon of garden tours and progressive dining at members' private gardens.

First on the tour was Ruth Dravinkas' garden where visitors enjoyed appetizers and delighted in Dravinkas' manicured, traditional hillside garden accented by bleeding hearts and pink dianthus which adorned the driveway edge.

Lois Roche's hidden seaside garden, where the salad course was scheduled, was next on the list. Visitors followed the stone path through a wooden archway accented by a blooming red hibiscus to the seaside garden framed by Quincy Bay.

Once in the garden, viewers enjoyed the sights of pine, spruce and holly and the scents and colors of lavender, Cosmos and Veronica. Roch presented each visitor with a Cosmos seedling.

The main course was served at Leah Shea's home where the theme was terracotta, peach and yellow in a spectacular display. Shea's fenced-in shade garden features blooming plants in pots and boxes and subtle garden ornaments dispersed throughout.

Dessert and coffee was served in Susan Sweetser's classic formal garden which offers a full view of Boston's skyline and where the stone steps are accented by

THE DPW COLUMN

Your Trash Ain't Nothin' But Cash

The curbside collection of trash in the city of Quincy is the envy of many surrounding communities. While many towns do not offer curbside collection, other smaller towns like Milton charge residents per-bag for every bag of trash they collect curbside. Some towns have a separate fee for curbside service and another fee to pick-up appliances. Many do not collect televisions and monitors. The City of Quincy provides all these services and more but, contrary to popular belief, this service is not free.

The City of Quincy pays $3.5 million to provide curbside collection of trash, recycling and yardwaste. The trash is brought to the transfer station in Braintree, the recyclables are sold to Recycle America in Avon and the yardwaste is processed into compost at the DPW. The curbside collection cost increases yearly due to adjustments to the consumer price index like the cost of fuel and other economic variables.

In addition to the collection cost, the City also pays nearly $3 million a year for our solid waste to be trucked to Rochester where it is burned as fuel to power steam turbines that generate electricity. We pay for this disposal on a per-ton basis which increases annually. The number of households contributing to this tonnage also increases constantly. So, whether it's a paper wrapper or a sofa, we all pay for this service either in taxes or in other areas of public service.

Every time you are about to throw something in the trash, think. Can this be recycled? Is it paper untreated for wet strength, or plastic, glass or metal free of food contamination? Many times the answer is yes. Look at that piece of refuse and know that you hold in your hand the power to make a difference in the quality of your life and the lives of others.

If you have any questions regarding waste and recycling, roadways, water and sewer services or if you would like to share some of your ideas regarding these services please call 617-376-1953 or e-mail recyclequincy@ci.quincy.ma.us, and remember, the more we recycle, the more we save.

Missing Tony Tufo Hailed As 'Beloved' Court Officer

By TOM HENSHAW

A short while ago, a prisoner awaiting trial tried to escape from the Quincy District Courthouse with court officer Anthony "Tony" Tufo in close pursuit.

"Tony went head first through a glass window and the prisoner was recaptured in the parking lot," said First Justice Mark S. Coven.

"Tony went to Quincy Medical Center to be sutured. He returned to work that afternoon. I had to tell him to go home. He was like that.

"He was one of the hardest working employees of the court. He did all that was required of a court officer and more.

"He was one of the most generous people. He'd do anything asked of him on a personal or professional basis."

The one word most frequently heard around Quincy District Court to describe Tony Tufo is "beloved."

That's why the courthouse is still in mourning for the veteran court officer who is presumed to have drowned on the eve of the Fourth of July when he fell from a boat into Boston Harbor.

"He was the greatest guy," said Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin. "I'd say he was the most beloved individual in Quincy Court.

"He was so kind, so giving. He'd come to work every day with a smile for everybody.

"He was our handyman. He could fix anything, broken fans, chairs, desks.

"If you had a problem at home, he'd volunteer to fix it. He was always doing things for people.

"I had an empty feeling when I heard he was missing."

Tufo, an athletic 60 who lived at 161 Summit Ave., Wollaston, fell off the 34-foot pleasure craft Nina Maria into the Harbor sometime after 6 p.m. Thursday somewhere between Deer Island Light and the Winthrop Yacht Club.

A 40-hour search by the Coast Guard that covered some 50 square miles failed to turn up anything but his shoes, which were located between Deer Island Light and Snake Island off the Winthrop shore inside the Deer Island causeway.

At one time an 87-foot Coast Guard cutter, a Jayhawk helicopter, water craft from the State Police and Quincy and Winthrop Departments and dive teams from the State Police and Boston Fire Department were searching the Harbor between Winthrop and Logan Airport.

Tufo was not wearing a life jacket at the time but his relative good health and fitness kept hopes of his survival alive longer than usual. He ran in this year's Boston Marathon and finished the 26-mile, 385-yard grind in four hours and 23 minutes.

The Coast Guard suspended its part in the search at 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Tufo, a court officer since 1992, was the son-in-law of former Attorney General and Lieutenant Governor Frank Bellotti and the brother-in-law of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

He and his wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Bellotti, an attorney, have three sons, Anthony Jr., Christopher and Daniel.

The Nina Maria is owned by another brother-in-law, Joseph Flaherty, a lawyer who is married to the former Nina Bellotti, sister of Mary Elizabeth.

Tobin said the last words Tufo said to him when he left the courthouse were: "I'll be at your house Friday morning."

"My grandson, Matthew, who is home from the Marines, used to hang around with Christopher Tufo," Tobin explained. "They were classmates at North Quincy High. They were planning something for the Fourth of July holiday."

Christian Fellowship Offers Kids Week Of Fun, Faith

Squantum Christian Fellowship is registering kids for Power Lab, a week of fun, games, crafts and spiritual adventures to be held July 21 to 25 from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., daily at the Squantum School Media Center, 50 Huckins Ave.

The youngsters will work on a special project called Operation Kid-to-Kid to send uniquely designed soccer balls to children in Afghanistan after first learning about the Afghan kids, signing the balls and praying for them.

"When I was putting my 5-year-old son to bed and telling him how powerful Jesus is, he got a bit frightened," said Pastor Mike Fehan. "I quickly reminded him that Jesus is not only powerful but that he loves boys and girls just like him.

"This is what our Power Lab Vacation Bible School is all about and we at Squantum Christian Fellowship have set aside a whole week this summer to introduce kids to an all-powerful God who loves kids."

Each day concludes at a Faith Fusion Finale where the Spotlight Drama features the kids themselves on the big screen.

Gaining Hands-On Experience

Husband, Wife Salvation Army Cadets Interning At Quincy Temple Corps

By LAURA GRIFFIN
Couples like Helen and Kevin Johnson of Cambridge, both 28, offer a glimpse into the future as the Salvation Army meets the challenges of the 21st century.

The Johnsons, cadets interning at the Quincy Temple Corps for the summer, are halfway to their first major commission as lieutenants in the Army.

This summer, the Johnsons are gaining hands-on experience working as interns at Quincy Temple Corps under Majors Douglas and Linda Jones, co-commanders of the Quincy Corps. Helen, also, knew the Jones' children while growing up.

"I was so happy we were coming here," Helen said of their assignment, which has been something of a reunion. Major Jones has a special place in the couple's lives, as he was their pre-nuptial marriage counselor.

This summer, Kevin is working with "Teen Time," a youth group that meets from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Friday nights at the Corps headquarters on Baxter Street.

"Teen Time" offers teenagers a friendly place off the streets where they can hang out, mingle, play basketball, dodgeball, kickball and the like.

"There's room for more," said Kevin who's been out recruiting young people by passing out fliers at local basketball courts and sporting events.

At the same time, Helen has been working with the Corps' "Tuesday Afternoon" group aimed at elementary school children in Grades 1 through 6. The Tuesday afternoon project offers youngsters recreation, crafts and a bible study.

That program, also, has plenty of room for more children and Helen said she has enjoyed going "door to door" in the neighborhood telling residents about the children's program, which is expected to continue through the school year.

The summer internship in Quincy is something of a respite for the couple from the two-year intensive officers' training, which Helen describes as "pretty rigorous."

They both completed their first year at the Army's School for Officers in Suffern, NY where they are studying everything from business administration to counseling. The curriculum includes education courses, preaching, writing sermons, cultural diversity and missiology, a study of the different cultures, and religions.

Helen said it's important "to bring the gospel to people and not take away their culture."

Once they complete the two-year program, they will have an accredited Associate's degree and be commissioned lieutenants. After two years, they can expect to earn the rank of captain and, after 15 years, major.

In many ways, the young couple reflects all the traditions of the Salvation Army founded in 1852. Both enjoy meeting people on the street, knocking on doors, serving children and the homeless and, most of all, preaching the word of Christ.

"I grew up in the Army," said Helen. "I think there's no better, more effective organization than the Salvation Army."

Helen described the Salvation Army's enduring mission to nurture the spiritual life while caring for the physical and mental well being of each person.

However, both Johnsons expect to bring their own vision and their own talents to the legacy of the past and serve and impact the Army with their unique talents.

"Helen has an arts background; I have a technology background," Kevin said, describing the tools the couple will bring to their religious vocations.

Already, Kevin has used his computer background to help design software for the Salvation Army in Cambridge, while working with a team from Harvard and M.I.T.

Helen, also, see changes in the Army's development of women leadership skills. Women have long been active in important Salvation Army roles, but, in recent decades, were not often recognized in top positions, she said.

Now, women are taking more visible roles in leadership. Helen cited the recent appointment of Lt. Col. Barbara Hunter as commander of the Southern New England Division. Hunter is the East's first woman divisional commander.

Whatever the future brings, the Johnsons will approach their assignments as a team and go where they are sent.

"You move around, just like in the Army," Helen said, recalling her childhood in different cities in the United States and Virgin Islands.

An Oregon native, Kevin chose the Salvation Army as a 13-year old after observing his stepfather practicing. Kevin served with the United States Army from 1998 to 2003 and has studied at Willamette University in Salem, Oregon and Bentley College, Waltham.

Kevin hopes to continue to use his computer and administrative skills.

Helen is a Suffolk University graduate with a master's degree from Lesley University, Cambridge. She has taught art at the pre-school and elementary school level for five years and expects to bring her love of art to her vocation.

"I always wanted to go into art therapy," said Helen, describing her belief that art can be used for healing and teaching and aiding in worship.

Art can reach people in a different way, according to Helen who describes the impact one painting can have on the viewer. She believes art will be a major aid in her vocation helping people understand the word of Christ.

In the years ahead, the couple expects to raise their forefingers to the heavens and follow the Army's slogan, "Salute and Go," where they are sent.

Prisoner Escapes Jail, Winds Up In Hospital

David O'Donnell, 24, a Quincy man awaiting trial for armed robbery, has learned the hard way that it doesn't pay to escape the clutches of the law — not from a moving van, anyway.

O'Donnell was being transported from Quincy to the Dedham jail Monday when he discovered that the secure emergency exit in the van roof could be opened from inside the vehicle.

So he did and climbed out on the roof of the 10 by 24-foot van as it was passing by Archbishop Williams High School on Washington Street in Braintree.

If you have ever tried to hang onto the roof of a moving vehicle you know what happened next. He fell off, landing on his head in the street while the van continued on its way.

"We knew something happened within three or four minutes," said Peter Perroncello, superintendent of operations for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, July 5, at approximately 2:50 p.m., Quincy Police Officers were dispatched to the Citizens Bank inside the Stop N' Shop store located at 495 Southern Artery for a bank robbery which just occurred.

Officer Matt Tobin arrived on scene and was assisted by Detective William Monteith in questioning employees. Taken as evidence was a note on a bank slip that read, "Act normal - fill the bag quick and no one will get hurt". While numerous Officers checked the area, Detective Monteith interviewed the bank teller, who stated that the suspect walked up to his window with the note and plastic shopping bags. The suspect said, "Fill up the bag - quickly." The Teller asked the suspect what he meant and the suspect reiterated, "Fill up the bag - quickly."

LT. DAN MINTON

The teller then realized that the suspect was trying to rob the bank, so he put a stack of $20 bills from his drawer into the suspect's white plastic bags. As the teller was doing this, he also hit the silent alarm. The suspect then hurriedly walked away toward the exit at the north side of the building.

The teller said he noticed a tattoo on the suspect's back of his neck. Another teller next to the first teller saw the suspect's note fall to the floor, so she picked it up and recognized that a robbery was taking place. She also heard the suspect order the teller to fill up the bags, so she too hit the alarm and called "911." She also noted that the suspect had a tattoo on his neck.

Stop N' Shop Loss Prevention Officer Matthew Leuchte told the Officers that he observed the suspect come into the store and recognized him from an incident last year where the suspect was caught stealing from Stop N' Shop. During that incident, the suspect was issued a "trespass notice" and advised to stay out of the store. Upon seeing the suspect enter, Mr. Leuchte immediately began following him with the Stop N' Shop camera surveillance system.

The cameras showed the suspect enter the building at 2:50 p.m. wearing a black tank top, blue pants with white stripes down the side, and no hat. The video showed the suspect walk directly to the Citizens Bank area, stop to scan the lobby, and then walk over to a table where the banking deposit slips are located. He wrote on a bank deposit slip, then went over to one of the checkout areas and took two white store bags. The suspect then returned to wait in line at the bank.

The video also showed the tattoo on the suspect's neck and another tattoo on the right side of his neck. The video then shows the teller filling up the bags and the suspect then walking out. The video shows the suspect running across the lot, turning left on McGrath Highway with the bags of money partially concealed under his shirt. Not only did the video from Stop N' Shop confirm the account of the tellers, a second set of cameras in Citizen's Bank provided additional evidence. A bank audit showed that there was a shortage of $1,940.

Meanwhile, the description of the suspect and the area where he was last seen running was given out. Officer Tobin had Security Officer Leuchte join him in his cruiser as they checked the area. Officer James Dentrement searched the area of Yellow Cab on McGrath Highway and saw an employee come out of the building. When asked if he saw anyone matching the description given, the employee said that there was someone in the bathroom, pointing to the door.

Officer Dentrement immediately notified Communications that he had located a possible suspect and within seconds, Sergeant Sean Duggan, Officers' Stephen DesRoche, Kevin DiMattio and James Cassidy arrived. The officers approached the bathroom and could hear water running from the faucet. With their radios turned down, Officer Dentrement told the suspect in the bathroom that he needed to use the bathroom. The suspect then opened the door and fit the clothing and physical description, including tattoos, of the person who had just robbed the Citizen's Bank. The suspect was immediately handcuffed and read his Miranda warnings, but he stated that he did not wish to speak.

Officer Tobin brought Security Officer Leuchte over to identify the suspect and immediately upon seeing the suspect, said he was "100% positive" it was the same person. After being placed under arrest for armed robbery, a search of his wallet showed $1,940 in US Currency, all twenty-dollar bills, with $500 in a light brown band. Officer Cassidy transported the suspect, a 24-year-old Quincy resident to the station for booking. Inside the bathroom, Sergeant Duggan found two white plastic Stop N' Shop bags located in the barrel of the bathroom.

Quincy Medical Center Receives $10,000 For Pediatric ER, Local Teen Awarded $1,000 Scholarship Auxiliary Awards Scholarship, Presents Gift To Hospital, Elects Officers

The Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Auxiliary recently held its annual luncheon and election of officers at the Neighborhood Club in Quincy.

During the luncheon, Auxiliary President Mary Sullivan presented a check for $10,000 to QMC President and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, toward construction of the hospital's pediatric emergency room.

"It gives me great joy to know that we have the support of people like you who help us in so many ways and who help to make QMC the customer friendly and personable hospital it is," Gibbons said. "You should know that every dollar you raise goes directly to patient care, and your donation today will benefit the children of Quincy and the surrounding communities who come to our Emergency Department by providing them with a separate area that is tailored specifically for them."

The Auxiliary also presented a $1,000 scholarship to Michael Powers of Quincy. Powers recently graduated from Boston College High School, where he was an honor student, and will attend Boston University in the fall.

"My experience volunteering at QMC has sparked my interest in pursuing a future in the medical field," said Powers, who served as a Junior Volunteer at the hospital. He attended the luncheon with his mother, Deborah Powers.

Before concluding the meeting, the Auxiliary installed its new officers (all from Quincy unless noted) for 2008-2009:

Mary Sullivan, president (Braintree); Genevieve White, first vice president; Jennie Petrio, second vice president; Ilda DiMascio, recording secretary; Lorraine Edwards, corresponding secretary (Pembroke); Yolanda Romanelli, treasurer, and Directors Caroline Bornstein, Anne Donovan, and Arlene Cassidy.

The QMC Auxiliary is a group of men and women who raise money for the hospital through a variety of fundraising events and ventures. Many of the Auxiliary members also volunteer at the hospital.

During the past year, the Auxiliary donated $14,399 to QMC. Since its inception in 1953, it has raised well over $1 million to support the medical center. For more information about becoming a member of the QMC Auxiliary, call 617-376-5368.

Foreclosures Bring Out Vultures

While the number of mortgage foreclosures soars, so do the incidents of foreclosure scams. Here are some of the signs that a mortgage foreclosure scam is in the works:

Bailout specialists promise to "rescue" the homeowner from foreclosure in exchange for fees that can run into the hundreds or thousands of dollars. Little work is actually done except for a few phone calls.

In the rescue scam, the homeowner is told to sign certain loan documents that will take care of the impending foreclosure — except that the documents actually sign the title over to the scammer. The homeowner is left with no house and is still responsible for the mortgage.

In a variation of the rescue scam, the homeowner is told that the scammer will make the payments and take care of the foreclosure, and the homeowner can rent the house until he's able to buy it back later. The end result is that the homeowner is evicted when the scammer collects the rent, defaults on the payments or sells the house to someone else and pockets the profits.

If you can't make your mortgage payments and fear losing your house, talk to your lender. The earlier you do this, the better your chances that arrangements can be made to avoid foreclosure.

Here are some more tips:

- Never sign any documents that have blanks, no matter how you're pressured. Don't sign any documents before you read (and understand) every word.

- Don't respond to calls or mail about foreclosure rescue. There are companies that scour courthouse records to collect names of homeowners in trouble.

- Never pay a fee for mortgage foreclosure assistance or services. Call a HUD certified counselor, but even then be careful. See the Web site at www.hud.gov.

- Don't agree to send payments to anyone but your lender.

- Never make any verbal agreements or trust anything that is not in writing.

- Know your state laws. Length of time of the foreclosure process varies.

- Contact an attorney who specializes in consumer law.

Most important of all, don't sell your house at a low price just to get rid of it, especially if the buyer is offering to "take it off your hands" and save you from foreclosure. Enlist the help of a real-estate agent to help you determine the true value of your home.

When Dr. Eric Cohen was looking for an office building for an investment, he turned to Jack Conway & Co. and its commercial division.

Cohen is the latest employee from Quincy Medical Center to benefit from the partnership between the hospital and Conway.

Cohen and Conway Commercial Vice President Paul Durgin worked to put together a deal on a multi-tenanted office building on Granite Avenue in East Milton. The building is currently fully leased with 10 medical and professional offices, and was sold to Cohens Granite Milton Realty LLC from K&C Realty Trust.

"It was not an easy deal and thanks to Paul there were no problems," said Cohen, Cohen said he was pleased to be a part of the program, because he knows it will help Quincy Medical Center, which is vital to the area.

"This hospital provides excellent health care to the greater Quincy and South Shore area," said Cohen. "And the people here are superb, from the doctors to the nurses to the support staff, they always go out of their way to help."

Tips For Insuring A Home In A Buyer's Market

(ARA) - Slow home sales mean more vacant houses are sitting on the market - a situation that can lead to increased insurance risks. In March 2008, approximately 4 million homes were for sale in the U.S., and in the past year the median existing home price has dropped almost 8 percent, reports the National Association of Realtors. That could mean a longer wait to sell your house.

If you move to a new home before yours sells, the property is at greater risk of damage and you may not have adequate insurance coverage. Cindy Woodford and Jon Farris of QBE Regional Insurance offer advice to ensure owners of vacant properties are protected.

"An empty house can become a teen hangout or a place for a homeless person to sleep," says Woodford. "Uninvited guests can lead to damages like theft, fire or vandalism. Mother Nature can also be a foe, leading to flooding or fire. We encourage owners to take a few precautions and protect their investment before they move out."

Double-check Your Policy.

The U.S. Census Bureau reports a record 18.6 million properties sat vacant during the first quarter of 2008. On average vacant homes take longer to sell. Individual homeowners' policies will vary, but standard homeowners insurance programs only insure a vacant home for 60 days, which might leave you short on coverage.

"Talk to your independent agent about your policy and what else is available. Their job is to help make sure you're covered," says Farris.

Some specialty insurance companies will insure vacant homes for longer time periods. Coverage may also be available through some state-run insurance plans, such as Fair Access to Insurance Requirements.

There are many precautions to protect your home from risks, notes Woodford. Before you go consider doing the following:

- Clean out gutters, trim trees and check for potential leaks.
- Install and test smoke alarms that will alert a central service center if smoke is detected.
- Install a home security system. Make sure you have adequate locks on windows and doors, and they're secured when leaving.
- Make the home look lived in. Have an acquaintance bring in mail. Shovel sidewalks and driveways or cut the grass. Ask a neighbor to park their car in the driveway. Install timers on lights and leave window coverings and some furniture in the home.
- Winterize your home.

Rotting Window Sill Isn't Easy Fix

Q. I try to maintain my home as well as I can by myself. However, there are some things that even the most determined body cannot do. The sills on my outside back windows, which face south, are rotting away. I hope that something can be done simply, but whenever someone gives me advice, they seem to think all the windows and frames need to be replaced. Any advice would be appreciated and considered. I'm a senior citizen on a limited budget.

—Bonnie M., via e-mail

A. Normally, when a wooden window frame begins to show significant rotting, it's best to replace the entire frame — you get a well-fitted, better-insulated window that will last for decades. But it isn't cheap, and the project is beyond many do-it-yourselfers.

It's a tough call, without being able to look at your exterior sills, as to whether you can make temporary repairs to them and hold off on replacing the entire window unit. Take a close look at them: Is the rotting only affecting a portion of the exterior wood? Does the rot go through to the interior side? Does the wood crumble away with light pressure?

A rotting window frame can result in a lot of other costs — water damage from moisture seeping through the compromised wood, and high energy bills from poor insulation.

If the rot is limited, you can buy a little time — a year or two, max — by filling the cracked surfaces with a two-part wood filler. This product is mixed together and then applied to the damaged area with a putty knife. After it dries, it can be lightly sanded and painted.

Once that's done, though, start pricing out replacements. The temporary seal will give you a little extra time for this. With parts and labor, you may only be able to replace one frame at a time, but the replacement will be well worth it in the long run.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Real Estate Activity Declines 16% In County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reports real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending June 30 declined 16 percent compared to a year ago.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from April through June, 2008, stood at $1.38 billion. This represents a 16% decline from the comparable period last year.

The total number of 3868 deeds recorded during the period was down 46% from the previous year's April to June quarter.

"This sharp decline in the number of deeds recorded when viewed in light of the much more modest decline in total value of real estate conveyed indicates the continuing relative strength of the higher end real estate market," O'Donnell said.

The average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) fell to $560,251, a 33% decrease from the same quarter in 2007.

"This decline," the register noted, "is most likely the result of fewer higher end commercial transactions. However, this average price was only 4.5% less than the average price from the previous quarter, January to March 2008, and only 2% less than the average for the April to June quarter of 2006, which could be an indication that price declines have leveled off."

O'Donnell said mortgage recording activity declined 23% on a year to year basis with 8606 new mortgages being recorded in the quarter.

"Norfolk County was not immune to tightened credit from lenders responding to market conditions," he said. "Total mortgage value for the quarter stood at just over $7.2 billion, only 2/3 of the value reported in the same quarter of 2007. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity."

Stressed Out Over Exercise

Q. I enjoy working out to get away from the day-to-day stresses of my job and family. My usual routine is to do group exercise classes three days a week and walk with a neighborhood friend three days a week. My stress has dropped a little, but not as much as I thought it would. Also, I thought I might have lost a little weight just by exercising. What am I doing wrong?

A. Exercise can have many benefits, including reducing stress and losing weight. If you're not seeing the results you desire, we need to identify what other factors might be playing a role.

A regular exercise routine is a great place to start to help facilitate weight loss while encouraging stress relief. Stress can slow our metabolism, affect hormone levels and cause us to store body fat around our abdominal region.

While exercising, take the time to relax and focus on your workout. Bringing your stress into your workout can keep you from truly using your workout time to relieve stress. If talking about what might be causing stress in your life only causes you to become more stressed, then avoid taking those feelings into your workout.

Find an exercise routine that you enjoy and where you can practice breathing and relaxation techniques. Stretching, mind/body classes such as Qigong, Tai Chi or yoga, and workouts that help focus your thoughts on not becoming overwhelmed can not only provide a great workout, but techniques you can use in everyday life.

Remember to modify your workouts, as you may need to try different things at different times of your life. You might enjoy group classes this month, but become bored with them next month. Change up your routine and try something new and exciting. This also can provide something to look forward to if the rest of your life is hectic and stressful.

Exercise and nutrition must go hand in hand. Some people use food to help deal with stress, so to keep this from becoming a factor, monitor your nutritional habits. A healthy, balanced nutritional plan combined with regular exercise can help facilitate weight loss. However, you can exercise and not begin to see the physical results because of your nutritional habits.

A regular routine of exercise and proper nutrition is a great start to reducing stress and keeping control of your weight. Keep trying each day to find a combination of exercise and nutrition that works for you — and avoid becoming frustrated. Exercise and nutrition should not add more stress to your life.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Precautions Include Hand-Washing, Water, Healthy Diet And Rest

Why The Immune System Can Never Go On Vacation

The immune system can never go vacation, summer or winter.

A travel bug can ruin a trip that has been planned for months. Independent Traveler magazine says travelers "may be more than 100 times as likely to catch a cold on a plane as in normal daily rounds." There are several reasons travelers' immune systems need to do double-duty during vacations and summer trips.

Aircraft cabins, as well as trains, buses, terminals and stations are incubation zones for flu and cold germs. A 2006 study at Children's Hospital in Boston, Mass. confirmed that, like us, a microbe's favored mode of travel is airplanes. Likewise, trains, buses, taxis and rental cars can be breeding grounds for traveling germs — not to mention airport waiting areas, restaurants and public rest rooms.

This summer, many airlines are downsizing flight schedules to save money.

This will insure crowded aircraft cabins, translating into more contact among travelers and more opportunities for germ contamination.

Travel means additional stress as well. Travelers experience pressure from getting ready to go, preparing homes, businesses and pets to be cared for in their absence and making it to gates and connections on time. Changes in schedules, diet and sleep patterns are also factors that combine to set travelers up for colds or flu.

"Travelers should take the same precautions they would during the regular cold and flu season — hand washing, drinking lots of water, a healthy diet and as much rest as possible," says Dr. Elin Ritchie of Taos, N.M.

Travelers who want to take their immune defense a step further might consider additional measures to insure healthy travel. One defensive option is a probiotic-based immune product called Del-

Immune (www.delimmune.com). "I take this prior to, during and after travel," says Ritchie. She also recommends the product to her patients planning vacations for a wide range of potential immune issues.

Terri Hendrick, a Boulder, Colo. interior designer, used the product to stay well on a trip to Vietnam in 2007.

"I started taking Del-Immune V 2 days before I left. Usually when I travel I have digestive problems — especially in Asia. This was the first time in all my travels I did not have some kind of digestive disorders. The other five people on the trip quickly started trading a cold. When I gave the product to my fellow travelers, they recovered quickly," she says.

Another protective measure is the Nozin nasal sanitizer (www.nozin.com), a nasal swab moistened with a pre-measured homeopathic solution. According to the product Web site, laboratory tests showed the product was effective in killing at least 99 percent of bacterial pathogens and 99 percent of viruses, including rhinovirus type-14, often responsible for the common cold.

A product reviewer on the ThreeKidCircus.com blog site writes, "Before I entered the airport on the morning of my flight, I swabbed. Before my return flight, I swabbed again. I returned home with no sickness. Even though my seatmate on the flight home was hacking and sneezing, and despite the coughing and nose blowing that was going on all over the plane, I was untainted. And despite coming home to a sick family, I've been swabbing once a day and I'm still not sick."

"We take our immune systems for granted, but it is the immune system that is the front-line defense against foreign invaders. It doesn't take much to protect ourselves and ensure healthy travel," Ritchie says.

Natural Remedies for Headache Pain

(ARA) - Are you finding yourself under a lot of stress these days? Whether it's being brought on by tension at work, at home, or by concerns of how the higher gas prices will affect you, there's a lot on your plate right now.

The last thing you want to deal with is a pounding headache, but unfortunately, tension headaches and stress go hand-in-hand. While there may be little you can do to eliminate the stressors in your life, there are a variety of things you can do to help reduce the severity and frequency of headaches.

Here are some good steps to consider:

Take a long, hard look at your lifestyle

Behaviors that promote general good health may also help prevent headaches. If you aren't physically active, get up and get moving.

Regular aerobic exercise, such as walking, swimming or biking can help reduce the frequency and severity of tension headaches. If you don't think you can get motivated enough on your own, sign up for a gym membership and use it often. You should also get into the habit of eating regular, healthy meals and getting plenty of rest.

Make sure you're drinking enough water

What many people don't realize is that dehydration is one of the most frequent causes of headaches, in both adults and children. If you're not drinking the recommended 40 ounces of water per 100 pounds of body weight every day, give it a try. You'll likely be delighted with the results.

Find ways to relax
If you're doing your best to live a healthy lifestyle and drink adequate amounts of water, but are still getting frequent headaches, the problem may be that your body is still having a tough time figuring out how to relax. There are a variety of relaxation techniques you can try including deep breathing and biofeedback. Many people also find that massaging their head, neck and shoulders with their fingertips, and pressing a cold compress onto their forehead helps.

"There's just something magical about the combination of pressure, massage and coolness that makes a world of difference for me," says Aurelia Koby, president of IMAK products, a California company that specializes in natural pain relief products. Koby often suffers from headaches, and used to rely on a washcloth wrapped with ice to get relief. "Now there's something even better," she says.

The IMAK Pillow/Pain Relief Mask was designed by medical doctor to provide relief from migraines, headaches, sinus pain and eyestrain. All you have to do is put it on your face and secure it in place with the attached elastic strap, then sit back and relax.

The secret to the pillow's success is in its filling — ergoBeads create a gentle massaging effect around the eyes. While it can be used at room temperature and still feel cool, many people prefer to keep it in the freezer so when they put it on, they get the benefit of an extra "cooling" relief and a massage at the same time. The Eye Pillow also blocks out light, which makes it even more soothing for pain and tension relief.

You can find the IMAK Eye Pillow/Pain Relief Mask at many online and retail drug stores. For a store locator, log on to www.imakproducts.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

EDENTULISM ACCELERATES AGING

People now have one more very good reason to preserve their teeth into old age. According to a recent study, having few (or no) natural teeth at age 70 may provide an early indication of disability onset and mortality. The study, which followed non-disabled men and women over a 20-year period, found that seniors with few (or no) teeth at age 70 were significantly more likely to report mobility problems (such as difficulty walking and climbing stairs) than seniors with 20 (or more) natural teeth. Edentulism (toothlessness) at age 70 was also linked with greater mortality over the study's 20-year period. The connection between tooth loss in old age and declining health is a complex but valid link.

Risk factors for edentulism include socioeconomic status, income, education level, and smoking. Part of our commitment to serve our patients includes providing information that helps them to make more informed decisions about their oral health needs. We believe every patient should always be fully in charge of their own dental health, and that we are there to help them. We stress the importance of preventive dental care for the entire family. Your total emotional and physical well-being is as important to us as your teeth. We will do what is best for you, and we will not compromise. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth loss in old age may lead to declining health due to limited dietary choices and reduced nutritional intake.

Quincy, Morrisette Heading Toward Playoffs

By SEAN BRENNAN

The two American Legion baseball teams in Quincy are, at the moment, heading in opposite directions, but by the middle of next week, both could end up in the same place; playing in the District 6 East American Legion playoffs.

Quincy Legion (8-4 overall record) and Morrisette Legion (5-6-1) have positioned themselves among the top-5 in the District 6 East standings through 12 games, but recently it has been Quincy that has been hot and Morrisette that has not.

Quincy ended its week with a scintillating 7-6 walk off win over Jamaica Plain to move into a tie for second place with Braintree Post 86. That win followed a through 10-4 thrashing of Morrisette on Saturday evening at Adams Field.

Against Jamaica Plain, Quincy loaded the bases in the seventh inning and played the winning run when Jay Lewis beat out a throw to first, allowing the winning run to score.

Starting pitcher Keith Morreale went the distance, pitching seven strong innings and allowing only four earned runs.

Tom Conley (3-for-4, 2 RBIs, run) and Mike LeBel (two walks, two runs) paced the Quincy offense.

James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby July 11-12

The 6th annual James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby will be held July 11-12 at the Quincy Yacht Club (QYC) to benefit the scholarship fund in memory of Jim Kenney III.

This scholarship fund benefits Quincy residents at both high schools and at the college level. These scholarships are awarded to students who are or will be pursuing degrees in maritime

LEGIION BASEBALL

Their win over JP came the day after Quincy took it to Morrisette at Adams Field. Quincy jumped out to an early 5-0 lead, and after Morrisette closed the score to 5-4 with a four-run fourth inning, Quincy exploded for five additional runs in the sixth inning to put the game away.

Up 5-4 entering the sixth inning, Quincy's Kevin Bossart got the five-run frame started with a walk. Teddy Walsh followed with a sacrifice bunt back to mound and the throw to second to force out Bossart sailed into centerfield; a steal by Walsh of second base put runners on second and third with no outs. Pinch hitter Steve Kussman doubled home both Bossart and Walsh for a 7-4 lead.

The run-scoring rally continued with Mike Jay reaching base via a walk, putting runners at second and first. Mike Leone's double scored Kussman with the third run of the inning and Mike LeBel drove in Jay with a sacrifice fly for the fourth run of the sixth.

John Alexander followed LeBel with a single and steal of second base and Billy Kiley drove in Alexander with a two-out single for the tenth and final run.

Down 5-0 after three innings, Morrisette's Trevor Brown and Glen Misho opened the fourth inning with walks, putting runners on first and second with no outs. After two quick outs threatened to stop a scoring rally for Morrisette, Alex Tragellis came through with a two-run, two-out double scoring both Brown and Misho, cutting the deficit to 5-2.

Morrisette would score twice more on a Ricky Salvucci double and after four innings of play it was a one run game at 5-4. But that would be as close as Morrisette would get as Quincy went on to score those five runs in the sixth inning.

Morrisette, which started the season with a 4-1-1 record after six games, has dropped five of six. The team ended last week with a 1-3 record including a 10-5 win over West Roxbury and back-to-back losses to first-place Weymouth, 8-2 and 9-2.

Quincy Post started their season with a 3-3 record and since that point have gone 5-1, including the back-to-back victories over JP and Morrisette last week.

Quincy and Morrisette are scheduled to play again today (July 9) at Adams Field at 8 p.m. or environmental studies. The four recipients for 2008 have already been selected and will be recognized at a cookout on July 12.

The fishing derby will begin on Friday, July 11 at the QYC's Maritime Center. A Skippers Meeting will start at 6 p.m. and fishing lines will be in the water by 7 p.m.

All fish caught must be brought in and weighed before the derby concludes at 12 noon on Saturday, July 12.

After the derby is finished, there will be a cookout at 12 Noon and the four scholarships will be presented. There will also be raffle prizes and other awards given out at that time.

For more information on the James P. Kenney III Fishing Derby, contact Dan Kenney at 617-786-9067.

Lipton Cup Regatta July 19-20

The 22nd annual Lipton Cup Regatta is scheduled for July 19-20 at the Squantum Yacht Club, Wollaston Beach.

Festivities will begin with registration on Friday, July 18 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The Lipton Cup Regatta will host hundreds of sailors and spectators from Canada to Florida. Classes of sailboats expected to race are N10, Optimist, Laser, Laser Radial and Club 420, 29ER, Hustler, Thunderbird, 210 and Vanguard 15.

A multi-hull event is scheduled to be run from the Bravoracing line by the New England Multihull Association.

The Lipton Cup Trophy, originally given to the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association in 1930 by tea magnate Sir Thomas J. Lipton, was first awarded to Herbert Allbright, a victorious skipper of the Indian Class sailboat. After more than fifty-five years of inactivity, the Lipton Cup Trophy, nearly three feet tall in silver splendor, is once more the object of grand sailboat racing competition in the waters of Massachusetts.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Squantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach or by calling Don McGilvary at 617-328-5730, or at www.squantumyc.org.

Wollaston Blue Tops Milton

The Wollaston Blue, of the Senior Babe Ruth league, continued its successful season with a huge win last week over perennial powerhouse Milton, 5-3.

Starting pitcher Tony Salaris and relief pitchers Chris Doyle and Kevin Magoon combined to allow just five hits and the three runs. Salaris finished the game as the winning pitcher.

The Wollaston Blue defense played exceptional behind the Salaris, Doyle and Magoon; finishing the game with no errors and a number of defensive gems. The keystone combination of Rob Yee and Tom Pepe turned two double plays to quell scoring rallies.

Doyle was the offensive star of the game. He finished with three hits and two RBIs. Other offensive contributors were Dave Griffin (two runs) and Edwin Nunez, Chris Timmins and Yee, all who finished the game with a RBI.

Earlier last week, Wollaston Blue defeated Cedar Grove by forfeit and its scheduled game against the Wollaston Black was postponed due to rain.

This week, Wollaston Blue is scheduled to play games against Braintree, All-Dorchester Sports League (ADSL) and Wollaston Black.

(Senior Babe Ruth results should be in the Quincy Sun office by 5 p.m. Monday)

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"You can preach a better sermon with your life than with your lips."

This seems, does it not to be a self-evident truth and a very good principle to follow day by day in even the most trying situations of life. The people who really influence their contemporaries are those who gain the respect of their fellowmen by the way they live their lives day by day

"Come on, let's live! It is so easy to die; so easy to give up; so easy to listen for the last note of Gabriel's trumpet.

Come on, let's live! It is so easy to become discouraged, so easy to forget to wind life's clock, so easy to forget to shut the door on trouble; so easy to fail.

Come on, let's live! Let's be brave, and face today. It is our day. Let's meet trouble and conquer it. Let's use smiles to chase away the frowns.

Come on, let's live. Let's fill our hearts with the truth of purpose. Let's have hope for the future. Let's be honest and straightforward.

Come on, let's live! Let's look up and not down. Let's face the storms of doubt with determination to win. Let's have faith in God and self. Let's pray.

Come on, let's live!" ... Everett Wentworth Hill

President's Wreath Honors His 241st Birthday

John Quincy Adams Out From Father's Shadow

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The nation can best honor President John Quincy Adams by taking better care of the widows and survivors of the soldiers, and sailors lost in our wars and conflicts, according to Peter Boylston Adams.

Today's Armed Forces casualties, Adams said, are in "places mostly covered with sand," rather than the jungles of the Vietnam, but the heartache, damages, and needs are similar.

"Our nation needs to do far more for the immediate (victims) of conflicts, all of our women left behind," said Adams, a veteran of the Vietnam Conflict and a direct descendant of the nation's second and sixth presidents.

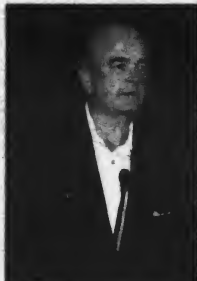

Adams spoke at the noonday wreath-laying ceremony honoring his forbear in United First Parish Unitarian Church, Quincy Center, July 11, the 241st anniversary of John Quincy Adams' birthday. A memorial wreath is sent each year by the president to honor past presidents.

Adams cited Captain Stephen Carr, his own classmate from Norwich University who was lost in Vietnam, and asked that Carr's widow, Mrs. Barbara Smith, stand and be recognized by the congregation as one of the thousands of widows of that war.

DIRECT ADAMS DESCENDENT Peter Boylston Adams, Treasurer of the Adams Memorial Foundation, addresses the congregation.

Among the more than 125 persons in the pews honoring Adams on his birthday were Commander William A. Bullard, 3rd, along with some 40 officers and sailors in dress whites from the USS Constitution, also known as "Old Ironsides."

Despite School Committee Opposition

Koch To Pursue Faxon Field As New Track Site

By TOM HENSHAW

Faxon Field is dead as the site of a new 400-meter track facility.

Or is it?

"This kills Faxon Field for good," said David McCarthy, vice chairman of the School Committee, after he and his colleagues had voted 4-2-1 to take Faxon Field off the table.

"We are fully committed to acting swiftly with a track plan for Faxon Field," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch, the committee chairman, despite the fact that the School Board holds title to the property.

Thus, the immovable object may at last have confronted the irresistible force in the four-year fight to replace the old 352-yard track that was lost when Veterans Stadium was refurbished.

Voting to take Faxon Field out of the running were McCarthy, Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey and Elaine Dwyer. Voting for Faxon Field were Koch and Nick Puleo. Jo-Ann Bragg voted present.

"The location bothered me," said McCarthy. "Route 3A and Coddington Street are not back country roads. That is the busiest intersection on the South Shore. I don't think we can safely put upwards of 300 kids at that intersection."

"Now it will have to go back to the mayor to look for another location."

But the mayor apparently has no intention of giving up on Faxon Field.

"It's hard to imagine why the School Committee would take a vote without as much as seeing a plan but we will continue to move forward," he said in a statement issued by his spokesman, Christopher Walker.

"We are fully committed to acting swiftly with a track plan for Faxon Field. It is my intention to have the engineers do their work and, as soon as we have the report and the layouts ready, we will hold a public hearing for all interested parties."

An alternate location frequently mentioned is Pageant Field in Merrymount Park, which was approved by the Park Board under former Mayor William Phelan, but rescinded 7-1 by a new Board under Koch, with McCarthy, who is also on the Park Board, dissenting.

"I guess it depends on who is in charge," said

Deputy Joseph Barron Named Acting Chief

Selection Process Begins For New Fire Chief

Mayor Thomas Koch Tuesday started the selection process of a new Fire Chief by requesting the Civil Service list of candidates and by naming an acting chief to immediately replace retiring Chief Timothy Pettinelli.

Koch named Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Barron, the most senior deputy willing to accept the acting chief's job, to manage the department while the mayor leads the selection process for the next permanent chief. Deputy Chief George McGunagle, Deputy Chief Gary Symth and Captain Paul Griffith are the top scorers on the last Civil Service exam, taken in 2006.

"This will be a thorough, fair and swift process guided by Civil Service rules, and I am looking forward to naming a chief whose priorities are the safety of our city and the safety of the firefighters under his command," Koch said.

Koch said he will personally conduct interviews of the candidates, consult with members of his leadership team, and speak with rank-and-file firefighters and fire safety authorities from outside the department before appointing a new chief.

The appointment of Barron as Acting Chief follows long-standing city protocol that calls for the longest-serving deputy to be named acting chief when the department is without a permanent leader. Barron accepted the position after Deputy Chief Gerald Galvin,

Shea Sees 92,000 By November

Census Shows City's Population At 91,750

City Clerk Joseph Shea announced the city's 2008 census shows a population of 91,750, just 144 more than reported last year.

However, Shea said that figure is likely to increase later this year due to the Presidential Election.

"We'll definitely be at 92,000 by November and it will hold," Shea said, noting that census forms are mailed in January when people are less concerned about being officially registered for voting purposes.

However, Shea said that

this is a presidential election year. In election years, he said that many people make sure they are on the residents' list. "I'm very optimistic."

The 2007 census was 91,606 and the 2006 census, 90,352.

Shea noted that these figures include all residents of all ages while the voting list, currently at 53,900, lists only eligible voters.

"That's the raw data," Shea said of the current figure. He expects that his staff will compile a breakdown on the makeup of the city's population by age and diversity in the next month.

Koch To Host Community Cookout

Mayor Thomas Koch will host his second annual Community Cookout from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 7 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The event, which Koch started last year as a candidate for mayor, will feature hot dogs and hamburgers, Moonwalks and games for youngsters, sports, bocce for adults and entertainment. The cookout is free.

"It was a great night of family, friends and fun last year, and we decided to make it a tradition," Koch said. "I want to invite everyone to stop by. These are the kinds of events that make our city special-everyone getting together to share a few laughs and relax. And there is no better place than Pageant Field for these kinds of community events."

Several hundred people attended last year's event, which is paid for by the mayor's campaign committee. Koch has been visiting community groups and organizations across the city during his first six months in office, but said he wanted to get together with as many people from around the city in a more informal setting.

"I am looking forward to seeing a lot of old friends, and hopefully meeting some new ones," Koch said. "And if folks want to talk about issues in the city, what's better than doing it over burgers and dogs?"

In Deteriorating Condition Emergency Repairs For Abigail Adams Cairn

Mayor Thomas Koch, working with Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, has declared the deteriorating condition of the historic Abigail Adams Cairn on Penns Hill an emergency, which will allow repairs needed to save the landmark to begin shortly.

The Cairn, built in 1896 to memorialize the spot where Abigail and John Quincy Adams, as a boy, watched the Battle of Bunker Hill June 17, 1775, has been slowly crumbling for the last several years. Today, a large crack in the stone structure can be seen plainly, and a number of others are present throughout the structure.

"At a time when our history as a city is receiving unprecedented attention, we have a responsibility to protect that history," said Koch. "If we do not do something now, we may lose this important piece of our heritage forever, and I am proud to work with Councillor Raymondi to get these repairs done as soon as possible."

Added Raymondi:

"In addition to the historic importance of the Cairn, its condition is clearly a public safety issue. We are seeing increasing numbers of visitors to the site, and we simply cannot have the Cairn falling apart."

Koch declared the condition of the Cairn an emergency, which will speed up the time it takes to get repairs underway. The city is now working with the Quincy Historical Society and other experts on how best to proceed, and officials expect that repairs will begin within a month.

The Cairn, an ancient tradition used to mark significant places, was dedicated in 1896 and its construction was sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution. At the time, the DAR invited groups and individuals from across the city to donate stones to be used on the Cairn, according to Edward Fitzgerald, Executive Director of the Quincy Historical Society.

With the surge of interest in the Adams story, capped by an acclaimed mini-series on HBO this year, the Cairn and its Penns Hill location have received renewed attention. The spot was shown in a scene from the film, with Abigail and John Quincy Adams worriedly watching the cannon-fire and billowing smoke miles away during the Battle of Bunker Hill.

"This is without question an important landmark for the city, and we are thrilled that the city is going to preserve it for future generations," said Jim Edwards, President of the Historical Society.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 19, 1799, a French soldier in Egypt discovers the Rosetta Stone, a black basalt slab inscribed with ancient writing in Greek, Egyptian hieroglyphics and Egyptian demotic. The artifact held the key to solving the riddle of hieroglyphics, a written language that had been "dead" for nearly 2,000 years.

• On July 20, 1869, Mark Twain's book "The Innocents Abroad" is published. Samuel Langhorne Clemens adopted the pseudonym "Mark Twain," a boatman's call noting that the river was only 2 fathoms deep, the minimum depth for safe navigation.

• On July 14, 1912, folksinger-songwriter Woody Guthrie is born in Okemah, Okla. During the Depression, Guthrie traveled the country as a wandering musician, writing songs about what he saw on his journey. Many of his songs were political and liberal, supporting migrant workers and pacifists.

• On July 16, 1945, at 5:29:45 a.m., the Manhattan Project comes to an explosive end as the first atom bomb is successfully tested in Alamogordo, N.M. The first mushroom cloud of searing light rose 40,000 feet into the air and generated the destructive power of 15,000 to 20,000 tons of TNT.

• On July 15, 1953, the film "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," starring Marilyn Monroe, debuts at New York's Roxy Theater. In 1944, Monroe went to work as a paint sprayer in a defense plant. A photographer spotted her there, and she soon became a popular pin-up girl.

• On July 18, 1986, new close-up videotapes of the sunken ocean liner Titanic are released to the public. The videotapes were stunning in their clarity and detail, showing one of the ship's majestic grand staircases and a coral-covered chandelier swinging slowly in the ocean current.

• On July 17, 1996, shortly after takeoff from New York's Kennedy International Airport, a TWA Boeing 747 jetliner bound for Paris explodes over the Atlantic Ocean, killing all 230 people aboard. Because the plane was loaded with fuel for the long trans-Atlantic journey, Flight 800 vaporized within moments.

Oh, Those Prices!

How would you like to buy a house for $7,800 or $11,600?

You could in 1951.

Six houses were advertised for sale in that price range back then by Flavin & Flavin Realty, one of Quincy's oldest real estate and insurance firms.

In fact, you could buy all six of them for just $61,400.

Today, those same six houses would be valued at an estimated combined $2,060,000.

Which underscores what Ed Flavin often notes:

"Buying a home is a long-term and safe investment with increasing benefits."

Take a look at that 1951 newspaper (Ledger) advertisement:

QUINCY CENTER $10,500

Water Street location. Single 7 rooms and heated sunparlor, tile cabinet kitchen, extra lavatory, modern bath, oil steam heat, laundry in basement, 6000 ft. fenced in lot, excellent condition. Open porch. Immediate occupancy.

WOLLASTON $11,600

Norfolk Street location. Single home. 7 rooms, spacious kitchen, screened porch, fireplace, oil steam heat, continuous hot water, excellent condition. 7500 ft. lot with beautiful gardens and shade trees, garage. Owner leaving state. Immediate occupancy.

SQUANTUM $9,500

Vacant single, 5 rooms. Long living room, cabinet kitchen, basement laundry, automatic hot air heat, screened and glassed-in porch. Excellent condition.

NORFOLK DOWNS $10,500

Vacant. Must be sold to settle estate. 6 rooms and heated sunroom, oil steam heat. Needs some fixing. Garage. Give us an offer.

QUINCY $11,500

Great Hill section, near beach. 7 rooms and screened-in porch, long living room, modern kitchen and bath, extra lavatory. Forced hot water heat, continuous hot water. Excellent condition. Immediate occupancy.

WEYMOUTH $7,800

Near Jackson Square. 4 rooms and screened and glassed-in porch, cabinet kitchen, oil hot air heat, good lot, modern bath, garage. Immediate occupancy.

What are those houses worth today? Here's what Ed estimates their value now:

QUINCY CENTER $10,500: $325,000

WOLLASTON $11,600: $360,000

SQUANTUM $9,500: $325,000

NORFOLK DOWNS $10,500: $350,000

QUINCY $11,500: $425,000

WEYMOUTH $7,800: $275,000

Of course, everything is relative. Median family income was considerably lower in 1951 than today. Those $10,500 and $11,600 prices weren't as inexpensive as they would be today.

But they prove real estate is a good investment.

And Ed says there are some good buys out there today.

Ed also notes that the Quincy-Braintree-Weymouth area has one of the lowest foreclosure rates in the state.

Legal Clinics July 22, Aug 26

The Bar Association of Norfolk County is sponsoring free legal clinics on Tuesday evenings from 6 to 8 p.m. at district courts in Quincy, Stoughton and Wrentham.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for one-on-one consultations to discuss legal questions in strict confidence.

The clinics will be offered in Quincy District Court July 22 and Aug. 26 and in Stoughton District Court Aug. 5.

ED FLAVIN of Flavin & Flavin Realty with a framed copy of an advertisement his firm ran in 1951 offering some good buys in houses.

"People in this area bought through reputable real estate firms and reputable banks, looking out for their client's best interests."

"And most didn't make the mistake of going over their head purchasing properties they couldn't afford."

Flavin & Flavin was founded in 1925 by Ed's two uncles, Jim and John Flavin. The latter, a well-known attorney, was at one time city solicitor.

It's still a family business 83 years later. Even more so.

With Ed, in the office, are his wife, Roseann, brother John, son Michael, cousin Marguerite, and niece Maureen—all named Flavin.

By the way, Ed has that 1951 advertisement framed and on display in the office.

It catches the eye of clients who marvel at those long-ago real estate prices.

Typical reaction: "Wouldn't I like to buy a house at those prices today!"

Ed tells them some of today's prices are good considering the difference in median income and other economic factors.

TRAFFIC ENGINEER Jack Gillon has eliminated a dangerous situation at the Hancock Parking lot.

With the Farmer's Market there on Fridays some customers have been parking on McGrath Highway instead of driving in.

The cars block the view of drivers trying to use the monthly pass exit, which is on the low side of a hill making it difficult to see traffic coming from the direction of Washington Street.

Simple solution: Placing no parking cones along the strip near the exit during the Farmer's Market hours.

IF YOU ARE reading this on Wednesday you still have time to say so long to Rick Fitzpatrick who is leaving as city auditor to take a post at Norfolk County Agricultural High School.

Friends are gathering at 5 p.m. at Alba Bar & Grill, 1486 Hancock St. to wish him bon voyage. (Tickets $20 per) Best wishes, Rick.

SILLY TV COMMERCIAL: That anti-perspiration one with the gal running around the street showing off her armpits to everyone. She could work up a sweat doing that.

Scenes From Yesterday

Boulevard & Bathing Beach, Wollaston, Mass.

THIS POSTCARD is a view of the Wollaston Boulevard and bathing beach shortly after the road was opened 100 years ago in May 1908. On the right is Beach Street. When the Boulevard was first opened driving through cow pastures to reach the Fenno or Atlantic Street ends of the road was the only way to access it. The Metropolitan Commission also insisted that boaters could not use wagons with wheels to get their boats across the roadway to the yacht clubs because the wheels created ruts in the sand road surface. Instead, they were to use Sachem Brook under the Boulevard to float their boats to the clubhouses. Protests quickly led to the Beach Street opening and the curb cuts across the way to access the yacht club docks. It was several more years before the ends of the road we know today were completed. The elm tree was the last of a small grove of elms probably planted by the Quincy family who had owned the land south of Sachem Brook since colonial times. The elms provided shade for a grassy knoll that was next to a small beach before the Boulevard was built. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

City's Attention On World War II

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy's attention was on World War II developments: Premier Stalin conferred with President Truman at the little White House today in company with their foreign affairs officials, a few hours before the world-shaping Big Three Conference was scheduled to start.

The Generalissimo, attired as a Marshall of the Soviet Union, was accompanied by Commissioner V. Molotov. They were guests of President Truman at a luncheon.

President Truman had previously met with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

(Editor's note: The meeting of the Big Three was held at Potsdam, Germany, where President Truman informed Stalin that the United States possessed an atomic bomb and the Soviet Union agreed to enter the war against Japan.)

AMERICAN FLEET STRIKES TWO NEAR TOKYO

The American Pacific fleet steamed almost to the gates of Tokyo to unlimber its warships' huge batteries against Japanese shore targets and pile tons of high explosives on the Japanese homeland already rocked from the continuous air strikes of 1500 American and British carrier borne planes.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported that the naval bombardment was concentrated on cities 75 miles north of Tokyo.

Admiral William F. "Bull" Halsey's Third Fleet was carrying out the attack led by the battleship Iowa and other warships. The continued attacks up ad down the Japanese coast to date have resulted in the sinking of 140 Japanese ships with damage to another 234 ships.

Quincy Center Concourse 'Strikes' Again: The RMV

Last week, the local media trumpeted the relocation of Quincy's Registry of Motor Vehicles office — as if moving the Registry from downtown Quincy to the outskirts of Braintree is somehow more convenient for most citizens.

The Quincy Center Concourse has struck again.

This ill-conceived four-lane roadway straight through Quincy Center hasn't even been built yet, and already it's wreaking havoc on downtown Quincy. While the road languishes on the drawing board — some 40 years after it was first proposed — vacant lots are cropping up throughout the downtown area, as vibrant, successful businesses are demolished and displaced to make way for a road that nobody wants.

Ironically, our elected officials claim the city "needs" the Concourse to prevent downtown companies like Stop & Shop from leaving Quincy Center.

Well, here's a reality check: The Registry of Motor Vehicles was a downtown employer, too, and one that brought thousands of people to Quincy Center every week — people who may have stopped for lunch, picked up a newspaper or run a few errands while in the downtown area to get their license renewed.

It seems, in fact, that history is repeating itself. When Sears left Quincy Center in the early 1980s, many patrons abandoned downtown Quincy to flock to Sears' new location in Braintree.

Now, thanks to the Concourse, the building that replaced Sears is being demolished — once again driving downtown businesses and their patrons to Braintree.

And City Hall calls this progress?

Jennifer Logue

Quincy

(Editor's Note: The Quincy Sun did not trumpet the Registry of Motor Vehicles moving to Braintree. On the contrary, we think it is a great loss for Quincy.)

99th Squantum Fourth Parade Crowd Pleaser

As usual the annual Fourth of July parade in Squantum was the best way to start off America's Birthday.

It was a great parade and all onlookers agreed. It kicked off without a hitch. The threatening skies held back the rain as the parade marched forward. Big hits as usual were the endless line of classic cars, the neighborhood floats, marching bands and Uncle Sam. This year the Light Brigade Drum and Bugle band from Revere was a big surprise. They received loud cheers from Quincyites. The pols were there too. How could you have a parade without them?

One of the nicest groups in the parade was the group collecting supplies in a truck for our troops overseas in harm's way. Thanks to state Senator Michael Morrissey and state Rep. Bruce Ayers, the Nickerson Legion Post and Squantum folks who wanted to show our support for those risking their lives for us over in Iraq and Afghanistan. This was the 99th parade. Next year it will be the 100th anniversary of this neighborhood's patriotic tradition. I will return as Gen. Douglas MacArthur once said, "Everyone likes fireworks but everyone loves a good parade."

'John Adams: The Voice Heard 'Round The World' At Adams National Historical Park Boston Landmarks Orchestra To Premier Newest Piece For Young Audiences July 24

Charles Ansbacher, conductor and artistic director of the Boston Landmarks Orchestra, announces the orchestra will premier its newest piece for young audiences, "John Adams: The Voice Heard 'Round the World,'" composed by Anthony DiLorenzo with text by Marian Carlson Thursday, July 24, 6:30 p.m. at Beale Estate, Adams National Historical Park.

"John Adams: The Voice Heard 'Round the World,'" tells the story of the life and triumphs of second President of the United States, John Adams, through the eyes of his oldest son, John Quincy Adams. Aimed to particularly capture the attention of audience members ages 4 to 12, the music mimics Revolutionary cannon shots and drum-line marches.

"We wanted to introduce orchestral music to younger audiences through a piece that speaks to them as children, reinforces important local history and of course entertains," said Ansbacher. "And we couldn't have asked for a better composer/writer team than Anthony and Marian. Marian's text really allows children to identify with Adam's son, John Quincy, while Anthony's score brings the Revolutionary era to life with strong drum movements and flute solos. It absolutely induces imagination and captures the attention of the audience at any age."

"The Boston Landmarks Orchestra helps to make music accessible to children and adults throughout Greater Boston," said Joseph McGrail, Vice President, State Street Corporation. "That's why we're proud to support the Landmarks Orchestra, especially in Quincy, where State Street is one of the largest employers."

"We're thrilled to welcome Boston Landmarks Orchestra for the sixth time," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "Quincy residents have come to anticipate and truly enjoy these performances. The Orchestra seems to surpasses its previous performance each year—I can only imagine what they have in store for us this time."

The Orchestra asked Lorenzo, who grew up in Stoughton, MA to create the Adams piece after members of the Orchestra recommended the Emmy Award winning composer and trumpeter. Lorenzo has composed pieces played throughout the world including at the San Francisco Symphony, Louisiana Philharmonic, the Utah Symphony, the Tokyo Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra. Trained as a trumpeter at Curtis Institute of Music, he has written music for ABC's Wide World of Sports, and movie trailers for more than 70 films including 101 Dalmatians, Forrest Gump, Toy Story, and Crimson Tide.

Boston Landmarks Orchestra commissioned Carlson to write the text for "John Adams: The Voice Heard 'Round the World'" because of her previous work with Landmarks as the Chairman of the Longfellow Bicentennial Committee, and because of her love for history, writing and education. Carlson founded the Young Writers' Club and has published more than 100 articles as a syndicated columnist for an international newspaper. Her programs for middle school students were awarded special recognition from the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Dozens From Quincy Join DA Keating, Elders Affairs Secretary At Senior Summit

More than 250 Norfolk County seniors, including about 40 from Quincy, joined District Attorney Bill Keating recently for his Senior Summit providing local activists the chance to network with their counterparts from across the county while hearing from speakers on ways to keep elders connected, healthy and safe.

Secretary of Elder Affairs Michael Festa spoke about the evolution of the Department he heads and state-wide issues important to seniors but also took time to recognize the importance of outreach events like the Senior Summit.

"Bill Keating is known state-wide as a leader in the protection of seniors who have been harmed because of their vulnerability," Secretary Festa said. "The DA's (first) job is to prosecute, but there is so much more to the protection of seniors."

Dr. Wayne Westcott, a nationally recognized expert on the benefits of exercise and nutrition in keeping seniors healthy and vibrant, spoke on wellness and chronic disease prevention.

Rosemary Verri, "The Lady of Laughter," followed with her take on the benefits of laughter for all ages.

"For seven years, we have tried to have the Senior Summit serve as a hub for communication with and among elder activists in Norfolk County, but to do so in a way that is as engaging as it is informative," District Attorney Keating said after the event.

"Our experience demonstrates that seniors who are engaged in their communities and families are less likely to be touched by a host of problems - including crime."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau

The Value And Appreciation Of Cooperation

Sometimes I think I do my best thinking cutting my lawn. It seems to be a Sunday morning ritual when unfinished thoughts and feelings from the prior week seem to surface for one last look while I do so. So often those thoughts center on issues at work.

On one recent morning's agenda was a situation that occurred the night before when I received a call at home from a suppression deputy asking for my opinion on an unfinished fireworks display in an adjacent community. Yearly we're involved with this display when we allow that community to load fireworks onto a barge within Quincy while I'm involved with the permitting process and arrangements.

It's routinely a quick and orderly affair while the fireworks truck is escorted to the site and a detail stands by at their expense while the fireworks are loaded onto the barge. Every effort is made to assure a safe transfer site including patrolled waterways to assure proper distances are maintained by marine craft. It's a collaborative effort amongst communities and its agencies.

During that night's call, I was informed that this fireworks display ended prior to completion. This is the first time I've witnessed this occurrence. The deputy asked for my input considering that within hours, during that evening, the transfer procedure for unused fireworks would have to be reversed with virtually little to no notice.

Through the miracle of a cell phone age, I witnessed Lt. Gillan of Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit Division offering his full cooperation while he stood by the barge at the mooring while the fire department made arrangements to set up transfer arrangements at the dock back in Quincy.

The certified shooter on the barge was given strict instructions not to leave the mooring until Lt. Gillan gave his approval to do so while he informed me a transfer truck was on its way from New Hampshire.

Vanessa Rivera Wins Honors

Vanessa Rivera of Quincy has been awarded a Red Ribbon denoting a year average of B+ and above with no graded below B- at Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart where she is in the eighth grade,

The Weymouth Fire Department was informed of our procedure and the status of our arrangements. While fire department headquarters was making arrangements for the detail, Engine 5 was notified that the detail apparatus stored there would be used once again. The deputy had his action plan in place within minutes while I witnessed with gratitude the cooperation he received from all involved.

Cutting the lawn that morning, that gratitude surfaced triggered by this effort, having witnessed so many like this before. Just recently the Health Commissioner, Drew Scheele, and I discussed how fortunate we are within Quincy to experience and be part of the typical cooperation seem amongst this City's agencies and departments. With no exceptions, I for one have witnessed countless interaction where the focus on public welfare issues takes precedence over personalities and agency egos. Consequently, communication typically flows unfettered facilitating what has to be done while it fuels a force larger than its contributing participants. I love being part of it.

Taking on one role, as part of an effort larger than myself has been tremendously rewarding, while the resulting gratitude extends not only to those I work with so closely on these efforts, but to a City that has given me the opportunity to do so 30 years ago. Witnessing that night's cooperation is just another example. It's good to spend a working career in service to others!

FOOT NOTES

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

SPRAINED ANKLES

An ankle sprain is a common injury that affects the soft tissues, typically the ligament, of the ankle. It is the number one injury concerning the ankle. A sprain occurs when the ankle ligaments on the outside of the foot are stretched, even to the point of a partial or complete tear. Depending on the severity of the damage, an ankle sprain can often force sufferers to refrain from physical activity for weeks. People who supinate, or roll to the outside of their ankles, tend to get repeated ankle sprains. This action further weakens the ankle and helps perpetuate continued sprains. Severe injury requires x-rays to determine if there is any bone damage.

Some people believe the old adage that "it is better to break an ankle than to sprain one." However, this is by no means true if the injury is appropriately diagnosed and treated by a podiatrist. As a specialist in foot and ankle conditions, he or she is the most qualified person to help rehabilitate an injured ankle or foot and bring it back to normal function. Acute injuries or chronic conditions, we offer a full range of foot care services at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Please call for an appointment at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S: Weak ankles often result in ankle sprains.

Babe Ruth World Series Plans Heading For Home

Plans for the national Babe Ruth World Series are heading for home with organizers, city officials, business leaders and volunteers stepping up their efforts with the showcase event expected to draw thousands of visitors to Quincy.

The official Babe Ruth World Series office opened on Monday at Quincy Park Department headquarters in Merrymount Park, and tickets for the August 16-23 event at Adams Field on sale now at locations throughout the city (a list of locations appears at the end of this story).

"It is coming together great, and we believe that this year might be the best of the three tournaments we have hosted in Quincy," said Babe Ruth World Series Committee President Dick Lombardi.

Added Mayor Koch:

"This is going to be a wonderful event for the city, and it is thanks to so many volunteers who have worked tirelessly for months. We are in constant contact with the committee, and have pledged the full resources of the city to make the World Series as successful as possible."

The Babe Ruth office will be open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. until July 25, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. starting on July 28 until Opening Night. For information about the tournament, to volunteer to help out, or to buy tickets, people are encouraged to visit the Babe Ruth office inside Park Department Headquarters, One Merrymount Parkway, or call 617-376-1203.

World Series Committee Vice President John Norton said volunteers are still being sought for a wide range of duties, and families are still needed to act as host families for some of the players that will be converging on Quincy for the weeklong event.

Norton also announced that the Babe Ruth Committee is now offering "booster" sponsorships, where residents can donate $10 to contribute a line in the program book. Anyone wishing to become a World Series Booster can make checks payable to the Babe Ruth World Series Committee and mail them to Norton at 282 Fenno Street, Quincy, 02170.

With hundreds of ballplayers and their families expected to visit Quincy for the first time, the committee is working with city officials and Discover Quincy on plans to showcase the city to the first-time visitors.

"This will be a first impression of Quincy, and we all want to make sure it is a positive one and that these players and their families have a chance to experience everything Quincy has to offer," said Mark Carey, the executive director of Discover Quincy.

The tournament will include a total of 25 games. A family tournament pass for the entire family, which includes gate entrance for two adults and two children, is $50. An individual tournament pass is $30. Day passes will be available at the gate.

Tickets are now available at:

Michael Morrissey and Mayor Thomas Koch brought greetings from the state.

"He very much set the stage for what the Navy is today," said Bullard, describing Adams' doctrine of preparedness and prevention as well as "collective security efforts."

As for his legacy, it "defies description it is so large," said Bullard while Mary Claffey, Massachusetts Historical Society, quoted a description of Adams as "a natural force like Niagara Falls."

Claffey noted that Adams kept a diary over 68 years totaling more than 68,000 pages covering the Revolution and the growth of the United States. Morrissey read the proclamation from Governor Deval Patrick decreeing July 11 as "John Quincy Adams Day."

Koch cited Adams' vision, noting he was far ahead of his time in supporting the federal reserve and national highway system and defending the enslaved shipwrecked sailors of the Armistead.

During Adams' 18 years in Congress, "His voice against slavery was heard loud and clear," said Koch.

Many of the speakers noted that his father, John Adams, the second president of the United States, has long overshadowed John Quincy Adams.

"John Quincy often stays in the shadows but for some of us, he's our favorite," said Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Quincy Historical Society.

It has taken over two centuries but the nation's sixth president, John Quincy Adams, is finally getting the honors and credit he so richly deserves, according to his admirers.

It is possible that Adams' personality hindered his biographers' efforts. Describing John Quincy Adams' temperament, Peter Adams said, "He probably wasn't the easiest person to get along with."

Speakers cited Adams' presidency, his diplomatic successes, his congressional actions, his work as an abolitionist, and his promulgation of the Monroe Doctrine.

Adams' service to his country spanned six decades beginning with his stint as a 14-year-old translator, according to Caroline Keinath, Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park.

"No office is beneath him if his country calls," said Keinath of the president whose priorities were God first, country second, and family.

Arthur Ducharme, Director, Adams Historic Interpretive Program, called Adams "one of our nation's greatest statesmen" and described the importance of Adams' wife of 51 years, Louisa Catherine Adams, whose wit, and charm aided his success.

Life was not always easy for the couple who lost three children, one son and two daughters.

Ducharme reminded congregants that the First Church is the only church "to serve as the final resting place for two presidents and their wives."

Kirtland Switzer, President, United First Church, welcomed visitors to the service which concluded with the laying of the wreath on John Quincy Adams' tomb in the lower church. William Westland, Vice-President, offered the closing words and Rev. Sheldon Bennett the prayers and benediction.

An early morning breakfast at the Adams Academy, headquarters for the Quincy Historical Society, preceded the church services.

At the breakfast, some 50 persons enjoyed fresh strawberries and dainty breads, insights into Adams' history, as well as an update on the city's tourism and local movie production initiatives.

Quincy 2000 and Discover Quincy sponsored the breakfast. Councillors Douglas Gutro, Ward 5, and Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2 joined Koch with greetings from the city.

Thanks to the recent HBO series, tourism is growing by leaps and bounds, according to breakfast speakers, Mark Carey, Director of Tourism, and Caroline Keinath, Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park.

Keinath described arriving in Quincy in 1987, asking for directions, and being sent to the Adams' birthplaces rather than "The Old House" on Adams Street because few people thought about the Adams legacy.

That changed with David McCullough's book, "John Adams," said Keinath who described "this ride that we've been on" that's brought over 200,000 tourists to Quincy.

Speakers cited the major highlights and accomplishments of Adams' life from his standing on Penn's Hill with his mother to watch the Battle of Bunker Hill in Charlestown to his nine terms as a Congressman concluding with his death at 80.

Several described Adams as the best Secretary of State in American history. He spoke seven languages, served as an official translator at age 14, as a United States senator and as a minister to Russia.

In addition, he read, wrote and translated poetry and undertook scientific experiments.

At the church service, the Quincy Choral Society directed by John Nichols, the United States Navy Brass Ensemble, Newport, RI provided the music, along with soloist Dorothy Adams and organist Kathleen Adams of the American Guild of Organists.

Partnership Offers Home Buyer Education Series To Mandarin Speakers

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) and Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) will offer their popular First Time Home Buyers Workshop in Mandarin.

The free workshop, consisting of three (3) evening sessions, will be held on August 5, 7 and 12 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the 4th floor conference room of QCAP, 1509 Hancock Street in Quincy Center. Attendance at all three (3) sessions is required in order to receive a certificate.

John Brothers, QARI's Executive Director, said the workshop was being held to serve the needs of the many Cantonese speakers moving to the South Shore. "Cantonese speakers need to know about and be able to take advantage of the same home buying opportunities as other home buyers," he added.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the home buying process. Cantonese-speaking real estate professionals will cover everything from mortgages to home insurance. In addition, participants who complete the ten-hour program may be eligible to be limited downpayment/closing cost assistance and for the soft second program. Participants may also use their certificate of completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnership.

For more information about the program and/or to register for the workshop, call 617-472-2200.

Benefits Of Buying A Fixer-Upper

(ARA) - You've seen the real estate listings: "in need of TLC," "fixer-upper," and "great potential." While some cringe at the thought of buying a house that needs to be renovated, others see a chance to get a great deal on a house they can customize and make their own.

Thanks to recent changes in the real estate market, a surplus of homes is available for purchase across the country. While some are in move-in condition, others need work. For those willing to take on the added time and effort of renovation, the rewards can be great.

"A fixer-upper can provide great opportunities for homeowners," says Scott Medrow, national consumer sales manager for GMAC Mortgage. "However, one of the most common misconceptions that scares off potential buyers is that they need to have a lot of cash on hand to pay for the improvements a fixer-upper may require. That is simply not true."

Many lenders offer renovation loans, which feature a single loan for buying the home and fixing it up, explains Medrow. Homebuyers get access to increased borrowing power up front to finance the renovations and improvements that their fixer-upper needs. There's also the potential for lower monthly payments by financing a mortgage and renovation together with improvement costs spread across the term of the loan.

So beyond the number crunching, why consider a fixer-upper?

* The most obvious reason to buy a fixer-upper is the reduced cost. Quite simply, homes that require work are harder for real estate professionals to sell. There is often more room for price negotiation if the home needs work.

* You get to be your own designer. Much like buying a newly constructed home, you can pick the paint colors, carpet, appliances or design features to transform the home into your dream home. You have control over how the house will look after the renovations are complete.

* Location, location, location. Sometimes the only chance to get into a desirable neighborhood is to find a fixer-upper. It's a great way to purchase a home in an area that might otherwise be out of reach.

Buying a fixer-upper comes with risk, however. Before you sign on the dotted line to purchase one, take a close look at the repairs it will need. If there are major structural deficiencies, the cost of improvement might outweigh the adjusted value of the house post-renovation. A professional home inspector can help you determine if the house is worth renovating. An inspector will tell you whether the mechanical, electrical and plumbing systems are functioning properly and can provide additional information that may factor into your decision.

If you decide to move forward, consider these renovation tips from GMAC Mortgage:

* Among the most potentially profitable fixer-uppers are homes that need relatively minor cosmetic repairs, which may allow you to quickly build equity in your home through minor work, such as painting, replacing carpet or updating appliances.

* You can further build equity by considering larger-scale renovations. Adding square footage, building a second story or adding a bathroom can increase the value of your home. Building a deck enhances your enjoyment of your outdoor space and can allow you to recover as much as 85 percent of the costs with increased home value.

* Renovating the kitchen, bathroom or other common areas can be among the most profitable types of renovations. Adding new light fixtures, vanities with plenty of storage, ceramic tile or marble, and a new paint color scheme can dramatically change the appeal.

* Converting an attic into a bedroom or adding a family room are great ways to add value and let your home grow along with your family.

* Replacing your old furnace, putting in new windows and doors, and replacing your roof can pay you back with savings on energy costs while enhancing the home's resale value. Some states even offer credits for remodeling projects that enhance energy efficiency.

My CENTURY 21 Annex Realty agent Theresa Repoff knows this area like the back of her hand. She was extremely supportive when helping me find my first home. Theresa went the extra mile to help me close the sale and reassured me when things were unclear. Now Alfie has a great new yard to run around in.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, July 10, at approximately 3:25 a.m., Officer Daniel Church was on patrol and randomly queried via mobile computer the license plate on a green Ford Van parked in the parking lot of Walgreen's Pharmacy located at 418 Quincy Ave.

The query showed that the registered owner had a warrant for "Failing to Appear for Probation." Officer Church approached the driver's door of the vehicle and asked the driver for identification. The driver produced his license by partially opening his door and reaching into the pocket of the driver's door. The driver stated that he was just waiting for his friend who was in the store shopping.

At this time, Officer Thomas Gaeta Jr. arrived to assist and after the warrant was confirmed, the driver was handcuffed and placed under arrest. The driver/suspect insisted that his friend take his vehicle and repeatedly stated that there was no reason to search the vehicle.

Officer Gaeta, conducting an inventory search of the suspect's motor vehicle, discovered a can of Pepper Foam (labeled "Law Enforcement Use Only") and what appeared to be a sheathed knife in the pocket of the driver's door, the same area where the suspect had previously retrieved his license. A closer inspection of the sheathed knife showed that it was a pointed tipped, double-edged knife.

During a search of the vehicle, another knife was located in the center console of the vehicle well within reach of anyone sitting in the driver's seat.

Officer Gaeta also located in the center console a small zippered pouch containing two glass tubes. One of the tubes contained a small ornamental flower; the other contained steel wool at one end, burned on the other end, and had remnants of a white pasty substance along the interior. A large piece of steel wool was located on the floor between the front seats along with a small cylindrical container containing a trace amount of an unknown white powdery substance. A water bottle was found in the pocket of the driver's door that contained four hypodermic needles (3 unopened, 1 opened).

In the rear storage compartment of the vehicle, Officer Church located a case of hypodermic needles, which contained approximately 100-200 unopened hypodermic needles. Through the Officer's training and experience, it was known that these items are commonly used to store or consume illegally controlled substances. The glass tubes, the steel wool, and the small cylindrical container were seized as evidence. The four hypodermic needles in the water bottle were taken to be disposed of safely.

Once the search was completed, Officer Church asked the suspect who his friend was so that he could take the vehicle. The suspect then said it was a male who was getting in the back seat of a taxi just outside of the store doors.

Officer Church approached the male and questioned him. This male said that although he knew the suspect, he did not arrive with him nor had he planned to leave with him. After a warrant check and a criminal record check, which indicated multiple drug offenses, the male was permitted to leave in the taxi.

A store associate confirmed that there were no other customers in the store. The suspect, a 50-year-old Braintree resident was charged with "Violation of Probation Warrant, Carrying a Dangerous Weapon (Pepper Foam), Carrying a Dangerous Weapon (Double-Edged Knife) and Carrying a Dangerous Weapon (Knife). Nice Work!

PAST BREAKS AND ATTEMPTS: Fenno Street (low numbers), 200 block of Billings Street, low numbers of Willard Street, 100 block of Taffrail Road, 100 block of President's Lane.

THE SAME SCAM OVER AND OVER: Quincy residents, especially seniors, are constantly being victimized by the scam of receiving a check from a lottery or contest, then instructed to cash the check, keep a large amount and send a portion to a specified address to pay for taxes or administrative fees. The check is bogus, but the check (often a cashier's check or money order) the victim sends is valid and the victim will be out the money.

If you have older parents or neighbors, please talk to them about the scammers. If you are part of an organization and would like me to talk about a variety of scams, please contact me at (617) 745 5719.

Koch To Pursue Faxon Field As New Track Site

Mahoney. "Every two years we could get a new track site along with a new mayor."

"It's frustrating to me. The stadium was finished four years ago and the track kids are still being driven down to the Cape for their sport. Their families want a solution. We need the track."

"But Faxon Field is not a good site. I've talked to the neighbors and they tell of extensive flooding. There are problems with parking and wetlands. Maybe it was a mistake to take the track out of Veterans Stadium."

Dwyer was afraid placing the track on Faxon Field might jeopardize environmental agreements made to clear the way for construction of the new Quincy High which abuts Faxon Field down Coddington Street.

"I've never liked the location," she said. "There is a multitude of reasons. The congested area can't handle that additional traffic. It's still subjected to floods. Wetland agreements made for the high school might be reopened for more appeals."

She recommended that an unbiased outsider be brought in to decide placement of the track.

"Someone who is not related to someone else in the matter," she said.

Mulvey ticked off a laundry list of concerns that swayed his vote against Faxon Field.

"There's too much traffic on Route 3A and Coddington Street," he said. "There's the pollution and the lack of parking and the flooding. There's the wetland agreements that were made to build the high school. Would they be open to appeal?"

Puleo, who voted with the mayor in favor of Faxon Field, called it "a disgrace" that the city has gone without a track for four years.

"My colleague chose to extend it another five or ten years," he said. "More information is due on cost analysis and traffic studies. It was not provided. There is no harm in waiting."

"My colleagues without information made a decision that is important to the children."

Bragg, who voted present, said she didn't feel she had enough information to cast a vote while awaiting the mayor's promised report from Gale Associates.

"I didn't feel comfortable," she said.

the department's most senior deputy, declined to take the job.

Barron previously served as Acting Chief in 2006 when Pettinelli left the department to work in Louisiana in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

"Deputy Chief Barron has done the job before, and he is not a candidate on the existing list, so none of the candidates will have an advantage," Koch said. "I have full confidence in Deputy Barron's leadership while this process moves forward."

Koch settled on a selection process after an extensive review by the city's law and human resources departments of events leading up to Pettinelli's retirement, which included several issues that muddled the process. Among those issues:

The last Civil Service exam for chief's candidates was held in 2006 and was set to expire prior to Pettinelli's scheduled retirement.

Former Mayor William Phelan called for an new exam prior to leaving office last year, with those results expected to be in effect when Pettinelli retired. But to few people signed up for the test, meaning that the old Civil Service list would need to be extended.

Pettinelli moved up his retirement date from October to July of this year.

Prepare Your Body for Active Vacation

Q. My family and I have a trip planned this summer to Europe, where we will be walking and hiking a lot more than I had planned. What can I do to prepare for this trip so I do not spend the entire time sore or, even worse, injured?

A. Preparing for vacations that might be physically demanding can be just as important as remembering to pack everything. Taking time to prepare your body for the trip to come should be on your list of things to do prior to leaving.

Being able to enjoy your vacation injury-free is important. Begin at least a month before the trip to give yourself enough time to condition your body. If you are not currently exercising, you might need to start even earlier. Although starting to exercise a week before the trip is better than nothing, you want to give yourself enough time to allow your body to adjust. Working hard for a few weeks before the trip might make you even sorer, but that shouldn't discourage you. Get moving, but pace yourself.

If you are accustomed to working out, keep up your current workout schedule and add a few exercises to prepare for walking and hiking. If you're using a treadmill, try walking at an incline; if walking outside, try to find hills to prepare for walking uphill. Strength training is always a plus, as it will prepare your muscles for the endurance required for days and days of activity.

If you plan to walk or hike carrying a backpack, practice walking with it so your legs, shoulders and back can get accustomed to the added weight. You may be used to walking at home in the neighborhood, but the added weight of the backpack and its contents could make it more challenging.

Don't forget to wear the proper clothes and shoes. The wrong shoes can cause blisters and make your vacation miserable. Break-in any new shoes prior to the trip — don't wait to wear them the first day of your trip.

Taking care of your body to prevent injuries is a top priority. Know your limitations and handle any small issues as soon as possible. Stretch when needed, ice if necessary and rest if possible. Remember that although you are on vacation, the activities you will be completing are just like a workout at the gym. Let your hard work exercising pay off by having an enjoyable and safe vacation.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Active Summer Days Call For A Good Night's Sleep

(ARA) - Professional athletes know that adequate sleep is as crucial to peak performance as any other aspect of training. Sleep not only provides physical rest for our bodies, but mental rest and renewal for our minds. Most people recognize the benefits of sleep, so why don't we make it a priority?

"Too many people dismiss sleep as an activity that can be reduced when life gets too busy, when in reality it is one of the most important things you can do to live a healthy and productive life," says Dr. Howard Fidler, a chiropractor in St. Louis Park, Minn. "Lack of sleep can lead to loss of focus and productivity at work and in other areas of life. It can even make it difficult for your muscles to bounce back after a tough workout."

According to the Tempur-Pedic's 2008 Night-time Renewal Survey, people agree with Dr. Fidler. Of those surveyed, 92 percent say that quality sleep is nighttime renewal for the mind and body and 90 percent agree that when they sleep well, they're more productive the next day.

"Playing in the NBA, I'm always pushing my body to the limit. At night, I know I need to get the best sleep possible so I remain in optimal physical condition," says Sam Cassell, point guard for the Boston Celtics.

Dr. Fidler suggests Cassell, other athletes, and anyone looking for a better night's rest follow these tips to get the best sleep possible:

1) Comfort

Comfort is an important part of getting a good night's sleep. Choose sheets and blankets that are comfortable and allow for air circulation. Make sure your bedroom is dark, quiet, cool and free of interruptions. Finally, select a mattress that is supportive and relieves your body of pressure so you can sleep soundly.

"Pressure management is the process of absorbing and redistributing pressure evenly across the entire surface of your body," says Dr. Fidler. "Equalizing pressure on your joints and spine reduces pain and disturbances to help you get a restful, deep sleep."

This is especially important for people with back problems or for those who are very active at any level. "I use a Tempur-Pedic mattress because it helps take the pressure off my back and joints so my body heals and I get the rest I need for the next big game," says Cassell.

2) Diet

Just as a healthy diet can increase your quality of sleep, an unhealthy one can disrupt it. For quality sleep, eat a healthy diet throughout the day and try to follow these general rules:

* Avoid alcohol and caffeine products before bed. If you need to drink something, choose water, non-caffeinated tea or hot chocolate (which has very little caffeine).

* Try not to eat two hours prior to bed. If you do need a snack before you sleep, keep it light.

* Nicotine is a stimulant and should be avoided before bed.

3) Exercise

"Most people don't realize that your work-out can affect your sleep but I find that exercising helps me use up energy so that I sleep better," comments Cassell.

Because many of us sit behind desks all day, society in general is much less active than it was 100 years ago. Utilizing these warm months to stay active will help you live healthier and sleep better.

"It's best to do these activities during the daylight hours because if you exercise too close to your bedtime, your body will remain alert, making the process of falling asleep more difficult," says Dr. Fidler. "Do any physical activities at least 2 to 3 hours before you plan to go to sleep."

4) Relaxation

Planning a regular sleep schedule can drastically increase your ability to fall asleep and stay asleep. Some people choose to take baths or read before bed. This regular activity becomes a signal for the body to relax and prepare for sleep. Relaxation techniques such as light yoga and meditation can also aid the body in preparing for sleep.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

NO GYM DANDY!

While much attention has been focused on the unhealthy effects of anabolic steroids, which have been illegally used by athletes to pump up their muscles, dentists see another side of the problem. What many people do not realize is that these harmful drugs also stimulate the growth of the gums, which places steroid users at risk for severe gum infection. The fact is that gum tissue is affected by sex hormones. When researchers examined the gums of body builders who took anabolic steroids for less than one year and compared them with those of non-users, they found the steroid users' gums to be thicker, enlarged, and overgrown. These changes make gums significantly more likely to trap plaque and become infected.

For quality dental care for the entire family, look no further. We are highly experienced, friendly, and honored by the opportunity to serve you. We offer a comfortable, informal, and relaxed atmosphere throughout our dental office. Our goal is to reduce traditional dental anxieties. To do that, we stress an attitude of prevention, rather than repair-and-wait. Dust Off The Picnic Basket For Good, Clean Fun

(ARA) - Nothing says summer quite like a picnic. What better way to enjoy the long leisurely days than with a meal outside with friends and family? But food storage issues can quickly turn a pleasant afternoon into a problematic situation. Warm weather can cause food spoilage and cross-contamination, but with proper care, the only worry you will have at your picnic is how to keep the ants away.

Dr. Vickie Vaclavik, a culinary instructor at The International Culinary School at The Art Institute of Dallas, says the first step is to pack your cooler correctly so the food arrives safely. To avoid cross-contamination, says Dr. Vaclavik, "have one cooler specifically for raw meat, fish, and poultry, and use a separate cooler for ready-to-eat foods and drinks." If only one cooler is available, "seal any raw meat, fish, and poultry in plastic containers or plastic bags, since the raw juices are loaded with bacteria and can easily contaminate other foods."

While driving to the picnic spot, keep your cooler on the floor of the car, not in the easily overheated trunk. A prime source of food-borne illness is keeping food at unsafe temperatures. Once you arrive at the picnic site, keep the cooler under a tree or bench to avoid direct sunlight. If the temperature exceeds 85 degrees Fahrenheit, do not let the food sit out on the picnic table for more than an hour, and put perishables back into the cooler immediately after eating.

Many picnics center around grilling. "Make sure meat, fish, and poultry are completely defrosted before grilling to allow for even cooking," says Dr. Vaclavik. "When reheating at the picnic, bring a good thermometer and make sure the food reaches 165 degrees Fahrenheit."

Clean hands are also important when preparing picnic meals. If there is no running water nearby, use an antibacterial cleanser or wipe. Properly store any leftovers in plastic storage containers to keep them fresh and bacteria-free, and discard any food that has been sitting out for over two hours.

With these tips, your picnic will not only be fun, but it will be safe!

Morrisette, Quincy In Playoff Hunt

By SEAN BRENNAN

The post-season aspirations for the two American Legion baseball clubs in Quincy will be decided this week as the District 6 East regular season schedule concludes.

The District 6 East American Legion playoff picture is slowly coming into focus and both Quincy Legion and Morrisette Legion are still alive with the chance to advance to the postseason tournament.

For Quincy (9-7 overall), the playoffs are a given. At 9-7, Quincy Legion is assured a spot in the five-team District 6 East bracket. The only question that remains for Quincy is whether they will be the fifth seed or the fourth seed.

With two games remaining against Jamaica Plain and Hyde Park Legion, Quincy needs just one win to secure the fourth position in District 6 East. This year's playoff appearance will be the Quincy's second in a row following a playoff drought that started in 2005.

For Morrisette (5-11-1 overall) to advance to the post-season, a number of different scenarios need to fall into place, and at this point, that does not look like it will happen. With one game remaining against Holbrook Legion, Morrisette needs to defeat Holbrook, have Hyde Park and Cohasset Legion lose twice and then hope that the tiebreakers swing in their favor.

The chance that this could happen does exist, but for Morrisette, the season is probably going to end without a post-season appearance for the second straight season.

Eight games into the season, Morrisette had a 5-3-1 record and looked primed to get back into the playoff hunt, but an eight-game losing streak has all but dropped them out of the picture.

Last Thursday evening at Adams Field, Morrisette and Quincy Legion squared off for the second time in two weeks. A win by Morrisette would have gone a long way toward improving their playoff chances, but Quincy showed why they are the stronger team this season by knocking off Morrisette 5-1.

Quincy Legion starting pitcher Mike LeBel (5 innings, 8 Ks, earned run) pitched a beauty on the hill and had a huge run scoring hit in the big four-run second inning that blew the game open.

With his team holding a slim 2-0 lead, LeBel stepped to the plate with the bases loaded in the second inning and delivered a bases-clearing triple to give Quincy a 5-0 advantage they would not relinquish.

Mike Leone finished the game 2-for-3 with a walk, two stolen bases and two runs scored for Quincy.

Morrisette would score its only run off of LeBel in the third inning. Kenny Carberry singled leading off the inning and stole second base. Ricky Salvucci's RBI hit scored Carberry.

Morrisette played Braintree Legion on Sunday night and lost a hard-fought game, 3-2.

Trailing 1-0 entering the third inning, Morrisette's Alex Tragellis singled and advanced to second on a wild pitch. John Ainsley followed with a RBI single that scored Tragellis.

With the score knotted at 1-1, Morrisette took its first lead in the fourth inning. Matt Edgerly walked and took second on a wild pitch; after a fielder's choice groundout moved him to third, Matt Joyce drove him in for the 2-1 lead.

But Braintree stormed back and scored twice in the sixth inning to earn the 3-2 victory and all but sealing Morrisette's post-season position.

The District 6 East standings as of 7/14/08 (the top-five teams advance to the playoffs):

Andrew Jaehnig's Three Homerun Game Gives Lions Share Of Cal Ripken Regular Season

The regular season championship of the Cal Ripken baseball league came down to the last game of the year as three teams; Burke Club, Lions and Kiwanis were tied for the league lead heading into the final week of games.

The Kiwanis and Lions played a make-up game to end the regular season with the winner earning a share of the championship with the Burke Club.

Andrew Jaehnig made sure that the Lions would get their share of that regular season championship with a monster game. Jaehnig led off the game with a solo homerun to center field and followed that up with a two-run homerun, a single and a game-clinching grand slam to finish the game with four hits (three round trippers, single) and eight RBIs. He also closed out the game on the hill with 2 1/3 innings of strong relief pitching.

Joseph Cochrane was the winning pitcher for the Lions.

Greg Paulo and Ryan Harty each singled and walked twice and Joe Critelli also reached base via a hit.

AJ Shaughnessy, Steve Roach, Mike Pugsley and Steve Beaton all played solid games for Kiwanis in the loss.

Lions def. Keohane's, 12-0

Earlier in the week, the Lions dispatched of Keohane's 12-0 behind a strong pitching performance from David Suslowicz.

The Lions offense pounded out 20 hits, led by 10-year old Liam McCarthy's three hits and two hits each from Galen Kurtzman, John Yacano, Matt MacPhail, Greg Paulo, Ryan Harty, Joe Critelli, Joe Cochrane and Suslowicz. Matt MacDonald finished the game with one hit for the Lions.

Keohane's was led by David Lawlor, Sean Halleran and Patrick Keohane.

Lions def. Koch Club, 11-1

Matt MacPhail had four hits and played great defense in centerfield to help pace the Lions to an 11-1 victory over the Koch club.

Greg Paulo and Joe Critelli each collected two hits and John Campbell, Matt MacDonald and Andrew Jaehnig had one hit apiece.

Jaehnig was the winning pitcher and upped his season record to 5-1.

Playing well for the Koch Club were Madison Barnwell, David Summering and John Ross McEvilly.

Lions def. Quincy Credit Union, 11-5

The Lions Club jumped out to a 4-0 first inning lead against fireballer Josh Hayward and rode that momentum to an 11-5 victory over Quincy Credit Union.

Andrew Jaehnig belted two doubles and a single to lead the Lions' offense. John Yacano, Greg Paulo, Joe Critelli, Liam McCarthy and Dave Suslowicz all finished with two hits and John Campbell reached base one time via a base hit.

Joe Cochrane picked up the win on the mound for the Lions.

Playing well for Quincy Credit Union were Josh Hayward, Patrick Coak, Padraig Geaney and Mark Gillespie.

Lions def. Koch Club, 3-1

Andrew Jaehnig (Lions) and Matt Maki (Koch Club) engaged in a classic pitcher's duel with the Lions coming out on top by a 3-1 score.

Jaehnig struck out 10 batters, allowing just three hits, to earn the win.

Maki, using an assortment of well-placed fastballs and change-ups, kept the high-powered Lions' offense off balance all game long, allowing just three hits.

Playing well for the Lions were Matt MacPhail, Matt MacDonald and Jaehnig.

Playing well for the Koch Club were Maki, Madison Barnwell (homerun, RBI), Dave Summering and Liam Fitzmaurice.

Quincy Rotary def. Lions, 7-4

Tyler Beach smashed a clutch two-out, two-strike, three-run homerun to give Rotary an exciting 7-4 comeback victory over the Lions.

The Lions had taken an early lead courtesy of three hits apiece from Andrew Jaehnig and Ryan Harty, but Rotary and Beach would not be denied.

Rotary used some great defense to pull off the upset as Matt Kerns, Troy Shepherd, Dylan Hughes and Adam McCormick each made outstanding plays in the field.

Final Regular Season Standings

Lions, 12-4, Burke Club, 12-4, Rotary, 10-6, Elks, 9-7, Kiwanis, 9-7, Quincy Police, 9-7, Quincy Credit Union, 8-8, Koch Club, 7-9, Burgin, 7-9, Colonial Federal, 5-11, Keohane's, 4-12, Beacon Sports, 4-12.

Solution time: 21 mins.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your persistence pays off as the information you demanded starts to come through. The pace is slow at first, but it begins to speed up as the week draws to a close.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unwelcome bit of news jolts the Bovine, who would prefer that things proceed smoothly. But it's at most a momentary setback. A Leo brings more welcome tidings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to pay close attention to the details before making a commitment. Don't accept anything that seems questionable, unless you get an answer that can be backed up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations on getting that project up and running. But as exciting as it is, don't let it carry you away. Make sure you set aside time to spend with family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be sure you're part of the discussion involving your suggestions. Your presence ensures that you can defend your work, if necessary. It also helps gain your colleagues' support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding needs to be dealt with, or it can grow and cause more problems later on. Be the bigger person and take the first step to clear the air.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Set some strict guidelines for yourself so your heavier-than-usual work schedule doesn't overwhelm the time you need to spend relaxing with loved ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel a little uncomfortable being among people you hardly know. But remember that today's strangers can become tomorrow's valuable contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Reward yourself for all that you've accomplished despite some annoying situations that got in your way. Enjoy a well-earned getaway with someone special.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Realizing that someone else is taking credit for what you did is bound to get anyone's goat, but especially yours. Be patient. The truth soon comes out.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Forget about opposites attracting. What you need is to find someone who thinks like you and will support your ideas, even if others say they're too radical.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace problems can affect your financial plans. Be prudent and avoid running up bills or making commitments until things begin to ease up by the 25th.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your intuition helps you communicate easily with people and understand their needs.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

While most people do not like to think about their own death or that of a close family member, funeral pre-planning and/or pre-financing can ease possible problems associated with death. There are many reasons that people pre-plan their own rituals.

One of the most important is that pre-planning makes one's wishes known; it eases the burden placed upon the family at a time when clear decisions may be difficult to make.

Pre-planning does away with any possible disagreement among the bereaved as to what to do and how much to spend. Pre-planning gives one a piece of mind in knowing arrangements have been made in advance.

If you have any questions concerning pre-planning and/or pre-financing, please feel free to contact The Deware Funeral Home by phone or stop by for consultation. We will answer all questions honestly and frankly and in the strictest of confidence. At no obligation, of course....

Senior Babe Ruth

the side in the final two innings to pin down the victory.

'He Will Never Be Forgotten'

Boathouse Dedication Honors Vietnam Hero Raymond West

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

When Kathy West Gomez first expressed her thought about having a Houghs Neck boathouse named for her late brother, Raymond, she never dreamt that one year later her idea would be fully realized.

On Saturday, the boathouse and park at Parkhurst/Perry Beach, where Raymond had spent so much time in his youth, was officially named for him: Cpl. Raymond J. West Park, Vietnam veteran, U.S. Army, killed in action on December 13, 1968.

Last year, Kathy casually mentioned her brother's love of the Houghs Neck beach during a conversation with Arthur Knowlton, who voluntarily maintained the property. She thought how nice it would be if Raymond could be remembered.

Knowlton contacted Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, who set the wheels

Impact Quincy Receives State Grant For Projects $600,000 Targets Drug Overdoses, Underage Drinking

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The rest of the country will be watching as Quincy and 15 other Massachusetts cities pioneer the first federal grant programs aimed at reducing the number of unintentional drug overdoses, according to speakers at Impact Quincy's meeting Tuesday at City Hall.

Emily Bhargava told the 25 participants at the meeting that Massachusetts is the only state undertaking such a project with federal grant funds.

"It means that the whole country is watching. This is a test case," said Bhargava, a Community Health Specialists at the regional center for Health Communities, Cambridge.

"It has the potential to be replicated," Bhargava said after noting that all other states, except Massachusetts, chose to focus only on underage drinking.

West Quincy Billboard Still Flashes, New Appeals Filed

By TOM HENSHAW

The contentious 80-foot electronic billboard on Willard Street, West Quincy, continues to hustle Svedka vodka to motorists on the Southeast Expressway despite Building Inspector Jay Duca's cease and desist order.

"We are still working on turning it off," said City Solicitor James Timmins. "The decision is appealable. We are waiting for the appeal period to be over."

"It's complicated." Indeed it is with at least four parties bringing suit or being sued or both for and against each other with the loser appealing each decision to the next level of judgment.

The latest chapter in the long-running serial came Monday when the city was notified that Thomas Mahoney Jr., a Willard Street businessman, is appealing Duca's refusal to order the billboard physically removed.

In addition to his request that the neon sign on the billboard be turned off Mahoney had asked that Duca order the whole thing taken down but Duca declined citing "the cost and other practical issues."

Timmins was notified last week that the State Outdoor Advertising Board had reviewed its approval of the billboard siting and found no reason to conduct new hearings into the matter.

"As a result," said Timmins, "we are filing a court action, arguing that the Outdoor Advertising Board was not following its own

$600,000 Targets Drug Overdoses, Underage Drinking

The problem of accidental overdose is urgent, according to Bhargava and Impact Quincy's Director Alejandro Rivera who cited statistics showing a 40 percent increase in "Fatal Opioid Related Poisoning" in Massachusetts in the past 15 years.

One participant, Robert Monahan of the South Shore Recovery Home, made the statistic meaningful when he described a client who just finished a rehabilitation program.

"In the six months he's been there, eight of his friends have died," said Monahan.

Rivera's team will develop projects using two three-year grants to the city totaling $600,000. One grant of $80,000 a year is aimed at underage drinking, while the second grant of $125,000 a year will tackle unintentional Opioid overdoses.

Rivera told the participants that Impact Quincy will be reviewing options before developing a plan for reducing the overdose problems. The planning must be completed by Oct. 31 when it will be reviewed by the state.

Both Rivera and Bhargava described how the city's support was essential in being awarded the grant funds. Rivera wanted to "thank the leadership of Mayor Koch." "We were lucky," said Rivera, noting that the mayor's staff asked how they could help his agency, "the first time we called."

"That really gives you a leg up," said Bhargava, noting that the leadership in some cities will not recognize substance abuse problems.

SHARING IDEAS at Impact Quincy's community meeting at City Hall Tuesday are Normand Grenier, Executive Director, Neighborhood Housing Services and Bill Spinks, Director of Prevention and Intervention Services, Bay State Community Services.

According to Rivera, poisoning is the "leading cause of accidental death in Massachusetts." In fact, he said, the number of poisoning fatalities even outstrips the numbers for motor vehicle accidents.

As for "fatal Opioid related poisoning deaths," Rivera said those numbers have increased from 28 percent of the total number of deaths in 1990 to 68% in 2005.

Rivera distributed a detailed description of "opiates" and "opioids" because the grant funds will be limited to those issues.

According to the description, "opiates are drugs derived from opium while "opioid" refers to the entire family of opiates including natural, synthetic and semi-synthetic.

The category is enormous and includes painkillers such as morphine, methadone and oxycontin, Percocet, Percodane and Demerol.

Overdoses often occur because the victim accidentally mixes opioids, according to Rivera, "not because people are trying to commit suicide."

Rivera quoted the opioid description which concluded, "With opioids, there is a small window between euphoria and death."

Rivera will now meet one on one with some of the city and community leaders attending Tuesday's meeting and with persons who have had overdose problems as recommended by Normand Grenier, Executive Director, Neighborhood Housing Services.

Grenier said it was important to contact "people who have been there. They know something we don't"

Among the two dozen other city, state and community leaders attending Tuesday's meeting were Elizabeth Campbell, Quincy Access TV; Chris Cassani and Helen Murphy, Mayor's office; Joyce Hogan, Quincy Lions Club, Maralin Manning, Quincy Business Association, Vicky McCarthy, South Shore Interagency Council, Kathy Quigley, Germantown Neighborhood Center; Peter Racicot, Fallon Ambulance, and John Yazwinski, Father Bill's Place.

Extra Police, City Monitoring Two Parks

Extra police and city recreation leaders are again monitoring two major playgrounds in Quincy throughout the summer thanks to a $23,000 grant from the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

The "Teamwork 2008" program builds off the increased police and city presence at Kincaide Park in West Quincy and the Fenno Street Playground in Wollaston that significantly reduced calls to police last year, when the city conducted a pilot program paid for by a Shannon Grant from the MAPC's Metro Mayors Coalition.

"The opportunities provided by this program are invaluable, both for the kids who participate and the surrounding neighbors who see a demonstrated decline in summertime problems because of it," Mayor Thomas

Koch said. "It is truly a community-wide effort, from our Police Department to our Recreation Department, to the neighbors, and I am proud that we can continue it this year."

The grant pays to have police officers and Quincy recreational leaders at both parks five days a week from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. now through Aug. 30. Police and recreational leaders supervise activities at the parks, and provide equipment and supplies.

"This program has proven to be a tremendous success in the past, especially the positive dialogue and interaction we are able to build between our teenagers and police," said City Council President Jay Davis, who has worked regularly with youth groups in Ward 4 neighborhoods.

The two parks were chosen for the grant because they had a historically high number of police calls during the summer months. In 2006, there were 76 calls for Police at Kincaide and 39 calls at Fenno Street. Last year, those numbers dropped to one and two calls, respectively.

"There are fewer and fewer social activities for Quincy teenagers, and this program is a huge boost by providing an important set of recreational opportunities for our teens that are both constructive and sorely needed during the summer months," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Guro.

The program is coordinated by Recreation Director Barry Welch, and specifically targets teenagers in the middle school and high school age groups. For more information, call the Recreation Department at 617-376-1393.

to take the lead. There are many exciting things happening each day at Manet including a brand-new electric medical record."

Manet, whose mission is to provide accessible, quality health care for everyone, has health centers in North Quincy, Houghton Neck, Snug Harbor, Hull and Quincy Medical Center.

JOSHUA CROSBY of Plymouth picks up an evergreen tree from Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly during the recent evergreen exchange program. The program supplies evergreen seedlings in exchange for the recycling of Christmas trees. Joshua Crosby is the grandson of Dorothy and Frederick Crosby of Quincy.

Tuttle To Head Manet Health Center

Henry Tuttle, the CEO of Outer Cape Health Services, has been selected to head the Manet Community Health Center, the fourth CEO in the 29-year history of the Quincy-based health care provider.

Tuttle will take over in early September, succeeding Antonia "Toni" McGuire, who left Manet in January for a similar post with Great Brook Valley Community Health Center.

Tuttle, who has been with Outer Cape since 2004, is a graduate of Boston College who has swerved in leadership positions in the health care, energy and philanthropic industries around the nation.

"Henry has all the skills, know-how and integrity to help us elevate what we do today and help us build our service capacity for the future in order to meet the mounting needs of the communities we serve," said Robert Littlefield, president of Manet's board of directors.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 22, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln informs his chief advisers and cabinet that he will issue a proclamation to free slaves. He hoped a strong statement declaring a national policy of emancipation would stimulate a rush of the South's slaves into the ranks of the Union Army, thus depleting the Confederacy's labor force.

• On July 23, 1888, Raymond Chandler, creator of detective Philip Marlowe, is born in Chicago. Chandler published only seven novels, among them "The Big Sleep" (1939), "Farewell My Lovely" (1940) and "The Long Goodbye" (1953), all featuring tough, cynical private-eye Philip Marlowe.

• On July 25, 1894, actor Walter Brennan is born in Swamscott, Mass. Brennan became the first actor ever to win three Academy Awards, for "Come and Get It" (1936), "Kentucky" (1938) and "The Westerner" (1940.)

• On July 26, 1908, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is created when federal investigators are ordered to report to the Department of Justice. When the Department of Justice was created in 1870, it had no permanent investigators on its staff. At first, it hired private detectives when it needed federal crimes investigated.

• On July 21, 1925, in Dayton, Tenn., the so-called Monkey Trial ends with John Thomas Scopes being convicted of teaching evolution in violation of Tennessee law. In 1968, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned a similar Arkansas law on the grounds that it violated the First Amendment.

• On July 27, 1949, the world's first jet-propelled airliner, the British De Havilland Comet, makes its maiden test-flight in England. The Comet was capable of traveling 480 mph, a record speed at the time.

Sad Days For Sharron

For Sharron Beals, you might say, it's like losing her home and family, too.

The home, Beechwood On The Bay, the intergenerational community center of which she has been the sparkplug executive director the past 18 years.

The family, all those seniors and pre-schoolers, music students and daycare youngsters who have participated in the multi-programs offered.

All of which is coming to an end.

A sad one for Beals and her "family" especially the daycare and pre-schoolers aged 7 weeks to 8 years and seniors 55 to 90-plus.

"Beechwood is closing Aug. 1," she says. "We are closing and we will be gone."

Mayor Thomas Koch is taking back the 15,000 square foot building, the former Myles Standish School at 440 East Squantum St. as the site for a new citywide Senior Center.

Beechwood had a year to go on the lease but in April, Koch asked for the building back as of Sept. 1. The city felt that under the lease it could repossess the building at any time.

The building will undergo major renovations for the senior center. It is less expensive to renovate a suitable building than construct a new one. And Koch wants to get started in September.

"But this didn't give us time to find a new location," Beals says.

Is there any chance Beechwood might still come back?

"No," she says. "We are now in the process of dissolving our corporation."

Beechwood was founded in 1981 with its first home the Beechwood Knoll School on Fenno Street. Proposition 2½ brought about the closure and sale of a number of schools back then.

Mayor Arthur Tobin determined that the Beechwood School could not be sold because the Grossman Family Trust bequeathed the property to the city for "Educational and Cultural Enrichment" purposes only.

The Beechwood Center qualified to occupy the school.

A leading founder of the center was Dr. Cecil Paul, president of Eastern Nazarene College.

Beals, a Mansfield resident, came aboard in 1990.

The Beechwood Center moved to the closed Myles Standish School with Mayor James Sheets' blessing in 1994 when the Beechwood Knoll School was re-opened as a school.

The lease fee for the building was $1 a year.

But Beals notes that the children and seniors' activities were carried out at no cost to the city.

Juried Art Show July 27 At Adams National Historical Park

The Adams National Historical Park will host a juried art show on July 27 at 2 p.m. in the Adams NHP Carriage House, 135 Adams St., Quincy.

All artists who painted on July 19 and July 20 and all artists who have been inspired to paint, sketch or photograph Adams National Historical Park are encouraged to enter their works.

Artwork and photography to be entered in the art show must be delivered to the Adams NHP Carriage House before Sunday. Awards will be presented and refreshments will be served.

Prizes and awards will be awarded in all categories and the show is free and open to the public.

For more information, call the Visitor Center at 617-770-1175.

An average 4,000 seniors a year took part in activities free. Pre-school, daycare, music lessons, were at nominal fees.

Beechwood, Beals says, spent $70,000 a year for upkeep and maintenance. And put on a new roof over the gym at a cost of $20,000.

Programs she takes pride in include:

Installation of smoke detectors in 800 seniors' homes in partnership with the Quincy Fire Department, National Fire Protection Association, Quincy Rotary Club and Mayor's Office.

Med-Alert Bracelet program with the Quincy Police Department and Handicapped Commission.

Elder Home Repair program for at-risk seniors.

Blood pressure screening for seniors.

Senior Olympics.

Beals is helping to find openings at other pre-school and daycare, for those who would have been going to Beechwood. And trying to find jobs for some 25 staff members.

The center's last two scheduled events:

A Christmas Party today (Thursday) with a 10:15 a.m. performance by the Wheelock Family Theater and "Christmas In July Lunch" at noon.

A "Red Hat Society Lunch" July 31 at noon, free to all ladies over 50 wearing red hats.

And then, Aug. 1, doors close.

Any future plans for Beals?

"I'm not saying yes to anything until January," she says. "For a few months I just want to play as hard as I have worked."

And, work she has. She's given her heart and soul to Beechwood. Whatever project she took on, she gave it her all.

But although Beechwood is going, she isn't.

"You have not seen the last of me," she says. "My life has been here these past 18 years. I love this city. I would like to move here when the real estate market is better."

And she adds, a little mischievously, "Maybe I'll be a campaign manager in the next city election."

Meanwhile, she proudly displays a commemorative plate on her car: "QUINCY, Of Course."

And a personal note:

Sharron, I still think the Weather Bureau should name one Hurricane Sharron.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1930 POSTCARD was published for the Blackie Service Station that was located near the corner of Woodbine Street and Weston Avenue in Wollaston. It was owned and operated by Albert Blackman who lived just around the corner. The sign over the door is barely discernible, but this was an official headlight and brake inspection station. The card was mailed to local customers as a reminder to have their lights and brakes inspected. Stating on the reverse that "we serve you with expert knowledge and the most scientific equipment available." Surely they didn't have anything like the computers they plug our cars into today. The site of this business is now included in the Red Line's Wollaston Station parking lot. Quincy's Yesterdays

8-Ward Plan On Election Ballot

By FRANK McCAULEY

Sept. 6, Nov. 6, and Dec. 4 should be dates for Quincy voters to remember this year.

The City Council was expected to unanimously approve a plan to hold a referendum vote on the 8 Ward Redistricting plan Sept. 6. The primary election would then be held Nov. 6 and the final election Dec. 4.

The proposed action was being taken in an effort with the "one man, one vote" recent court decision.

As presently constituted, the original boundaries were set in 1889 when Quincy became a city. Under the present configuration Wards 1, 5 and 6 are large than Wards 2, 3 and 4.

The eight-ward plan was devised to comply with the court decision. (Editor's note: The eight-ward plan was defeated and the ward lines for the six wards were redrawn to comply with the court's decision.)

Annual Arts Affair Aug. 2-3 On Marina Bay Boardwalk

The annual Arts Affair, displaying 285 pieces of art by artists from Greater Boston and the South Shore, will be held on the weekend of Aug. 2-3 on the Boardwalk at Marina Bay.

Saturday hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. with the awards ceremony at 2 p.m. at the Clock Tower. Sunday hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. In the event of rain the display will move indoors to 500 Victory Rd.

The Arts Affair began 13 years ago with a dozen artists hanging their paintings of the railing, tied down with plastic electrical ties so the wind would not blow them into the water.

This year, artists representing 12 art associations from South Boston and Needham down through Quincy to communities all over the South Shore will display, including 11 pieces of fine sculpture.

The lead chairwoman this year, Ellyn Moller of the Milton Art Association, is assisted by Past Chairman Bill Beyer and Sculpture Artist Dan Meyers of the Quincy Art Association.

Others who have contributed include Linda and Kris Kreitman of Quincy, Sandy Pohl, past president of the Weymouth Art Association; John Campbell of Scituate and Pauline Margaroni, president of the South Boston Art Association.

There will be a raffle of 12 pieces of fine art from local artists.

Fr. Bill's And MainSpring Food Fest, Auction July 29

Father Bill's & MainSpring will host the 14th annual Food Fest & Auction Tuesday, July 29 from 6-10 p.m. at Marina Bay Beach Club.

This tasting event, the largest fundraiser on the South Shore, benefits the homeless individuals and families served by Father Bill's Place and MainSpring.

Ann and her 8-year old autistic son Jason recently found housing through Father Bill's & MainSpring. Despite stable employment, she and Jason became homeless when her mother told them to leave. Ann did not qualify for a state-funded unit because she was $30 over the qualifying income. They came to Father Bill's & MainSpring, where they were placed in a supportive housing unit.

Their apartment is near Jason's school so he has been able to remain in his special needs classroom and after school program. Ann continues to work and pay rent. She's also going to the career center, so that she can improve her skills and job prospects. She meets with out case manager weekly to help her and Jason continue on the path to self-sufficiency.

Their success would not be possible without the funds raised each year at Food Fest.

Food Fest features more than 40 of the finest local restaurants, bakeries, and wine distributors on the South Shore. This year's auction will include an autographed painting of Tom Brady, trip for two to Las Vegas, Red Sox tickets, and rare sports memorabilia.

Tickets for the event are $100 each. They can be purchased at HYPERLINK "http://www.fatherbillsmainspring.org" or by calling the agency's development office at 617-770-3314.

MORE FOR YOU HERE AT HOME

Coffee Break Café is something different to everyone. For some it is the first stop in the morning for their morning coffee. For others it is the place where their three year old can sit and color while mom has a moment to catch up with a friend sipping on lattes. Some use the free wireless and do research on their laptop while enjoying café mocha. Others use it as the high school meeting place for a frozen cocoa or an iced coffee. It is a place to listen to some good local music, view local art that kids did in their high school photography class. Some people go to Coffee Break Café three times a day, some only once but there is something for everyone.

Regardless of the why people go to Coffee Break Café, there is always a smile and a friendly hello waiting for you. There's always hot fresh coffee, ground seconds before brewing. Iced coffee is made constantly throughout the day in every flavor, mixed and sugar melted to your liking. Coffee Break Café is the only coffee shop in the area certified to use Malabar Gold espresso and it shows. Mocha's, caramel lattes, or a shot of the smoothest espresso on the planet is a heavenly treat. Coffee Break Café created its own Hypercaf which through careful blending adds 50% more caffeine naturally. Coffee is purchased from independent microroasters in smaller batches to ensure the highest available grades. Milk is purchased from a local farm and is hormone free.

The food is made and delivered daily from local neighboring businesses. There's always something new happening at Coffee Break Café, whether it be story time for the kids, local live music, game night or simply a new cream cheese flavor like black olive feta or chive and onion made with ingredients fresh from the garden.

Locally owned and operated by Jenn and Donny Ormond since 1996 Coffee Break Café is a small business that is always giving back to the community. Buying local where possible, carrying a selection of organic fair trade products, recycling, and helping out local charities are just some of the values that are important to the Ormond's. Throughout the months of June and July Coffee Break Café is partnering up with Zam4.com, a t-shirt company with a social conscience selling t-shirts that say love in different languages. For every t-shirt sold, Zamforia will donate $5.00 to the Strong Kids Campaign helping children to go to summer camp at the YMCA. There are some really cool art displays up at each location displaying the tees.

Whatever the reason stop by and enjoy.

BACK TO THE FUTURE — Used cars fill the lot on Adams Street across from South Shore Buick in this photo taken in the 1960s. On June 30, the 85-year-old Quincy car company ceased as a General Motors authorized Buick representative. But owner Robert FitzGerald said the business — now known as South Shore Sales and Service — will continue to offer high-quality pre-owned vehicles specializing in Buick but it will also sell Chevy, Pontiac, Saab, Cadillac, Saturn and more. The company continues to offer maintenance and repair service.

Car Company Now South Shore Sales And Service

South Shore Buick Drives Towards A New Future

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

It was 30 years ago when auto dealer Robert FitzGerald was baptized into the car business.

"My first job at South Shore Buick was cleaning off the cars after the Blizzard of 1978. The challenge then was finding the cars first," FitzGerald said, referring to the massive snow drifts covering the cars parked on the sales lots on Adams Street after that historic two-day storm dropped more than two feet of snow on the region.

Today, it's a different kind of challenge for FitzGerald, 48, president of the company; and his brother, Richard, 45, the service manager. Remaining competitive in an ever-changing automobile industry.

To that end, South Shore Buick — which has served generations of local families and business men and women since it opened its doors in 1923 — has ceased as a General Motors authorized Buick representative.

According to FitzGerald, South Shore Buick had one of the longest running relationships with General Motors in automotive history — 85 years. However, 2008 marks a year of consolidation in the car industry, and General Motors is moving to combine the Buick, Pontiac and GMC nameplates.

So the FitzGeralds decided they, too, will adjust to remain competitive.

The business name has changed: it's now South Shore Sales and Service. But the telephone number is still 617-770-3300 and it's location remains 50 Adams St., in the same brick building which opened in 1941 just before the start of World War II.

While the business no longer sells brand new Buicks, FitzGerald emphasized his car business will continue to offer the excellent service customers have grown accustomed to for maintenance and repair, as well as complete body and paint work. Car buyers will also find an array of high quality pre-owned vehicles "that make good economic sense in these challenging times," he said.

The change took effective June 30. A letter went out to customers with Buick warranties "so they weren't caught unaware," FitzGerald said.

"For everybody else it doesn't really matter because we still have the same people, we still offer the same services without some of the preconditions that General Motors places on you. We now will have more flexibility to use other parts suppliers and services to be that much more competitive in a very competitive environment. To some degree, it does remove some shackles."

FitzGerald said the decision was essentially a reaction to an increasingly competitive automobile industry.

"The big thing that it achieved for me was that it got us out of the requirements and the debt structure that is inherent with being a franchise dealer. So it gives us more flexibility, less overhead and better ability to react to the market to carry the cars that people want. With GM, we were sort of limited. We used to offer 11 different models or car lines; now (Buick) is down to three: LaCrosse, Lucerne and Enclave."

That's a far cry from the 1960s when GM offered more than 30 models. Back then the business was owned by FitzGerald's late father, Robert, along with the late Robert Costello. Robert FitzGerald and Costello came to South Shore Buick in 1963.

They were both decorated World War II veterans. Costello fought in the Battle of the Bulge, became a prisoner of war and received the Purple Heart. FitzGerald, a Marine and Purple Heart recipient, was wounded in the battle at Iwo Jima. They were partners for 30 years.

FitzGerald said he was aware consolidation was coming.

"GM said very explicitly four or five years ago that (dealerships) had to be Buick, Pontiac and GMC. In the last couple of years, with the reduction of models, it just became clear that we had to make a move. So it seemed like this is the right time to make that move," FitzGerald said.

He said he believes GM will consolidate even more in the coming years.

"I think the future bodes for more consolidation on GM's part. They are encumbered with this pre-existing franchise situation that isn't in keeping with the present day. So, we saw the handwriting on the wall and we made the move before the move was made for us. I think we did the right thing."

The focus now, FitzGerald said, is retaining its present customer base by offering high-quality pre-owned vehicles in today's economic conditions.

"We will continue to do the right things by our customers and offer high-quality used vehicles at the right value, especially given the current economic conditions. If you can sell someone a used car, maybe it's not their first color choice and maybe it doesn't have that new-car scent . . . but let's say it's a year or two old and perhaps it has 85 or 90 percent of its life expectancy still in front of it, but yet it's almost half of what it was brand new then you are demonstrating good value to somebody and it becomes affordable. So instead of $500 payment, you have a $280 payment."

FitzGerald said savvy automobile shoppers should consider a car's depreciation when buying a vehicle.

"If you look at the depreciation of a car, everybody knows the minute you drive off the lot it devalues. The first year or two of ownership of a car costs you as much as the next several. If you can buy a car right — get into a vehicle while it's near new — when the depreciation curve is starting to flatten out — that's the right time to buy a car."

"People often ask 'when is the best time to buy a car?' It has more to do with the car than the calendar. By buying when the depreciation has leveled off, a customer will save on sales and excise tax. Your life cost of that car is like half but you still have 80 percent of the life of the car in it. The average car on the road today is over nine years old. Truth be told: everybody makes a pretty good car these days. If they don't, they're not in the business so (cars) last a lot longer."

As far as selling foreign vehicles, FitzGerald said, "We are going to continue to do what we know best. The line between foreign and domestic is blurring all the time so we will be expanding our product offerings but we will do so cautiously. We want to be the best at what we do. That's the only way you can really do the right thing by the customer. That's the only way you can gain the customer's trust and loyalty."

The familiar South Shore Buick signs outside 50 Adams Street will soon be replaced with signs bearing the business's new name.

And as its new name implies, service will continue to be a mainstay at South Shore Sales and Service," FitzGerald said. "Service is a larger part of our business. Anyone who has purchased a vehicle at South Shore Buick and needs service can bring it on back. Anything you need."

"In challenging economic times, it makes sense to protect the investment you make in an automobile with the proper maintenance," he added.

As for warranty service, FitzGerald said "we are restricted from performing warranty. But if our customers have a warranty issue and they need us to facilitate that repair, to diagnose it, to arrange whatever they need arranged, we do have good relationship association with a couple of GM franchises that we will work with and make sure their needs are met."

Reaction from customers has been very supportive.

"It's been very positive," FitzGerald said. "I have had a few people who have been doing business with us for so long that they actually got more emotionally than even I over it. That makes me feel good; that we've been able to build those relationships. Our customers are our friends."

Besides specializing in pre-owned Buicks, the business offers a myriad of cars, utility vehicles and convertibles from several makes and models, including Chevrolet, Pontiac, Saab, Cadillac, Saturn and more. And if it's not on the lot, FitzGerald said he can help customers track down the wheels they want.

"If someone is looking for something, tell me what you're looking for. Give me a couple of weeks. I'll go get it. It's a big marketplace. I look from Connecticut to New Hampshire, I have the tools, I have the relationships, I will find the vehicle. Maybe it won't be your first color choice, but I'll get it pretty close."

As the company drives towards a new future, FitzGerald said South Shore Sales and Service is committed to serving its customers well into the future.

"We are not going away. We take care of our people. We live and die by word of mouth and reputation and getting people to come back. Our employees are looking to do the right thing for our customers. We're still going to do the same that we've done for years hopefully for years to come."

Bellotti Staffers Receive Project Lifesaver Medals

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces two of his staff members, Assistant Deputy Supt. Bill Knight and Capt. John Welch, have received the highest honor awarded this year by Project Lifesaver International.

Knight and Welch were awarded Project Lifesaver's Medal of Merit for their outstanding contributions to the program, which has proven to be extremely effective at finding and returning to safety people who suffer from Alzheimer's disease or autism or other conditions that cause individuals to become disoriented or lost.

Project Lifesaver Chief of Operations Barry Thacker said the medals were given to Knight and Welch because of their superb contributions to the organization.

"We here in this office have been amazed at what the Norfolk County Sheriff's office has done," said Thacker, who works at Project Lifesaver's

headquarters in Chesapeake, VA.

"More than other state or country agency in the country, they've really responded to our program. They have been proactive in spreading the program to other jurisdictions."

In 2004, Project Lifesaver approached Bellotti about becoming a regional leader in the search-and-rescue program, which fits individuals with an electronic bracelet that can be tracked if those persons become lost.

Since the project's inception in Massachusetts, nine searches have been conducted in Norfolk County, and each time, the person was found and safely returned to their families.

Bellotti was re-appointed as Massachusetts's statewide coordinator for Project Lifesaver last fall. Under his stewardship, Knight and Welch have become national trainers for Project Lifesaver and have trained police officers from 33 Massachusetts jurisdictions and 10 out-of-state jurisdictions.

"Project Lifesaver has proven to be aptly named, and that's why we are committed to the program," Bellotti said. "We have this technology at our disposal. It makes sense to use it to save lives."

Bellotti was the first to bring Project Lifesaver to New England. The program has since spread to 542 states and to Europe.

Those interested in signing a relative for the program or learning more about the program, may call the Sheriff's office at 781-751-3505.

China Transition To Modern State Is Traced At Library

The contrasts between the old and the new China will be explored in a free photographic lecture Monday, July 28, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

"China: Rapid Changes in an Ancient Land" is based on lecturer Barry Pell's travels in China from the modern cities of the east to the rural towns of the west during 2001 and 2004.

The presentation will give an overview of China's history and achievements, its people and culture as it strives to transition to the status of a fully developed modern nation.

Chinese society has been overhauled with its communist revolution and subse-

Barry Pell is a photojournalist and lecturer who has traveled in 147 countries and presents educational slide shows to schools, colleges and organizations throughout Massachusetts.

The program is part of the China Revealed series of exhibits and programs sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the Chinese Culture Connection of Malden and the Episcopal Quincy Chinese Center.

Bellotti's Staff Receives $178,884 In Benefit Funds

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Civil Process staff has recovered $178,884.80 in Massachusetts Laborers' Benefit Funds from a company that failed to contribute to the health, welfare and pension fund as required by law.

The Civil Process Division was appointed by the federal court to be special process server in the case against G. Conway Inc., the Boston-based construction company doing business in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The Division was forced to seize from the company's storage sites such heavy equipment as bulldozers, backhoes, paving machines and front-end loaders and auction them off to raise the money that was turned over to the Funds.

"I am pleased we could help bring justice to the workers and their families whose pensions and health insurance were jeopardized by the illegal practices of their employer," said Bellotti.

"We hope this case will serve as a deterrent to other employers who might otherwise not take seriously their obligations to their employees' benefit accounts."

Meanwhile, the Zoning Board of Appeals has set Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 7:15 p.m. as the day and time of the new hearing ordered by Duca along with his cease and desist order.

The building inspector ruled that Media Vision, Inc., failed to apply for and receive two of the required variances from the building code when the Zoning Board of Appeals approved the siting in June 2007.

The land on which the billboard is located, 315 Willard St., is owned by Valenti Biondi and occupied by Biondi's Service Center but leased for 25 years to Boston Outdoor Ventures and Media Vision of Revere, which sells the space to advertisers.

The 48-by-14-foot billboard is two-sided, advertising the vodka on one side and the Nantucket-Martha's Vineyard Ferry Lines on the other.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Fire Extinguishers For Summer Use

Have you purchased a fire extinguisher for your home, garage, or shed? If so do you hang in a conspicuous location to an exit? With summer lawn mower fuel use, grilling, and possibly outdoor candle use, deliberate placement of a fire extinguishing aid such as a fire extinguisher, can make a difference should a small incipient fire be discovered in or around your home.

However, if you decide to use one, remember these simple basics. Place yourself between the fire and an exit. Should you decide not to attempt extinguishment, an exit is then readily available so that you can remove yourself from harms way.

Either way, if applicable, make certain the home is in the process of being evacuated, and always contact the fire department to assure that the fire has not extended onto or into a structure.

Remember too, there are three basic classes of fire homeowners will encounter.

Class A: Fires in ordinary combustibles such as paper, trash, wood and clothing.

Class B: Flammable liquid fires such as fuel oil and gasoline.

Class C: Energized electrical equipment such as electrical appliances.

Consider purchasing a "multipurpose" extinguisher suitable for all three classes of fires listed here. The extinguisher will be labeled with an A-B-C, while if a letter is missing, or a line is struck through a letter, it is informing you that the extinguisher is not appropriate for that class of fire. Look for designation, A-B-C where it is suitable for all three classes.

Don't forget the acronym, PASS as well. While attempting to begin use, keep a safe distance, a minimum of 6 to 8 feet if comfortable.

Then, the P in PASS reminds us to pull and remove the pin, which unlocks the lever valve allowing us to discharge the product onto the fire.

The A in PASS reminds us to aim the extinguisher at the base of the fire.

The S in PASS reminds us to then squeeze the lever valve allowing product discharge onto the fire.

While the second S in PASS reminds us to sweep from side to side, covering the fire in entirety until the fire is extinguished.

Remember CALL THE FIRE DEPARTMENT to assure complete extinguishment and if applicable begin evacuation of a building. Most importantly, never place yourself or others in harm's way.

Thank you.

Cotting School Student Gains Work Experience At QMC

For some people, going to work every day is something they take for granted.

Others may see it as a chore.

But for young people like Quincy resident Jimmy Hui, attaining a job is an outstanding achievement. That's is why he and his fellow students in the Project Bridges program at the Cotting School in Lexington held a special recognition breakfast to thank their workplace sponsors.

For the past two years, Hui, 22, who graduates this year, has volunteered in the Medical Staff Office at Quincy Medical Staff office under the supervision of Anne Leary, director of Medical Staff Services; Marilyn McAllister, volunteer coordinator, and Susan Paquette, credentials coordinator, to gain work experience that will prepare him to enter the working world independently upon graduation.

The Project Bridges program at the Cotting School exposes students with physical and cognitive disabilities to various work experiences in the community near the Lexington campus to help them identify the jobs that best fit their skills and interests.

In Hui's case, he knew that he wanted to work in an office setting after having experiences at the Lahey Clinic and Seasons Four in Lexington. QMC enabled him to take the "next step" and by providing him with an opportunity to practice his working skills in his own community.

TIGGER AND ELMO welcome more than 100 neighbors to Eastern Nazarene College's first Neighborhood Appreciation Day.

Koch To Host Community Cookout

Mayor Thomas Koch will host his second annual Community Cookout from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 7 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The event, which Koch started last year as a candidate for mayor, will feature hot dogs and hamburgers, Moonwalks and games for youngsters, sports, bocce for adults and entertainment. The cookout is free.

"It was a great night of family, friends and fun last year, and we decided to make it a tradition," Koch said. "I want to invite everyone to stop by. These are the kinds of events that make our city special—everyone getting together to share a few laughs and relax. And there is no better place than Pageant Field for these kinds of community events."

Several hundred people attended last year's event, which is paid for by the mayor's campaign committee. Koch has been visiting community groups and organizations across the city during his first six months in office, but said he wanted to get together with as many people from around the city in a more informal setting.

"I am looking forward to seeing a lot of old friends, and hopefully meeting some new ones," Koch said. "And if folks want to talk about issues in the city, what's better than doing it over burgers and dogs?"

Friendly Visitors Sought At COA

The Quincy Council on Aging is seeking volunteers to call on the elderly who live alone and would welcome a friendly visitor.

The COA is also seeking seniors who live alone and would like a friendly visit themselves.

Call the COA at 617-376-1508 and ask to speak with Lena Trouth, the friendly visitor coordinator.

The Council is mandated by law to do background checks on all volunteers.

Eastern Nazarene College Hosts Neighborhood Appreciation Day

Eastern Nazarene College recently held its first annual Neighborhood Appreciation Day on the front lawn of its campus at 23 East Elm Ave. in Wollaston.

More than 100 neighbors from the immediate area surrounding the college came to enjoy an afternoon of fun: There were visits from Tigger and Elmo, cotton candy, ice cream sundaes, popcorn, face painting, and inflatable games.

The event was held on Flag Day and many people took the flag that were handed out and went to Quincy's parade afterward.

"It was a great day as we welcomed neighbors to our campus, to show how much we appreciate them," said Kendall Whittington, vice president of institutional advancement. "What a privilege to be part of the Wollaston Community."

Eastern Nazarene College is a 108-year-old institution that has called Wollaston home for 90 years. It is located on the former estate of Josiah Quincy, one of the six illustrious Josiah Quincys who had served as mayors of Boston and president of Harvard University. What is now Elm Avenue had served as the main avenue to the two Quincy mansions, which resided on an expansive 200-acres.

in motion. "I called and woke him up at 7 a.m., I said 'Lets do this.' Then it became a labor of love, and now we have a reason to really respect this area."

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission sponsored the event, which included a beach bash following the dedication ceremony. Over 120 attendees were treated to a cookout, several games and contests, hula-hoop instruction, and music by D.J. Joe Fasci.

Margaret Milne, secretary for the QBCC, worked closely with the City of Quincy, with Kelly-described as the 'moving force' for this dedication-and with West's siblings in preparing for this special day.

Jim Fratolillo, a past Commander of the Houghs Neck Legion Post, whose color guard took part, opened the ceremony with a prayer and spoke movingly of Raymond West and his service to his country.

"For his family and those of us who knew Raymond West, he will never be forgotten, but to the many people who never had the opportunity to know him, he is in danger of becoming a statistic.

"We cannot, we will not, let it happen...he died so that others might live in freedom, and he deserves a place in our history books. Today, the dedication of this building is in the history book."

A native of Houghs Neck, West attended Atherton Hough School, Broad Meadows, and graduated from Quincy High School. He joined the Army in March, 1968, went to Vietnam in September, and received the Bronze Star Medal for Valor just six days before he was killed.

Raymond's older brother, Robert, who returned home from service in 1968, said, "It's overwhelming that something like this is happening, we never expected anything like this...having Raymond honored this way.

"Even though it has been almost 40 years, Raymond's family members still remember every detail of what went on. Right here is where I used to drag him around on his water skis, right out in front of this boathouse."

Robert spoke of Raymond's brave action in Vietnam, for which he was awarded the Bronze Star. During a firefight, and despite being shot in the leg, West had continued to lob grenades onto a guerilla hideout until the bunker collapsed on top of the soldiers. He then dug through the rubble and captured three heavily armed NVA soldiers.

Councillor Kelly quoted from a letter he had received from the father of another Vietnam veteran in whose honor Kelly had worked to erect a memorial on Merrymount Beach.

The letter said, 'I thought the city had forgotten him. But now I step out my door, look down the street and see the flag flying and know that my son James (Walsh) is still remembered by the city of Quincy.'

Kelly expressed hope that when Raymond's father, 'Bud,' visits the beach and boathouse, he will feel similarly honored, and expressed his thanks to all involved in ensuring that the city of Quincy does not forget Raymond.

Raymond's father, Bernard 'Bud' MacDonald, his twin sister Patrice McGinty, and his sister Marsha MacDonald also attended, as well as some of Raymond's childhood friends. His mother Mildred is deceased.

Dollars and sense

Shrinking Grocery Packaging

Grocery manufacturers have figured out that consumers are less disturbed by smaller packages than they are by higher prices. So they're counting on consumers not to notice the smaller packages now on store shelves in increasing numbers for everything from ice cream to sandwich spread.

In some cases, the packaging isn't shrinking, but the contents are. Peanut butter is an example: What used to be an 18-ounce jar of a major brand of peanut butter is now 16.3 ounces — a full serving gone — in the same size jar. It's the same with margarine: same package with less in it.

It's more important than ever to read the unit cost and per-serving price of each item you buy. In many cases, what you're getting now isn't what you were getting only a few months ago. (Double check to be sure that the unit pricing sticker has been changed to reflect the now-smaller item. Some stores are slow to make those changes.)

Those who are dieting or who have special dietary requirements, such as diabetics, need to be extra vigilant about calories and carbs, as the contents of a package could be different, even if it looks the same.

Cooks, too, are finding that recipes are suffering if the ingredients suddenly change. If your recipe calls for a certain amount of tomato paste, check the can to see if it's still the size you expect. The same goes for cake and cookie mixes: If you expect to make cupcakes for three dozen children at school as you always have, check the box to see how many cupcakes the mix will actually make now.

If ever there was a time to investigate store brands, it's now. Let the unit pricing be your guide about whether an individual product is a good buy.

Start clipping and using coupons, even if you haven't done that in the past.

Suggestion: If you have a favorite food that hasn't shrunk yet, and if you can combine a purchase with coupons to make it truly worth your while, load up. Check the expiration dates to make sure you'll use it in time. It's a feel-good step, but one with benefits.

Easy Home Improvements Add Value

(ARA) - You can open the real estate section of any newspaper today and you're likely to read about how poor the housing market is. With home sales slow and market prices reduced, many people are choosing to stay put and make changes to their current home.

"Some homeowners view the lull in the real estate market as a valuable time to make positive improvements to their home," says Andy Olson, product manager at Wagner Spray Tech. "If the cost of remodeling gives you sticker shock, there are many other projects that increase a home's value that you can easily do yourself."

Enjoy your home today and make it stand out from the rest in the future by considering these DIY home improvements:

An Updated Exterior

The first thing that anyone notices, from visitors to potential buyers, is the exterior of a home. If yours hasn't been repainted in a long time and suffers from faded, scratched and chipped paint on the siding or trim, this is a project you can do yourself that will dramatically increase curb appeal.

To ensure a good result, begin by removing dirt and other debris from the surface to be painted. Look for areas where paint is chipped or bubbled and remove with a wire brush or wide-blade putty knife. Using an electric sander can also be helpful.

When painting, use tools that are made specifically to help ease and expedite the process. The Paint Crew Plus by Wagner helps tackle large projects like painting a house and produces quality results. The paint sprayer applies a professional level paint application and features variable pressure control to apply both thick and thin materials. A rugged wheeled cart makes maneuvering and transporting the Paint Crew Plus quick and effortless.

Use high pressure for spraying thick exterior latex paints. A brush will be your key tool for updating details like the front door and trim. A quality paint job will make your house stand out from the rest on the block and will last for many years to come.

A Fresh Yard

Continue to increase curb appeal by taking a look at your yard. A manicured lawn and strategically placed plants will enhance the appearance of your home and is also very enjoyable for those that live there.

Clean up any dated lawn decor, garden tools, or other items, especially in the backyard where they sometimes collect. How does your patio furniture and deck look? If they are worn, it's time for an update. Use a paint sprayer on low pressure for thinner materials like stains. Repaint other items such as pots and children's toys for a fresh, new look.

An Interior Facelift

Your walls are a key component for an updated interior appearance. Consider a new paint color for an immediate facelift that will make any room appear cleaner. Light paint colors work well because they always brighten a room. If you are feeling daring, think about trying one of the deep and beautiful colors that are popular right now in the color palettes at many paint companies.

A good roller is the DIYer's best friend for interior wall painting. Start by filling in holes and nicks with putty. Sand and spot prime those areas before painting. Priming helps ensure a professional looking paint job that lasts longer, so it is worth your time. After walls have been primed, apply paint with a hand roller or for continuous paint flow, use the roller arm attachment included with the Paint Crew Plus and enjoy the fresh look of your home.

Update Details

It's the small details of a home that can really make it look dated. Do you still have the same lamps as you did in the 70s? Consider replacing them with updated versions. If you can't afford to replace light fixtures, why not just replace the shades and other covers for a new look? Light home accessories like knobs and handles in the kitchen and bathroom can be an affordable way to update the area without a costly cabinet replacement. New photos and artwork also add a nice touch.

Patching a Vinyl Floor

Q. There's a scorch mark on my kitchen floor caused when my son dropped a lighted match (don't ask, it was a teenage thing, I guess) on it. I tried scrubbing it out, but it seems to be melted into the vinyl. How can I fix it? — Jeri in San Antonio

A. Extreme heat and solvents are enemies of the vinyl floor — they can eat right into the surface and are difficult to repair or cover up. It may be better to replace the damaged section, and it's one of the easier home repairs.

If the floor is vinyl tile, then loosen the damaged tile (a heat gun will soften the adhesive) and pry it up with a putty knife. Soften the old adhesive with mineral spirits (being careful not to contact the surrounding tiles) and scrape away. Spread new flooring adhesive and press a new tile into place, wiping away any excess adhesive that oozes out of the edges.

A floor that has sheet vinyl (the vinyl flooring was rolled out in one big piece and trimmed to fit the room) can also be patched. First, get a patch of matching vinyl — if you don't have any extra, "steal" a piece from underneath an appliance or from the inside of the kitchen pantry if the flooring extends there — by cutting out a square using a sharp utility knife.

Place the patch square over the damaged area and trace around it to mark your cutting area. Remove the patch. Using the utility knife (change the blade if possible), cut along the lines. Use a putty knife to pry up the damaged section. As above, clean away old adhesive, apply new adhesive and press the patch into place. To make sure it holds, cover the patch with wax paper and stack some books on top for at least a day.

Finish the patch by applying liquid seam sealer around the patch edges.

What To Consider When Investing In Real Estate

(ARA) - We all understand the income potential of investing in real estate. Some people decide to buy apartments or commercial buildings to rent and manage themselves. This can be rewarding, but can also be a lot of work. What if you could have the benefits of a commercial investment, but without the many subsequent responsibilities?

Many people are finding tenant in common (TIC), or undivided fractional interest, to be an investment option that makes sense. TIC is a real estate method in which a group of people buy a significant real estate asset together, often much larger than they could obtain individually. Each investor is on the title and deed for their percentage of ownership and they own and control the property. Each owner receives rental income and the tax benefits of traditional real estate investing.

"Tenant in common ownership can benefit the individual new to real estate investing or seasoned pros. Some investors are looking for a new source of income post-retirement. Others have managed apartment complexes, mobile home parks, etc., themselves, but they don't want the hassles of maintenance and management any longer," says Curt Smiley, owner of TIC Investments, Inc., a real estate company focused on offering individuals access to corporate-grade real estate. "TICs open up new options for investors with many benefits."

If you are thinking about investing in real estate, Smiley suggests you consider the following:

- Building Occupancy
How much of the building is currently leased? When investing, you should know the occupancy percentage and existing lease terms for each tenant.

- Risk Assessment

A property with a majority of the space leased to government agencies or Fortune 500 companies generally offers less risk than properties where a majority of the tenants are smaller, independent companies.

- History

Before investing, you should have adequate information about the history of the building and the history of the real estate company packaging the TIC opportunity.

- Experienced Counsel

TIC investing can be complicated. It's best to work with a TIC representative who has years of experience and knowledge in the industry. Can they tailor a program to match your specific needs? Can they analyze the proforma to determine if the projections are realistic? All your questions should be answered in detail.

There are many benefits of TIC investing. Here are some of the reasons why people are choosing this method:

- Equal Ownership

Smiley explains that TIC ownership allows each investor to have the same ownership rights regardless of the equity invested so that no individual or group has direct control.

- Complete Investment

Investors work with a sponsor, who is the real estate company that packages and offers the TIC opportunity to the public. The sponsor first locates and secures the property then performs due diligence on the asset. The sponsor also obtains an appraisal, Phase 1 and the non-recourse loan thus the price the investor pays is a full, complete investment.

- Control without Hassle

One of the most notable benefits of TIC ownership is the property management arrangement. The property management company works directly for the TIC owners. This characteristic enables investors to have a voice in all the substantial decision-making on the property without worrying about the day-to-day, tedious aspects normally associated with owning real estate.

- Income

Historically, TIC Investments have returned a 10 to 15 percent average annualized return to owners. "Just as with any investment, there are risks, but many investors are very successful by choosing TICs. A good TIC representative will work directly with you to analyze your investment goals and risk tolerance, find the best opportunities and diversify your investment if possible," says Smiley.

- Tax Benefits

A 1031 Exchange is an IRS procedure which allows investment property owners to defer paying capital gains and depreciation recapture taxes on their equity principal. A TIC investment also allows individuals to write-off property depreciation, interest on the loan, etc., often sheltering much of the owners' monthly income.

An investment in a TIC property offers attractive advantages, but it's not for everyone. A TIC option may not be right for you depending on your particular tax situation or if you want complete control over the daily responsibilities of your property.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, July 12, 2008, at approximately 7 p.m., Officer Patrick Folan was on patrol in the Quincy Square. As he approached the intersection of Cottage Avenue and Chestnut Street, he observed a man and a woman who appeared to be arguing. The man then violently and aggressively pushed the woman with both his hands in an opened palm manner. This physical assault appeared to be intentional and with enough force that the woman was thrown back and almost fell to the pavement.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Folan began to pull over to assist the woman, the male suspect then turned away and began walking off agitated and angry. Officer Folan drove over to the suspect and requested that he stop walking, which he did. The suspect was told to place his hands on the hood of the cruiser and he was then handcuffed. The suspect, in a "shocked" voice, demanded to know what he did. Officer Folan informed the man that he witnessed him physically assault a woman on the street. The suspect then stated, "I didn't do anything."

The officer notified Quincy Police Dispatch of his location and requested another Officer to respond for assistance. Officer Christopher Klier arrived on scene and guarded the suspect while Officer Folan questioned the victim, who stated that she did not sustain any type of injury. Officer Folan noted that the victim appeared to be under the influence of alcohol based on the strong odor of alcoholic beverage emanating from her breath. She also spoke with slow, slurred speech and her eyes had a glassy bloodshot appearance.

The victim stated that the suspect is her boyfriend; they have been dating for approximately three years and currently reside together with no children in common. This information was important in order to determine if the assault and battery met the criteria for domestic violence and this was established based on their dating relationship.

The victim then asked, "What's going on?" Officer Folan told her that he witnessed the assault and immediately the victim stated, "He didn't hit me - There was no assault."

The Officer told the victim what he saw and she said, "Yeah - he pushed me but he didn't hit me." The victim was informed that physically pushing her constituted Assault and Battery and that since they were engaged in a dating relationship, this was a Domestic Assault and Battery incident.

Officer Folan asked the victim if she was in fear of of the suspect and offered her the option of obtaining a 209A restraining order. She declined the offer of the order by saying, "This is stupid - he didn't do anything." She was told again by the Officer that he witnessed the assault and that was why the suspect was under arrest. The victim protested and insisted that her boyfriend did nothing wrong.

Officer Folan then spoke with the suspect, who angrily stated that he didn't commit any crime and he was being harassed by the Police. The suspect also had a strong odor of alcoholic beverage on his breath and appeared to be under the influence of alcoholic beverages. The suspect continued to deny doing anything wrong and as he was pat frisked, he became belligerent and began shouting that he was innocent. He then began insulting the Officers by saying, "Why don't you work in the Bronx instead of this pancake job?"

During the transport to the station, the suspect continuously made derogatory statements against police officers, particularly Quincy police officers.

The victim was transported home and the suspect, a 48-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with Domestic Assault and Battery. A domestic violence report was also filed.

Nice Work!

In this case, and in most domestic violence cases, the victim does not have the authority to decide whether she/he wants to pursue charges. If the Officer has probable cause to believe that the victim was harmed, he will make the arrest. There are many reasons why a victim may not want the abuser to be arrested but victims should be aware of the following:

*The violence does not go away.

*The period of time between assaults usually gets

Quincy Secures 4th Seed, Plays Norwood

Morrisette Wins But Falls Shy Of Playoffs

By SEAN BRENNAN

A sharply-played 2-0 win over Holbrook Legion, in the final regular season game of the year, helped place Morrisette Legion's final overall record to 6-11-1, but the win was not enough to propel them into the District 6 East playoffs.

Morrisette finished their season two points behind Cohasset Legion (7-11 overall) for the fifth and final spot in the District 6 East post-season and now, for the second straight summer, the team will be on the outside looking in as the playoffs start up this week.

The star of the 2-0 win over Holbrook Legion was starting pitcher Glen Misho. Misho hurled a complete-game (7 innings), two-hitter, striking out seven batters and allowing just one walk.

Morrisette scored the game-winning run in the third inning. Alex Tragellis got the winning rally started by reaching on an infield error. After stealing second base, Tragellis moved over to third on a sacrifice fly off the bat of Joe Vialpando.

With two outs and Tragellis on third, Steve Connolly drove a single to left, scoring Tragellis with the first run of the game. Connolly then swiped second to get himself into scoring position. Ryan Louis' two-out RBI single plated Connolly with the second run of the inning and the Morrisette defense and the pitching of Misho shutdown Holbrook Legion the rest of the game.

For Morrisette the win was a nice way to end the season. After opening the year with a 5-3-1 record (through nine games), the team struggled through an eight-game losing streak. A streak that took their playoff hopes out of their hands and forcing them to wait and see if certain post-season scenarios worked out in their favor, which didn't happen.

Cohasset snuck into that final District 6 East playoff spot after beating Holbrook a week ago. Holbrook had a chance to earn that final spot even after losing to Cohasset, but consecutive losses including the 2-0 loss to Morrisette-to end the season eliminated them from contention.

Next year Morrisette will be looking to replace six veterans from this year's squad who will be too old to compete in Legion ball when the season kicks off next June.

The six Morrisette players who participated in their final Legion game against Holbrook last week include Jon Garland, Steve Connolly, Eric Engleheart, Matt Edgerly, Glen Misho and Joe Lousararian.

District 6 East Playoff Picture

The District 6 East and District 6 West playoffs begin this week with five best-of-three playoff series. The top-5 District 6 East teams will be matched up against the top-5 District 6 West teams (in descending order), with the lowest seeded teams in each district playing the top-seeded teams from each district.

District 6 East's top seed, Weymouth Post 79 (15-3), will play Norfolk Legion in the first round.

Braintree (14-4), District 6 East's number two seed, will square off against Needham Legion in first round play.

Milton (14-5), the number three seed in District 6 East, will start their first round series on the road against Foxboro Legion.

Quincy (9-8) earned the number four seed in District 6 East and will start its best-of-three first round series on the road against Norwood Legion (Game One was Monday night). Quincy, which secured its playoff spot last week, will be playing in its second consecutive District playoffs after a two-year drought.

Last season under first-year head coach Dan Sweeney, Quincy Legion surprised the area baseball scene by storming all the way into the American Legion second round before losing a series to Brockton Post 35, two games to none (2-0).

Quincy, which in 2006 finished with a 2-18 record, defeated Foxboro Post 93 in the 2007 District 6 playoffs two games to one (2-1) for their first playoff series win in three decades. The team finished the 2007 season with an impressive 14-9 overall record.

This season the team is led by Legion veterans Mike Leone (.529 average), Mike LeBel (.375 avg., 1.28 ERA), Bill Kiley (.362 avg.), Tom Conley, Scott Warwick and Steve Kussman and will be looking to get back to the second round once again.

Cohasset Legion, District 6 East's final playoff representative, will play District 6 West's top seed, Walpole Legion, in the final first round playoff series.

*The level of assault gets worse over time, as does the chance of injury/death.

*Alcohol/drugs are often used as an excuse by the abuser and often believed by the victim.

There is help available for both the victim and the abuser. Any Police Officer can help you. Even though the victim in this case did not want help, Officer Folan effectively let the abuser know that he can't get away with hitting and he started the process of making help available by submitting the domestic violence report. Court Advocates will contact the victim to assist her in court and offer her counseling. The abuser will also be offered counseling.

VERY RECENT SCAM: Beware of scammers calling themselves "Security" on behalf of the Quincy Credit Union (and other Credit Unions across the country) seeking your account number and PIN to re-activate your account. The call is a recording.

According to Quincy Police Communications Operator Mike Bowes, the telephone number 515-414-2182 is located in Ogden, Idaho. When I called the number, I received a recorded message about free telephone services.

A "Google" check of the telephone number reveals comments from across the country that they received the same fraudulent message. No one should ever give out his or her personal account numbers to someone who is calling you claiming to be with the particular institution.

As always, never give out your PIN and be sure to change that number periodically. If there is a reason to believe there is a problem with your account, call the bank or credit union directly by looking up their number, not calling the number given to you by the scammer.

If the scam involves a credit card, again, look up the telephone number on the back of the credit card to clear up any concerns. The Quincy Credit Union has been informing their members via a recorded message on their general number as well as on their internet site.

SCAM PREVENTION AND EDUCATION SERIES

As part of the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit's ongoing presentations on scams, this is another offer that you may receive and should think twice about getting involved in. This offer came through the mail and involved an alleged "secret shopping" service. When you call the contact phone number on the letter, they tell you that, as a result of your high level of integrity, you've been selected by Service International Mystery Shopping Evaluation to become a "Secret Shopper."

First, you'll complete a Probationary Training Task, directed by Research Associate Derek Hoffman. For this task, you'll act as a customer at selected businesses where you'll evaluate the quality of service provided by the businesses. In order to complete this Probationary Task you will be provided with a check (already enclosed with the introductory letter) to pay for the mystery shop, to be disbursed as described below:

To be spent at (1) Ruby King	$ 17.00
(2) Money Gram Transfer	$ 2,900.00
(3) Money Gram service charge	$ 99.00
(4) Western Union Transfer	$ 2,000.00
(5) Western Union service charge	$ 99.00
(6) Wal-Mart	$ 70.00

In addition, $400 will be distributed to you for Employee Probational Training Pay and Expenses. The total amount of the enclosed check is $4,975. After successful completion of this task, you will be accepted as an employee. For only a minimum of 8 hours a week, you will get to represent this firm as "Research Personnel," or a "Customer Service Evaluator."

However, there is one significant problem: the check is fraudulent. The check is just one of many that were stolen out of the mail and then forged for illicit gain.

According to the Better Business Bureau, the company itself, "International Mystery Shopping" (listed at 3230 State Street, Suite B in Santa Barbara, CA 93105) is no longer in business. When it was, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) filed charges against this company for "using deceptive marketing tactics when selling their at-home certification programs for bartenders and mystery shoppers." The "514" area code phone numbers given as a contact for the company are listed in Montreal, Canada.

According to Ripoff Report.com, the "1-800" number where you are supposed to fax your "Customer Service Evaluations" of the selected businesses is associated with a "Pacific Lottery" scam out of Canada. Finally, the address on the check itself is from the "Equestrian Pointe Apts" at 8500 Harwood Dr in North Richland Hills, Texas—an apartment complex that hasn't existed under that name for at least a year.

How does this scam work?

According to Detective Wayne Goodman of the North Richland Hills Police Department, the alleged company gets your name from an online questionnaire about your interest in mystery shopping. Then using a free website to search your address, they send you the letter and the forged check. Once you cash the check and perform your "mystery shop" at the money transfer companies, they've scammed you. They can now retrieve the total $4,290 at any worldwide Money Gram and Western Union location (not the supposed California business address you sent it to).

You, however, are now financially responsible for the $4,975 debt, as well as any other "bounced-check" fees resulting from cashing a bad check. According to Detective Goodman, this scam has reached people in many areas throughout the country, including Georgia and, now, Massachusetts.

Playoff Bid Over For Wollaston Blue

Senior Babe Ruth

This past Saturday, the Wollaston Blue lost to Braintree 3-2, officially ending the Blue's Senior Babe Ruth playoff hopes.

Starting pitcher Dan Myers held Braintree in check; limiting Braintree to five hits and only two earned runs, while striking out eight and pitching himself out of a sixth inning bases-loaded jam.

Dave Griffin led the Blue's offensive attack with two hits and two runs scored. Greg Ouellette and Dan Munkley each finished the game with a RBI.

In other games last week, the Blue knocked off Wollaston Black 8-3.

Myers allowed four hits and struck out nine. Griffin finished the win with three hits and a run scored.

Other contributors on offense included Myers (hit, two RBI), Kevin Magoon (two hits, RBI), Joe Edgerly

(two hits, RBI) and Chris Timmins (hit, two runs).

The Blue also were defeated 5-1 by South Boston last week. Magoon pitched four innings without allowing an earned run and Griffin knocked in the Blue's lone run.

Wollaston Black Finish Week 1-1

The Wollaston Black Senior Babe Ruth team finished last week with a 1-1 record. The team defeated All-Dorchester Sports League (ADSL) 10-8 last Thursday and dropped an 8-3 decision to Wollaston Blue earlier in the week.

In the game against ADSL, the Black scored five runs in the seventh inning to complete a 10-8 come-from-behind victory. The team racked up ten runs on 16 hits.

The offensive contributors included Steve Matos (two hits, two RBI), Matt Jaehnig (three hits), William Head (two hits, two RBI), Sean Naughton (two hits, two RBI), Matt Sheridan (two hits) and Leroy Wallace (two hits).

The defense was highlighted by the play of centerfielder Devin Hudson, who made two spectacular running catches in the outfield and threw out a runner at the plate in the seventh inning to help preserve the win for pitcher Sean McDonald.

Earlier last week, the Black lost 8-3 to Wollaston Blue.

Elvin Nunez had two RBI in the seventh inning, plating Ryan Stifler and Tim Martin, both of whom reached base on singles to start the frame.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Do You Know What You're Putting On Your Skin?

(ARA) - Bath and beauty products do more than just keep us clean, they make us look and feel our best. And in a 24/7 society where busy is the norm, a simple bath or great skin treatment can be a relaxing personal moment in an otherwise hectic day.

Now more than ever, people are using bath products that are made organically through green processes because it's not only good for them, but also good for the environment.

"Going green is more than just an environmental concept, it's something that can have a dramatic impact on personal health," says Justin Gomolka at Best Bath Store, a company that makes 100 percent natural bath and body, skin care and hair care products. "We're seeing more interest in natural products that respect human life, animal life, and the environment we live in — something our entire line supports. We do not test on animals or use harmful synthetic preservatives or additives such as sodium laurel sulfate or parabens. One must be on the lookout for greenwashing, where companies claim to be natural and/or safe for the environment, but use harmful synthetic ingredients."

These are the top bath and beauty trends of 2008:

Trend 1) Organic Soaps

When you're washing your skin, are you using something that contains harsh chemicals? Don't forget, your skin is your body's largest organ and the first line of defense against disease and infections. If you look at the ingredients of your common everyday soap, you might find it difficult to pronounce the list. Animal fats and synthetic ingredients help make soaps cheap for large companies, but wreak havoc on your skin and overall health! For this reason, organic soap made from all-natural ingredients is a top beauty trend. For example, handmade soap from Best Bath Store (www.BestBathStore.com) uses luxurious quality ingredients that include organic extracts, essential oils, and cleansing particles harvested from the earth. Because of the use of organic ingredients, this soap is gentle enough for even the most sensitive skin types.

Trend 2) Safe Cosmetics / Cruelty Free / Environmentally Friendly

Traditional cosmetics and bath products can contain unhealthy ingredients. Exposure to one of these chemicals is unlikely to cause health problems, but repeated exposure can be linked to serious health issues like cancer and birth defects. More people are seeking safe cosmetics that they know won't be causing them, their families, or any animals harm. You can do three things to help buy healthier products. First, look for products that do not test on animals or companies that are PETA business friends. Second, visit www.SafeCosmetics.org to find a list of companies that have pledged to keep their products safe from unhealthy compounds. Lastly, find out how a company packages their products and ships them. Do they use Styrofoam or corn starch peanuts?

Trend 3) Aromatherapy

Different scents have the power to trigger sensations in the brain such as relaxation, calmness, alertness and more. Lavender is a popular ingredient used in bath products that is believed to have the power to promote relaxation and relieve stress, important for today's constantly hectic lifestyle. Lavender has been used as a natural medicine to help relieve headaches, migraines and insomnia for centuries. Other scents and herbs have properties that help keep the body balanced and healthy. More people are now looking for these ingredients in their favorite soaps and lotions.

Trend 4) Real Results

People want a luxurious, natural product, but they also want results from their beauty regimen. From wrinkles to acne, natural ingredients just might be the cure you've been seeking. For example, acne medicines made from all natural ingredients treat problem skin gently, great for sensitive skin types. Additionally, some natural ingredients may work better because the body isn't able to build up a tolerance to its effectiveness like it often does with chemical treatment options. Natural, green ingredients also can make a difference for other beauty concerns such as wrinkles and skin tone.

Trend 5) Not Just for Ladies

Bath and beauty isn't just for females any more. Products are being made specifically for the needs of children and men too. Fun, natural products make bath time enjoyable for kids of all ages, helping them stay clean and healthy. And men are realizing that looking their best today and in the future requires more effort than a simple daily shower. An increasing number of men are seeking out all-natural soaps, shampoos and shaving creams because these products give them better results and are better for their body.

Got The Workday Blues?

(ARA) - With all the sunshine and warm weather, we all want to spend time outdoors doing our favorite activities like working in the garden or playing our favorite sports. But for many of us, that's not an option during the workday.

It's only natural to feel a little down about being stuck inside all day when the weather is so nice outside, says Julia Kennedy, career services director for Everest Universities throughout North America. If you do have a case of the summertime work blues, Kennedy says there are many ways to cheer yourself up.

For example, if you have a window, open it to let the fresh air in. You can also bring nature into your office by putting a bouquet of flowers on your desk or creating a desk-sized rock garden. You should also try to spend as much time as possible outdoors and build in special times for getting out of the office. You can pack your lunch and eat it outdoors, or take an afternoon coffee break to walk around the block. Lastly, Kennedy suggests that you talk to your boss about flex-time or working from home once a week, if you really want to fit more freedom for outdoor time into your schedule.

But if your dislike of your job goes deeper than simply the summertime blues, Kennedy says your dissatisfaction should be taken seriously. "Everybody has a bad day at work, but if you're having a lot of bad days, you might have the workplace blues, and they can have a real effect on your quality of life," she says.

Kennedy suggests asking yourself the following questions to fairly assess your current work environment: Do you feel trapped at work? Do you dread going to work in the morning? Do you see real potential for advancement at work? Do you have a good relationship with your boss? Do you constantly dream of the weekends?

"Ask yourself, 'How often am I feeling this way? Am I blaming my boss or co-workers for the way I'm feeling consistently?' Once you're aware of the reasons why you feel a certain way, it usually becomes quite obvious what change is necessary," Kennedy adds.

New evidence from north of the border shows that Americans are not alone in our work problems. In fact, half of all Canadians report suffering from occasional bouts of work-induced blues, according to a December 2007 survey commissioned by Everest College of Business, Technology and Healthcare — Ontario's leading career college.

Feelings of job dissatisfaction can range from mild frustration to consistent feelings of unhappiness. On the same survey by Everest College of Business, 22 percent of respondents indicated that their salary was the most depressing thing about their job, whereas 12 percent said a lack of opportunity for career advancement was. Perhaps more troubling, 40 percent of respondents believed that their current job did not offer a lot of opportunity for advancement.

"If you are reaching a moderate level of job dissatisfaction and have not yet started thinking about alternatives, it's time to start learning about new opportunities of which there are many," says Kennedy. "Career fit is important to happiness on the job. Retraining can play a key role in changing lives for the better and most of our students are working while learning new skills to transition to a new career path."

Long Plane Ride Challenges Body

Q. This summer I'll be taking my dream vacation to New Zealand. I have never flown on a plane for more than four hours, and even then my back and knees begin to bother me. A friend suggested I do exercises on the plane to keep from sitting down for so long. What type of exercises can I do in a cramped airplane?

A. Air travel can be a challenge, especially if you're sitting for long periods of time. The secret is to plan before your trip to avoid any discomfort while flying.

First, if you have any medical conditions or concerns, speak with your physician before you leave. Be sure to include the length of the airplane ride, stopovers, etc., so he or she will have the information needed to suggest a plan to help you have a smooth trip.

Next, begin by getting in shape as much as you can in the weeks leading up to your trip. The fitter you are, the more your body will be able to tolerate the long plane ride to New Zealand. Your muscles, bones and joints are not accustomed to sitting for extended periods of time, especially in the small confines of an airplane seat. The stronger your body, the better you'll feel upon arrival.

Cardiovascular, strength and flexibility exercises should all be part of your pre-trip exercise routine. Walking or jogging, a total-body strength training routine and flexibility exercises or classes such as Pilates or yoga can be a great combination. If you already have an exercise program, continue with your routine and add any needed exercises.

Remember to practice good posture in the weeks leading up to your trip. Try to develop a strong core — which includes your whole trunk region — and avoid slumping forward or leaning to the side while driving or sitting at home. Practicing these habits can help you develop the technique and strength to do this while on a plane. Poor posture while sitting can cause problems with your lower back, neck and shoulders. Sitting for hours on an airplane with this poor posture can begin to cause discomfort.

Once on the plane, remember to practice these good posture techniques and continue to move your legs, arms and neck throughout the flight. Many airlines offer exercise suggestions on in-flight screens to remind passengers to move their limbs every hour.

Sleeping may seem like the best way to get through a long trip, however, if you plan to sleep, ask someone you are flying with or a flight attendant to wake you occasionally so you can get up and walk, stretch and get the blood flowing throughout your body. While sitting, you can move your legs, roll your ankles, stretch your wrist, shoulders and neck — and just keep moving.

Although the space is limited on an airplane, you can still move enough to keep your body strong and happy on your way to your dream vacation.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

BABIES AND BOTTLED WATER

Babies may be accustomed to being bottle-fed, but should they be drinking bottled water? According to the Centers for Disease Control, cavities among preschool children are on the rise. Of course, the usual suspects are sugary drinks, sugar-laden snacks, and/or poor oral hygiene, but dentists also have another culprit in mind. The increasing use of bottled water is also thought to play a role in the increasing number of baby teeth with decay. While bottled water may be promoted as being healthier than tap water, it does not contain fluoride or other important minerals. Filters in home water-purifying systems may also play a role in excluding these decay-fighting elements from babies. If so, the dentist may recommend fluoride treatments.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncertainty over workplace policy creates anxiety and confusion among your colleagues. Don't be surprised if you're asked, once again, to help work things out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The work-week keeps you busy typing up loose ends and checking data that needs to be verified. The weekend offers a chance to relax and restore your spent energies.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is not the best time to go to extremes to prove a point. Better to set a sensible goal now and move forward. There'll be time later to take the bolder course.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A step-by-step progression is the better way to move ahead. Taking shortcuts could be risky at this time. Important news arrives on the 31st.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid getting drawn into workplace disputes that should be handled by those directly involved. Instead, spend your energy developing those new ideas.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You still need to be prudent about money matters. But things start to ease by the end of the week. A weekend encounter with an old friend brings welcome news.

BORN THIS WEEK: You handle challenging situations with boldness when necessary and caution when called for.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said that happiness is not perfected until it is shared.

We all know that a happy person is not necessarily free from trouble. It indicates they do not allow troubles to overwhelm them.

In case after case it has been proved happy people have learned contentment comes from an inner peace within themselves. They find cause for gratitude in all things. In fact, some of their problems and difficulties have even bettered their lives.

Of course, there are many ways to find happiness. But one of the best ways is with other people. One seldom finds it alone...

It can, for example, be found in inviting a friend, an acquaintance, a neighbor to attend church with you. Even if you are turned down, the effort itself can give you a happy feeling, because you tried. If your invitation is accepted, you will be even more happy. Many, many people can testify how true this is... Isn't it worth trying?

Germantown Appreciation Day Honors Business, Community Leaders

Hundreds attended the 2008 Germantown Community Appreciation Day which honored business and community leaders whose contributions help make the Germantown Neighborhood Center a success.

The event featured dancing, music and games for all ages, but the major event was the award ceremony.

Master of Ceremonies Larry Norton welcomed the guests and Mayor Thomas Koch and District Attorney William Keating presented the awards. Norton is president of Vietnam Combat Veterans of Quincy.

Lisa McBirney-Aucoin was named Community Advocate for 2008 while the Germantown Unsung Hero was Claire Brennan, Associate Director of the center.

Hugh McPhee, Manager, Applebees; Sandra Cavanaugh of Superfitness; Brian T. Brown, Yale Electric Sales Representative, and Steward Bunker, General Manager, Sears, were presented with the "Community Business Partnership Award - 2008."

The Community Center, currently housed in St. Boniface School, serves more than 1600 residents a year including 200 young people who participate in the summer camp and activities.

ARCHITECTURAL RENDERING OF B.J.'s WHOLESALE CLUB's proposed outlet and parking at Crown Colony in West Quincy.

Davis Calls Neighborhood Meeting For Aug. 20

B.J.'s Hopes To Break Ground In November

By LAURA GRIFFIN

B.J.'s Wholesale Club management aims to open an outlet at 200 Crown Colony Drive next August, according to developer Michael DiGuiseppi of Coastal Partners, Beverly Farms.

DiGuiseppi recently outlined his firm's proposal for a $20 million investment in a B.J.'s store on the site of the former Patriot Ledger printing plant at the entrance to Crown Colony in West

Quincy.

"A lot of people support B.J.'s tenancy," DiGuiseppi said, noting that Quincy's 8000 members of the B.J.'s Warehouse Club could enjoy the convenience of a local outlet instead of driving to Weymouth.

DiGuiseppi's timetable calls for ground-breaking in November.

Before that becomes a reality, however, DiGuiseppi's firm must win clearance from state and city officials, and, according to City Council President Jay Davis, support from the neighbors in Ward 4.

Davis will hold a neighborhood meeting at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 20 at the Ward 4 Community Center.

In addition, Conservation Commissioners have continued their B.J.'s hearing to Wednesday, Aug. 6 at 8:10 p.m. and the Planning Board to Aug. 13.

Final approval rests with the City Council, acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority. Those hearings have not been scheduled.

DiGuiseppi is, also, meeting with members of the Crown Colony Association which does not have an official voice in the process.

Speedy approval would benefit the city and its residents, according to DiGuiseppi and his attorney, Robert Fleming, who met recently with The Quincy Sun editorial staff.

According to Davis, Coastal Partners must conclude the permit process in a limited period.

While some might prefer an office building or condominiums at the site, DiGuiseppi said there is no market for either at this time and he believes the B.J.'s proposal is the best option, regardless of the market.

DiGuiseppi said that, originally, 28 firms bid for the 7.5 acre property. Only six bids qualified for the final round and all of those bids were for retail operations.

In mid-April, DiGuiseppi's firm, Coastal Partners, executed a purchase and sale agreement for the

Tourism Surges With Spotlight On John Adams

Tourism in Quincy is surging and there's no end in sight, according to Mark Carey, Executive Director of Discover Quincy, who said the news just gets better and better.

The latest boon to the city is the announcement that the HBO production on John Adams has been nominated for 23 Emmy awards for the best mini-series on television last year. That's the highest number of nominations for any program in any category for 2007.

The series' lead actress, actor and supporting actor as well as its costumes, directing music and writing have been nominated for the awards.

The new publicity adds up to more tourism in Quincy,

Mayor Plans City Website Overhaul

Mayor Thomas Koch announced plans Tuesday to completely overhaul the city's website to create an internet presence that opens new lines of communications with residents, makes doing business with the city easier and provides more useful information on a daily basis.

The city has issued a formal solicitation to companies interested in making the sweeping changes in the city's website, and the current site www.ci.quincy.ma.us, now features a survey asking residents which features they would most like to see on reinvented city website.

"Communicating with our residents and making their government easier to navigate is one of our most important responsibilities and a thriving website must be part of it," Koch said "The opportunities available to us are truly exciting and

Protecting Against West Nile Virus

Due to the higher than usual number of culex mosquitoes found in Quincy traps the Quincy Health Department is beefing up their education efforts on West Nile Virus (WNV).

The following are tips to protect yourself and your family during the summer months:

West Nile Virus (WNV)

West Nile virus is a mosquito-carried virus that usually causes mild or no illness in humans. In rare cases, WNV can cause encephalitis (swelling of the brain) or meningitis (swelling of the lining of the brain and spinal cord).

Protect Yourself

Your risk of getting ill from WNV is low, but you can lower your risk even more by trying to avoid mosquito bites.

Here are some things you can do to reduce your chances of being bitten by a mosquito:

Schedule outdoor events to avoid the hours between dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.

When you are outdoors, wear a long-sleeved shirt, long pants and socks.

Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET, picaridin or oil of lemon eucalyptus. Always follow the directions on the label.

Make sure window and door screens do not have holes in them.

Remove Standing Water

Mosquitoes grow in standing (stagnant) water. Getting rid of that water helps to lower the number of mosquitoes in your area. Look around outside your house for containers and other things that might collect water and turn them over, regularly empty them, or dispose of them.

For Bravery In Liberating France In World War II

French Award William Tucker Legion of Honor Medal

Former Quincy resident William "Bill" Tucker, 84, was presented the French Legion of Honor Medal recently by Francois Gauthier, France's Consul General in Boston.

Gauthier and Governor Deval Patrick joined some 300 persons at the Landham Hotel to salute Tucker and four other veterans for their service to France in World War II.

Patrick greeted Gauthier in French, then praised the five veterans for their courage on the battlefield in the Second World War.

"France will never forget what America has done for her," Gauthier said, referring to American soldiers who liberated France from German forces in 1944.

Gauthier then presented the French Legion Medal first instituted by Napoleon for outstanding service to France. His presentation to Tucker follows:

"At considerable personal risk, your bravery helped make (St. Mere Eglise) the first French town liberated by American soldiers during this war.

"In the days that followed, you were at the forefront of the Allied progress in the hedgerows of Normandy. You then fought in Holland, where you made the combat jump during Operation Market Garden in September 1944, in the Rhineland, and in the Battle of the Bulge, where you were severely wounded in January of 1945.

"Prior to D-Day, you had also made combat jumps in Italy in 1943. You wrote several books about your story and the fierce battles of Normandy and beyond. A recipient of the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart, you are also an honorary citizen of Sainte Mere Eglise."

Tucker was a teenager of 18 when he joined the Parachute Infantry Regiment. Near the war's end, he was one of the hundreds of American paratroopers who landed in the town of Sainte Mere Eglise on the night before D-Day and the Normandy landings.

"This was the first city liberated in World War II," Tucker said this week in describing the parachute landing.

During the early morning landings, some of the buildings were on fire, illuminating the sky, and making the paratroopers easy targets. Many died in the fires or were shot by Germans as they were caught in trees or on utility poles. One soldier was tangled and hanging from the church spire.

After the war, residents rebuilt their town and created a stained glass window depicting St. Mary with an American paratrooper.

Tucker came home where he studied at Boston University and Boston University Law School. He worked on several of John F. Kennedy's campaigns and wrote four books.

One of those books, "Parachute Soldier," described his experiences in the parachute unit. The book was published in 1994.

Tucker became chairman of the United States Interstate Commerce Commission and a trustee for the Department of Justice.

"They don't make guys like him too often," his friend Richard Keane said of Tucker. Keane and John (Butch) Mahoney joined Tucker's family at the award ceremony on Bastille Day.

Keane's home is now in Harwichport but he maintained an apartment in Quincy until recently.

The French President signs the decrees designating Legion of Honor awards which were also presented this year to Dr. Merrill Feldman, Swampscott; James Gabaree, Newburyport, William Ulwick of Abington and John Wessmiller, Chatham.

Special Containers Donated City Launches Recycling Pilot Program In Parks

A pilot program encouraging recycling at four of the city's major parks is now underway thanks to a donation of special containers to the Quincy Recycling Committee.

Large blue barrels lined with biodegradable bags are now in place to collect recyclables at Pageant Field, the Ryan Boathouse, Adams Field and the Fenno Street playground. The recycling committee, a collaboration of city departments and residents, picked those parks for the pilot program because of the high volume of summer-time traffic, officials said.

The barrels were donated by Marina Kelly, a member of the recycling committee and the Quincy Environmental Network. The city's Park Department and Department of Public Works will use existing resources to empty the barrels regularly throughout the summer and into the fall.

Under the city's new trash collection contract, the city gets paid a fee for the amount of garbage it recycles, and city officials plan to keep close track of how much recyclable material is recovered through the program.

"The committee is working tremendously hard to advocate for programs like these, and we are very grateful for the donation. I know the results will be positive," said John Sullivan, the program manager at the DPW.

Kelly donated the barrels to the recycling committee in memory of her mother, who died of breast cancer in 2006. Kelly said she believes that her mother's illness may have been a result of environmental factors because there is no history of the disease in her family. A pink ribbon will be tied to each of the containers to raise awareness for breast cancer research.

"The more we can do to keep the environment healthy only helps to keep us all healthy," Kelly said.

Residents can get involved in the city's recycling efforts by joining the Quincy Recycling Committee. The committee meets on the second Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. in the administrative offices of DPW, 55 Sea St. Please call John Sullivan at 617-376-1953 or at HYPERLINK "mailto:recycling@quincymass.gov" "mailto:recycling@quincymass.gov" Information about the Quincy Environmental is also available at HYPERLINK "http://www.qenet.org" "http://www.qenet.org".

A SPECIAL MEMORIAL gift will help residents recycle at the city's major parks, thanks to Marina Kelly (right). Kelly and Cherie Dewar, left, demonstrate the recycling barrels purchased with Kelly's donation of $490. The gift honors Kelly's mother, the late Virginia Marini Kelly. The barrels will be placed at Pageant Field, the Ryan Boathouse, Adams Field and the Fenno Street playground.

Sales Tax-Free Weekend Aug. 16-17 OK's By Senate

When the State Senate calls for a decision on a sales tax-free weekend in the middle for an economic slump, it's awfully hard to vote "no."

So Quincy's Sen. Michael Morrissey did the right thing last week when he and his colleagues voted the tax holiday Aug. 16-17, giving approval to at least one tax-free day for the fifth year.

The Legislature renewed its commitment to the citizens of the Commonwealth with the reinstitution of the Sales Tax Holiday," said Morrissey.

"The Sales Tax Holiday is a 'thank you' to the citizens of the Commonwealth for continuing to shoulder the burden of increased household expenses, while at the same time having the opportunity to booster our economy."

As in previous years, almost all, purchases under $2,500 will be tax free during the weekend of Aug. 16-17. Vehicles, motorized boats, tobacco, meals and utilities are excluded.

Last year's tax produced nearly $500 million in sales. The current bill now goes to the governor for his signature.

- And if you want to refinance using your equity, we can help make that happen too.

Colonial Federal is a dependable, trustworthy community bank. Our loan officers are not on commission so their only goal is to help you get a loan you understand and can live with. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 3, 1861, the last entry of the serialized novel "Great Expectations" by Charles Dickens is published. Dickens' father was thrown in debtors' prison in 1824, and 12-year-old Charles was sent to work in a factory. The miserable treatment of children and the institution of the debtors' jail became topics of several of Dickens' novels.

• On Aug. 2, 1933, Irish actor Peter O'Toole is born. He received the first of six Oscar nominations in 1962 for his performance as the title character in "Lawrence of Arabia."

• On July 28, 1945, a B-25 bomber crashes into the 79th floor of the Empire State Building, killing 14 people. One engine from the plane went straight through the building and landed in a penthouse apartment across the street.

• On Aug. 1, 1953, "Shane," considered by many critics to be the greatest Western movie, is released by Paramount Pictures. "Shane" was a new type of Western. After World War II, Americans who had lived through the horrors and hardships began to crave books and films that offered more realistic and complex characters.

• On July 31, 1964, Ranger 7, an unmanned U.S. lunar probe, takes the first close-up images of the moon before it impacts with the lunar surface northwest of the Sea of the Clouds. The images were 1,000 times as clear as anything ever seen through Earth-bound telescopes.

• On July 30, 1974, under coercion from the U.S. Supreme Court, President Richard M. Nixon releases subpoenaed White House recordings to special prosecutor Leon Jaworski. On Aug. 5, transcripts of the recordings were released. Four days later, Nixon became the first president in U.S. history to resign.

• On July 29, 1996, track-and-field legend Carl Lewis wins his fourth consecutive Olympic gold medal in the long jump. He had barely managed to qualify for the U.S. team in the long jump and most experts believed he'd be lucky to medal, let alone win another gold.

Henry (Hank) Bradley, as many of you know, is director of Quincy Veterans Services.

But, did you know that he's also a clown? And proud of it.

He is one of 60 or so Aleppo Shrine Clowns that raise funds to treat children with severe burns at the Shriners Hospital For Children in Boston, also known as the Shriners Burn Institute.

"Children from all around the world come here to be treated," says Hank, who became Spike The Clown six years ago. Why the name Spike?

"Trying to think of a name for a clown isn't very easy," he says.

But his wife, Rosemarie, came up with Spike. That was the nickname of Hank's late father, George Bradley.

"Why not Spike," she suggested. "Your father loved children, as clowns do."

The clowns raise funds for the Shriners Hospital, appearing at special events like parades around the state.

And entertaining the young patients at the hospital and at special functions.

Hank spent this past weekend entertaining at a cook-out in Wilmington for the youngsters and at a community event in Salem.

Children have been a major part of his life.

He's been Santa's stand-in for 36 years, beginning when he was a Quincy police officer, visiting homes Christmas Eve. And continued, visiting veterans' hospitals and senior facilities.

He was the star of the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade for 13 years, riding down Hancock Street on a fire engine.

This year he expects to be walking in the parade as Spike with other members of the Shriners Clown Unit.

He's looking forward to walking the three-mile parade route from Quincy center to North Quincy.

It gives him the chance to get closer to the crowds, especially the youngsters.

"Seeing the smiles on their faces is something you just never forget," he says.

The smiles also belong to adults, especially veterans of various wars, standing in the crowd wearing caps with the names of their ships and units.

An Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War era, Hank spots them and walks into the crowd to shake their hand and thank them for serving their country.

It would seem inevitable that he would become so

Stop & Shop Quincy Stores Raise $51,818 To Fight Cancer

Quincy-based Stop & Shop Supermarket Co. has announced that its 18th annual Triple Winner program surpassed its goal for 2008 raising $51,818 in its Quincy stores alone to help fight childhood cancer and search for a cure.

Nationally, the campaign raised $3.75 million.

"Triple Winner has been the cornerstone of Stop & Shop's efforts to help eradicate childhood cancer," said Jose Alvarez, the company's president and CEO.

"Through this program, our associates, customers and suppliers have raised more than $48 million since 1991 to directly support cancer research and care for children."

Triple Winner is a scratch card promotion in which participants who make a $1 donation can win a free product, a gift or cash prizes up to $10,000.

The Boston Red Sox and the New York Mets partnered with Stop & Shop to promote Triple Winner among the thousands of fans at home games in Fenway Park and Shea Stadium.

active with the Shriners. He knew, first hand, the good they do.

A past state commander of the American Legion, Hank, and Quincy's John (Jake) Comer, past National Commander, teamed with Shriners to save the life of a Bahamas boy in 1993.

Claudius Burrows, 9, suffered third degree burns over most of his body when his crepe-paper costume caught fire and burst into flames at a church Christmas festival.

Jake and his late wife, Eileen, happened to be in the Bahamas at the time. A priest from the church told them he was afraid Claudius might die without the expert medical care he direly needed. There was no facility there to provide that care.

Jake gave the priest Hank's telephone number and told him to call. The priest did. And Hank took it from there.

He put Dr. Robert Sheridan of Quincy, a doctor at the Shriners Hospital in contact with a doctor in the Bahamas. That doctor said Claudius would surely die if he did not get the expert care he needed.

Dr. Sheridan told him that Shriners Hospital would take Claudius as a patient if he somehow could get to Boston.

Hank's daughter, Annette, a registered nurse at the hospital, happened to have the telephone number of the Aleppo Temple in Tampa, Fla.

Hank called there and told them of Claudius' plight. Could they pay for a medical equipped plane to fly him to Boston?

Yes, they could and would. And allocated the $9,000 needed for the plane trip. The pilot of that plane, incidentally, was Mel Acuff, a Quincy resident. All of this was accomplished in a couple of days.

Claudius healed from those burns after treatment at the Shriners Hospital.

Hank and Jake raised $10,000 to provide air conditioning in Claudius' home and school classroom because he had to wear a weighty Rubber Jobst to prevent scarring while recovering from the burns.

Claudius later visited Hank, Jake and Mayor James Sheets. And frolicked in the snow in front of City Hall, a rare experience for a boy from the warm Bahamas. Jake hosted a party for him and Sheets proclaimed "Claudius Burrows Day In Quincy."

Hanging in the closet with the Santa suit and Spike's costume are two bunny costumes.

He wears one of them as the Easter Bunny when he visits the brain injured children at the Franciscan Hospital in Brighton.

Hank, you could say is a man for all seasons.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of what was known as Chapel Rocks in Squantum Park. Virtually unchanged today, this spot is pretty much the same as when first seen by Myles Standish in 1621. This is one of the few sections of "New England's rocky coast" among Quincy's 27 miles of coastline. Today, the Birch trees still cling precariously to this cliff and thrive here; they grow throughout this section of the Park. The cliff itself is more interesting than the trees. Geologists around the world known of the rock formations exposed here. There are different layers of sedimentary rocks from millions of years ago that are considered by experts to be very rare. Boston area college professors have brought hundreds of geology students here from the colleges and universities to observe them. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Questions City's Decision To Evict Beechwood Center

In a city like Quincy, where politics is a blood sport, it should come as no surprise that innocent bystanders can get caught in the crossfire and become casualties of war. When one of those innocent bystanders happens to be a respected non-profit organization that serves thousands of local residents, however, the citizens of Quincy should loudly decry such political power plays especially when it means that taxpayers will now have to pay for services previously provided by the private sector.

I'm referring to the city's abrupt eviction of Beechwood on the Bay, which for more than two decades provided Quincy and South Shore residents with a host of programs and services all funded by private dollars. From Beechwood's comprehensive senior-citizen offerings to its accredited childcare center to the facility's music school, Beechwood on the Bay filled a critical void in this city at a time when municipal budgets were tight and extra public funding was hard to come by.

A time, in other words, a lot like now.

Parents of young children had a safe and secure program in which to leave their children. Adults with elderly parents could bring them to Beechwood's senior drop-in program, knowing that their loved ones were not only well cared for, but entertained, nurtured and supported by a caring staff. And who can forget the many years of Senior Olympics, which provided thousands of local seniors with opportunities to stay fit and active?

Now, abruptly, those services will be gone. When Beechwood's doors close on Aug. 1, they will stay closed for the foreseeable future, while the city determines what renovations the building will require for what, exactly?

The city still hasn't said what new programs will replace Beechwood's offerings, or how it plans to pay for all these programs and services that previously had been provided by private funding.

So many questions remain. What will happen to the 50 seniors who range in age from 78 to 99 who come to Beechwood each day for care and companionship? How will all those working parents secure child care for the fall on such short notice, when many centers maintain lengthy waiting lists? Where is the city going to get the money to pay the $70,000 its costs each year to maintain the building, when it hasn't even begun a costly project to replace the building's sewage pump—despite the fact the Conservation Commission approved the project last year?

All of which begs the question: Why the rush? Why did Mayor Koch feel the need to abruptly evict Beechwood on the Bay from its city-owned home, when its lease wasn't up until the end of 2009? Why force Beechwood to meet an eviction deadline that provided no time for the agency to relocate? Why leave working adults, children and seniors with so little time to find alternate arrangements? And why, during this economy, would the city want struggling taxpayers to assume the financial responsibility of paying for these services when a private agency was already providing them?

Some speculate that the answers may be found in last year's mayoral election, when then-Mayor Phelan made the creation of a new senior center a centerpiece of his reelection campaign. That plan would have placed the senior center squarely on the site of a building named for Koch's father.

Others see the rush to establish a new senior center in Beechwood's longtime home as a political thank you to Council on Aging Director Tom Clasby, who famously resigned his position shortly before Election Day in a dispute with Mayor Phelan over the planned senior center then immediately got his job back when Koch was elected.

Regardless of what factors led City Hall to orchestrate Beechwood's demise, the city has failed to prove that there is, in fact, an urgent need for yet another senior center when it already maintains several neighborhood community centers that provide senior programs in more convenient locations. Absent evidence of such a compelling need, Beechwood's closing is an unnecessary loss for the Quincy community and a sad reminder that in a game of politics vs. the public interest, politics still wins.

Contract Signed For Vo-Tech High School

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor Ameilo Della Chiesa signed a contract with Caudill, Rowlett and Scott for design of the city's new $5 million vocational-technical high school.

The signing marked the formal start of the project approved by the City Council last month. Other signers were John M. Rowlett, a partner in the firm, and Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert.

The contract includes a provision that the school must not cost more than the $5 million already authorized for the project.

CITY INCINERATOR ACTION BLOCKED

More than 500 Quarry St. area residents were granted a preliminary injunction blocking the city from proceeding with plans for a municipal incinerator at Hardwick's Quarry.

Atty. Harry Pavan said that he had filed a bill in equity at Norfolk Probate Court and received the restraining order.

The order blocks the city from taking any action towards building an incinerator in the Quarry Street area.

MONADNOCK MOUNTAIN SPRING WATER

Monadnock Mountain Spring Water is fresh because it's delivered daily from their own springs in Wilton, New Hampshire. Packaging takes place at the source and at Monadnock's state-of-the-art bottling headquarters plant located at 134 Penn Street in Quincy.

Mike Verrochi, owner, says, "Purity is ensured through a multi-layer approach utilizing filtration and oxygenating process called ozonation, and no chemicals are added." Spring water brought in on stainless steel tank trucks from Wilton are ready for delivery to home and business customers the very next day.

"It's that fresh," said Verrochi, who also served as chairman of the board for the International Bottled Water Association.

Clean Convenience

For home and office delivery, Monadnock's unique No-Spill System features a cap that is never removed, eliminating spills or contamination. Instead the 5-gallon water bottle is placed on top of the cooler's sanitary probe where the cap opens itself once set in place. Upon removal, the cap re-seals itself and assures that all caps are recycled because they're returned to the plant with the bottles.

Personalized Water Bottle Labels

Monadnock is the only Boston-area company offering a "personalized label" program, giving businesses, organizations and individuals an effective branding opportunity. At weddings, anniversaries or graduations, they add a personal touch to the occasion.

Steve Maloney, a route salesperson for Monadnock Mountain Spring Water.

The Environment

Individual water bottles are generally 30-40% lighter in weight than carbonated soft drinks and 100% recyclable, so drinking bottled water is better for the environment.

Monadnock recycles everything possible and actively encourages its customers to do so as well. Its No-Spill System is designed to reduce waste by using refillable five-gallon bottles and eliminating loose bottle caps. The cooler bottle can be re-used 50-75 times before recycling. Monadnock recycles 77% of its entire waste volume including plastics, oils, paper, corrugated and metal parts.

Also, for twenty-five cents per gallon, customers can refill their own containers at the Quincy location.

Quality Service and Staff

Wondering about your delivery person?

Find their profiles at "Meet Your Driver" on the company's web site. Though a multiple award winner for water purity, Monadnock competes against much larger companies. Personal service and friendly, knowledgeable employees level the playing field.

"We look for people who care about themselves. You can have the most beautiful bottling plant in the world, but 99% of your customers will never see it. It's our people and our vehicles they come into contact with. We want to put our best foot forward," he said.

Quincy Man Sues Surgeon, Hospital

A Quincy man, whose doctor appeared to have been dozing off in the midst of surgery, has brought suit against the surgeon, five other doctors, two nurses and the hospital, all for malpractice.

Michael E. Hicks claimed he was undergoing a second round of surgery for gynecostasia at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital when Dr. Loren Borud of Newton began falling asleep and had to leave the OR.

As a result, what was planned to be an hour and a half operation turned into five hours of surgery due chiefly to Borud's absence when another physician had to take over.

Borud was fired by Beth Israel on June 27, partly due to the Hicks incident and a state medical board suspended his license last week, due partly to problems with substance abuse.

Hicks claimed the other doctors and nurses should have called off the operation when they saw Borud was falling asleep and the hospital failed to notify him of the doctor's previous behavior.

7.5-acre property from Ledger owner GateHouse Media New England. He declined to disclose the sale price.

Under the current plan, Coastal Partners will develop the project and lease the property to the Natick-based B.J.'s Wholesale Club.

B.J.'s shoppers purchase memberships which can be used in any of the club's 180 outlets in 16 states. The stores sell such items as food, clothing, housewares and office equipment.

During work for other developers in that area, Fleming said that residents actually asked for development of a supermarket closer to their neighborhood. While, this is not a supermarket, it does sell essentials.

Fleming's firm is currently representing the Lowe's Warehouse development project in the same ward on Burgin Parkway.

As for traffic, DiGiuseppe believes that the retail shopping outlet will not seriously impact commuter traffic in the area and the area is in good shape with the 'flyover' planned to ease traffic.

"People shop during non-peak hours," DiGiuseppe said, adding that he had reviewed the area's traffic statistics prior to the bid.

Some might prefer condominiums or apartments but Fleming cited the increased cost to the taxpayer for city utilities and school-age children.

In contrast, DiGiuseppe said a B.J.'s warehouse will help homeowners' taxes, and provide jobs for local residents, and union members.

DiGiuseppe said the 84,000 square foot building will be union built. "We recognize that Quincy is a union city."

In addition, once B.J.'s is open, DiGiuseppe said that the store will employ almost 200 workers, most of whom will be from Quincy.

DiGiuseppe and Fleming said the project will be a boon to the city's commercial tax base. Fleming pointed out that the city's commercial tax percentage has dropped from 40 percent to 16 percent, putting significant pressure on homeowners. He added that projects like B.J.'s will help change that ratio.

Both Mayor Thomas Koch and Davis have expressed their concern over the aesthetics of the project for the office park.

Wholesale clubs like B.J.'s operate with a no-frills philosophy and this, often, applies to their buildings known as 'big box stores' with some charging they border on ugly.

DiGiuseppe believes his firm has addressed such concerns by submitting changes in the roof design, landscaping, and arches and panels in the front.

And the developers have reduced the size by more than 20 percent to 84,000 square feet, "an appropriate size" for Quincy, according to DiGiuseppe who noted that most B.J. Warehouses are 120,000 square feet.

Under the current plan, the store's hundreds of parking spaces will front on Crown Colony Drive, but the designated delivery area is in the rear in a lower area, according to DiGiuseppe.

If the project succeeds, Coastal Partners will develop the property with a lease to B.J.'s Wholesale Club, the Natick-based membership warehouse club.

The sale is contingent on Coastal Partners' winning approval of the project from state and city agencies within a specific time frame.

THE DPW COLUMN

Lesser Known Recyclables By Cherie Dewar

Congratulations to Quincy for increasing the tonnage of recyclables since single-stream recycling began in July! The more we recycle or remove from regular trash, the less Quincy spends on waste disposal, and the more money we earn from the recyclables themselves.

Let's "up the ante" and zone in on objects you may still be throwing away, but are in fact recyclable. The first item to mention that is recyclable is aerosol cans, which was incorrectly mentioned as non-recyclable in previous DPW literature. Aerosol cans like hair spray, air freshener, shaving cream, window cleaner and spray butter (Pam) aerosol cans are recyclable. Explosive aerosol cans like propane or butane are not recyclable.

Aluminum cans, paper, and glass and plastic bottles are commonly known to be recyclable. Taking these basic parts and applying it to other objects in your home can result in adding even less to your trash. The following items are indeed accepted by Capitol Waste in the single-stream recycling containers. It is always advised to clean the items before you recycle them, and it keeps your recycling container clean and odor-free.

Plastics - To know if it's recyclable, the best bet is to check the plastic for a recycling symbol with number 1-7.

Spice containers

Cups from fast food chains, and their tops

Children's spill resistant cups from other restaurants, and their tops

Strawberry containers (box-shaped)

Pastry containers

Yogurt and pudding cups

Potted plant's plastic containers

Dunkin' Donuts

Paper cup holder trays

Cleaned plastic cups and their tops

Paper

Paper towel and toilet paper tubes

English muffin containers

Bar soap boxes

Cereal and waffle boxes

Metals

The metal ends of Pillsbury product tubes, like their biscuits

The metal end of concentrated frozen juice

"logs"

Non-explosive aerosol cans - see above (propane and butane bottles prohibited)

Tuning into the greater breadth of what's recyclable definitely increases this "less is more" benefit to our wonderful city and Earth!

Tri-Town Mayors Explore Regional Tourism Partnership

First, the mayors of Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree developed a tri-town partnership on trash collection.

Now, they're talking about a regional tourism partnership.

The three tri-town mayors, Quincy's Thomas Koch, Weymouth's Sue Kay and Braintree's Joseph Sullivan, agreed to fund a study of regional tourism.

Koch, Kay and Sullivan pitched in portions of the $5,000 needed to finance the study which will explore potential partnerships for regional tourism.

Summer intern Meredith Hill of Abington will conduct the research, explore options and present a report to the mayors in early Fall. Hill is currently developing a scope of the study for the three administrations.

"It behooves us to create partnerships," said Mark Carey, Executive Director of Discover Quincy, who said tourism partnerships represent "a new way of thinking."

Carey said visitors don't choose cities, but rather regions where they may find a whole package of hotels, shopping, sightseeing and activities. "They know regions."

"All things Adams" is a phrase coined by Carey to describe major Adams historical sites. Hill agreed that almost "all things Adams" are located in Quincy.

"Quincy probably has the greater (number of) tourist visitors," Hill said, adding, "It has a great deal to offer."

However, neither Hill nor Carey believe a tourist partnership will diminish economic returns to Quincy.

Carey said that tourists will find a longer visit more attractive and spend more money if they're offered all the benefits of the region.

Both suggested a partnership with Weymouth and Braintree could benefit by increasing the advertising budget for all three municipalities.

"The more time we can have tourists spend in the region, there is a benefit to all," Hill said, adding that when there are "more options, the greater diversity of people will come."

Hill cited the Abigail Adams birthplace in Weymouth, the General Sylvanus Thayer birthplace in Braintree and the Braintree Historical Society.

John Loughnane Chief Hospitalist At Quincy Medical Center

John Loughnane, MD, of Quincy, has been named Chief of the Hospitalist Program at Quincy Medical Center (QMC).

A Board-certified family practice physician, Loughnane has been a hospitalist at QMC since 2006 and was recently named QMC Physician of the Year.

Previously, he served as a primary care physician at Northshire Medical Center in Manchester, VT, and at Manet Community Health Center in Quincy.

The Hospitalist Medicine Program at QMC is comprised of a team of physicians who focus exclusively on the care of patients admitted to QMC. Hospitalists are trained in internal medicine or family medicine and specialize in providing round-the-clock care for hospitalized patients. Hospitalists manage each patient's course through the hospital, coordinating and consulting with primary care physicians and specialists, ordering diagnostic imaging studies and laboratory tests, and closely monitoring the patient's progress. When a patient is preparing to leave QMC, the Hospitalist will prepare a discharge plan, including written and verbal instructions and any necessary prescriptions. This plan will also include appointments for follow-up with a primary care physician and relevant specialists.

At QMC, each day more than 60% of hospitalized patients are referred by their primary care physicians and specialists to the Hospitalist program for care.

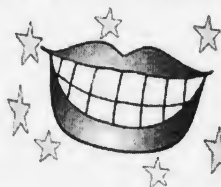

In addition, the Hospitalists care for any hospitalized patients who do not have a primary care physician. The Hospitalists at QMC provide 24 hour 7 days a week service.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Summer Auto Safety

Here are some tips regarding summer auto safety, which I received from a State Fire Marshal bulletin (OSFM: Fire Information).

When a car overheats, attempting to open a hot radiator can cause serious burns. Every driver should learn to handle this situation safely.

If your car overheats, shut the engine off and let the vehicle cool for a while. The contents of the radiator are under tremendous pressure. If you remove the radiator cap too quickly and without caution, the boiling liquid and steam can erupt causing severe burns to your hands, arms and face. Wait at least a half hour for the car to cool down, place a rag over the cap and open it slowly, releasing the pressure as slowly as possible.

Statistics indicate that adults and teenagers are most likely to suffer burns from car radiators. Nearly 60% of the people scaled by hot car radiators in the past five years were between 15 and 44 years of age (M-BIRS). Approach a hot radiator with extreme caution.

If you experience a car fire while driving, pull over, get out of the car, call for the fire department and wait for help away from the vehicle. Avoid lifting the hood where doing so can be quite hazardous where adding air will feed the fire and jeopardize your welfare.

When filling an approved container with gasoline, place the container on the ground and insert the pump nozzle by bringing it in contact with the inside of the container. This practice will reduce the risk of static electricity.

If transporting gasoline, transport the container upright out of the passenger area of your vehicle. When transporting, do so for as short a time as possible. Gasoline expands as it is heated and you want to avoid fumes migrating into the passenger area of your car.

Gasoline vapors are very volatile and will ignite at low temperatures. Fumes are heavier than air and can travel a distance igniting from a remote ignition source. Keep sparks, heat and lit cigarettes away from gasoline use.

Remember, as accustomed as we are to using gasoline, it must be respected. Over the past five years, Massachusetts' hospitals treated 137 people for gasoline-related burns.

Keep gasoline away from children. Children between 10 and 14 were almost four times more likely to get in trouble with gasoline. If you store gasoline, make certain you do so in an approved container. At home, store those containers in a well-ventilated location, away from habitable buildings and away from potential ignition sources.

DO NOT STORE GASOLINE WITHIN YOUR HOME.

Have a safe summer.

Alleged Thief Arraigned After Eastern Bank Heist

Judge Mark Coven Tuesday ordered that a 38-year-old Copeland Street man be held on $500,000 surety or $50,000 cash after reviewing charges that he robbed the Eastern Bank on Franklin Street earlier this week.

Coven, first justice of Quincy District Court, set Sept. 2 at 9 a.m. for a probable cause hearing for the suspect, Scott Tower, who faces charges of armed robbery, defrauding an innkeeper and knowingly resisting arrest.

According to the police report, Tower ordered a beer at a local restaurant, left without paying and then entered the nearby bank where he handed the teller a note saying he had a gun. He was given an undisclosed sum of money.

Local residents helped police arrest the officer after they decided that Tower fit the description of a man with a red shirt and no teeth. By that time, Tower had entered a nearby CVS.

Lt. Dan Minton of the crime prevention unit arrested Tower at the CVS. Minton was on bicycle patrol in the area.

GROWTH PLATES

The growth plate is the area of the developing tissue near the end of the long bones in children. Each long bone has at least one growth plate at each end. When growth is completed during adolescence, the growth plates are replaced by solid bone. Most injuries to the growth plate are fractures, which frequently occur in the lower bones of the leg, the tibia and fibula. They can also occur in the ankle and foot. While growth plate injuries can be caused by an acute event, such as a fall, they can also be caused by overuse. Untreated injuries can cause permanent damage to growth plates and interfere with proper physical growth and development.

We believe one of the most important elements of healthcare we can provide you with is education. We bring you these columns in order to show you how the many benefits of podiatric medicine can help keep all the members of your family walking, running, living in comfort. And since taking care of the feet can't begin too early, you'll be glad to know there is a footcare specialist here in Quincy who can help you if there seems to be a problem with your child's feet. Located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, call 781-986-3668 for an appointment. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

the boardwalk and shops at Marina Bay, public golf courses at Granite Links and Presidents Golf Course, and the city's 200 restaurants.

"Last week, we sent out 10,000 (booklets) just to the Northeast," Carey said, calling the requests for information, "solid leads. These are people who saw our ad and called."

Carey estimated that the figure is more than five times the best month that the tourism office reported in years past. His office also responded to more than 1000 requests from individuals in such countries as Italy, France, United Kingdom, Germany and Japan.

"We're smack dab in the middle of summer and the great thing is our expectations have been surpassed," Carey said. "We're still growing.

The actual count of visitors at Adams National Historical Park increased by 12,569 over the past 12 months, according to Caroline Keinath, deputy superintendent. By July 6, the park registered 32,781 visitors in contrast to the July 6, 2007 total of 20,212.

Keinath, also, recalled the change since her arrival in 1987. When she drove into the city for the first time, few could direct her to the Adams National Historical Park on Adams Street.

Thanks to David McCullough's biography, "John Adams," and the mini-series based on it, the number of park visitors have long since passed the annual high of 200,000.

The numbers will only increase in the future, according to Carey who said the HBO mini-series is now available through "On Demand" and on DVD's.

He believes the Adams series will gain even more mass appeal when "John Adams" reaches such television outlets as A&E and BRAVO.

Not only are the book and the HBO series sparking new interest, but the Adams saga won't end soon. Carey said that actor Tom Hanks just bought the rights to McCullough's companion book, "1776" in which Adams has a prominent role.

As for the value of tourism, it is the third largest industry in the state, adding one dollar to the economy for every three dollars a tourist spends, according to Carey who calls it an "economic engine."

Carey cited the trade industry's "four-hour rule." If a visitor spends four-hours in the area, he will eat in the restaurants, stay at the hotels, shop in the stores and visit other attractions, boosting the city's base.

Carey said Mayor Thomas Koch is leading efforts to enhance the city's image, promote business opportunities, and develop innovative strategies.

In addition, to banners, beautification and clean-up programs, Koch has initiated a regional study of tourism with Weymouth and Braintree as partners.

Koch said that he is working to improve signage around the city and to keep a smooth travel route for the Park Service trolleys. He has contacted the MBTA to ensure the stations are clean and is considering a city advertising campaign on transit lines.

"We're working very closely with Discover Quincy, our business partners, the National Park Service and Congressman (William) Delahunt on developing new and creative ways to make our city an attractive destination for tourists from around the world," Koch said.

In the future, the city will benefit when the docks and harbor shuttle plans at Squantum Point Park become a reality, according to Carey who said Delahunt has been directing efforts for those plans.

Specific changes have already occurred this year.

There are already eight additional seasonal staffers at Adams Park this summer and Carey's office added a half-time marketing coordinator through a $60,000 cable grant shared with Quincy 2000.

Two high school students, Sebastian Joseph, Quincy High School and Tho Dang, North Quincy High School, are fully occupied as summer interns with Discover Quincy and Quincy 2000.

according to Carey.

Both the Marriott Hotel and Best Western Adams Inn have shuttle service available for tourists heading to to Quincy Center.

Carey's been working closely with the 75 members of the Quincy Restaurant League. He said Quincy is known as the "restaurant capital of the South Shore," due to its 200 eateries and the variety of its dining establishments.

Restaurateurs are benefiting from the added tourist interest. As for exact figures, Carey said, "It's hard to measure."

However, local restaurant manager Maryann Ahmed of Craig's Café said she's definitely seen a boost in the number of tourists, noting that a day earlier, she had customers from California, Ireland and Canada.

"They'll tell you when they come in," Ahmed said, adding the Irish visitors said there was "not enough shopping" in Quincy Center.

Mayor Plans City Website Overhaul

look forward to seeing many of the ideas in action."

Director of Information Technology Charles Phelan leads a group within City Hall that is developing ideas and researching other city websites, such as Boston, Cambridge and Somerville, all of which have built successful and interactive websites.

Preliminary plans discussed to date include expanding bill paying options, creating e-mail newsletters and alerts for residents, a regularly update calendar of city events and streamlining requests for service from residents.

The process from selecting a designer to launching a new site will take several months. Since January, the city's IT Department has made a number of changes using the website's current format, from keeping better track of city meetings to informing residents of important construction projects, Phelan said.

"We are working for now within the framework that exists, but there is no question that the framework needs to be almost fully reconstructed for us to tap the true potential of the city's website," Phelan said. "I encourage everyone to log on to the current site. And give us some feedback on what they would like on the new site."

The city is also undergoing a number of repairs and upgrades to its computer networks, as move that should make the new site flow faster and make it easier to navigate, Phelan said.

Anthony Acito Takes Big Step Sunday Night

QHS Grad A Finalist In TV Musical Reality Show

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Recent Quincy High School graduate Anthony Acito is having the time of his life.

So what if he couldn't attend his graduation in June or his prom or any of the other year-end activities for his school — he is a finalist on ABC-TV's summer reality show "High School Musical: Get in the picture."

The show will award one winner the chance to appear in a music video which will run during the end credits of Disney's feature film production of "High School Musical 3: Senior Year," scheduled for fall release.

And Anthony is hoping the one winner will be him.

Described by virtually everyone who knows him as an outgoing, personable and charismatic kid, Anthony was brought to tears on the episode which aired July 21 when he learned that he had made it to the finals to be held in Salt Lake City, Utah.

"My feelings were really indescribable . . . to finally break out and be seen as a performer was really great because I wanted to show the world what I can really do," he told The Quincy Sun on a visit home this week.

"This experience has honestly been life-changing, probably the best experience that any kid could go through because it shows how you can grow as a performer and it helps your people skills, too, because you get to meet other kids and see how you connect with them."

His father, Vinnie, shares everyone else's opinion of his son. "Anthony is an outgoing kid, everybody loves him . . . whenever I saw anyone they would say, 'How's Anthony?' He left a mark everywhere he went, in a good sense, I mean. Everyone knew he was around."

"I think some of the financial challenges we have faced as a family — I was laid off for months at a time — have influenced the kind of person Anthony is, the way he looks at things."

Of the 30 East Coast, semi-finalists chosen to compete in Florida, Anthony made the cut to the 10 who were required to harmonize on a duet with another competitor and stage a song. Of those performers, Anthony was chosen as one of the six finalists to move on to the Utah location.

Anthony's mother, Carol, spoke of the tension involved during those semi-final auditions at Disneyworld where she chaperoned her son. "Oh, my God, you didn't know what day of the week it was, or what day in May it was! — you were so removed from every day."

"We couldn't sleep — at night we would think about the day and think 'Maybe we should have done it this way . . . do you think we're going to make it?' We, as parents, were in separate areas when they were working with and teaching the kids, but we watched the competition at Epcot."

Anthony's ambition is a simple one.

"My ultimate goal is to be a star," he says. "I already have people coming up to me. It's a great feeling to finally get noticed, and I'm hoping to continue with this and maybe do movies someday, or maybe get on SNL (Saturday Night Live) one day, that's really my dream. Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro described Anthony as a great kid, a product of QHS's Artistry Program, a relatively new curriculum which incorporates performing and visual arts in a way that students can major in them.

The wide variety of courses include acting, music theatre, playwriting, dancing for the stage, music theory, theatre management, stage craft and design.

Santoro said "Anthony's participation in our choral as well as our drama classes in the Artistry Program provided him the opportunity to star in our musicals, to be a member in our Horizons choir, and he has developed a talent to perform in front of people."

"But the kindle for performing is within his own heart . . . people across the nation will fall in love with Anthony and with his smile, and what he has to offer on the inside."

Paul Conroy, one of the drama directors in the Artistry Program, had initially suggested to Anthony that he submit an audition video to the reality show when he learned the kind of personality ABC was looking for.

Anthony says he "thought about it for a day," then made a video of himself singing the Beatles' tune "Let It Be." Weeks later an ABC film crew arrived at Quincy High School and before a rallying crowd of 1,500, announced that Anthony had been chosen for the semi-finals and would be competing at Disneyworld.

This past week the focus of the ABC show shifted to the West Coast, where six finalists were chosen to compete against the six East Coast finalists — Anthony among them — this Sunday (Aug. 3) at 8 p.m. Those 12 finalists will get to visit the film set of High School Musical 3: Senior Year.

Although Anthony says he embarked on his entertainment career while in the eighth grade, his mother says that even when he was a little tot, and being walked in the carriage, she knew he was special.

"The other kids would sit, and you could take a walk, but not Anthony, he would be standing, always on the go, couldn't stay still, and he still can't!" she said. "Even when he was little, he was entertaining, telling jokes — I knew something good would come of it."

The winner of the competition will also receive an exclusive talent-hold agreement with ABC and a recording contract for two singles with Walt Disney Records, one of which will be a version of the song from the music video in which the winner will star.

Anthony was raised in the Germantown section of Quincy, attending Snug Harbor and Broad Meadows Schools. He is the youngest of four siblings — twins Lauren and Michael, brother Jim and eldest brother Matthew.

Linda Balance Hikes White Mountains In Wilderness Heals Pledge Hike

Linda Balance of Quincy recently hiked through the rugged terrain of New Hampshire's White Mountains in the 13th Annual Wilderness Heals Pledge Hike.

Wilderness Heals is one of New England's most challenging all-female fundraising events, which also gives participants a sense of community. The three-day pledge hike benefits The Elizabeth Stone House in Boston.

The 2008 Wilderness Heals Pledge Hike was a huge success and the consistent downpours, intense lighting and 80 mile per hour winds, during the three days, didn't deter the hikers. Balance, along with more than 51 other women, braved the rugged trails knowing her hard work would be helping the women and their children served at the Stone House for mental health issues and domestic violence.

"The women who participated in this year's Wilderness Heals Hike endured so much due to the weather and they persevered," says event director, Danielle Piscatelli. "The weekend was a true challenge to their physicality and spirit, but the participants maintained positive attitudes and worked so hard knowing that they were helping the women at the Stone House."

Wilderness Heals participants celebrated their accomplishments at a reception at the Appalachian Mountain Club's Highland Center at Crawford Notch. During the celebration, the women were moved by an inspirational speech given by a past Elizabeth Stone House resident, who is now an employee at the House.

Since 1996, the Wilderness Heals Pledge Hike has brought together everyday women. Grandmothers, young working professionals, domestic violence survivors, and many other types of women, have participated in the Hike and taken on the cause. During the Hike, the women not only face the unpredictable weather of the White Mountain region, but also challenge themselves with physical, emotional and financial goals they set.

Founded in 1974, The Elizabeth Stone House helps women and children each year rebuild their lives after experiencing mental illness, domestic violence and other forms of trauma. The Stone House provides safe shelter, advocacy, parenting classes and economic development programs. It is one of the few programs in Boston to work with battered women with additional mental health and substance abuse issues.

Donations can still be made to Linda Balance's Wilderness Heals hike. PLANTS AND MUSIC was the theme of the project, "Groovn and Groovn" prepared by Katie and Meghan White for Central Middle School's 24th annual fair. Judges reviewed a total of 272 projects submitted by Central students.

272 Science Projects Submitted At Central Middle School's 24th Fair

Students submitted a record 272 projects for Central Middle School's 24th Annual Science Fair, according to sixth grade science teacher Sarah Ahearn.

That figure is nearly 50 percent of the school's 564-student enrollment.

Ahearn said the students' projects ranged from a comparison of sports equipment design to testing cleaning agents, and from comparing bacteriata extracting DNA samples.

"Over and over, judges commented on the hard work students put forth and the quality of projects they produced," Ahearn noted in a written report on the fair.

This year, students were required to describe and discuss the technology used for their project, according to Ahearn.

As for the winners, Ahearn said the science department does not emphasize awards, but rather participation. The sixth to eighth grade teachers who helped the students prepare their projects are listed. They are: Ahearn, Mike Lenane, Beth Houghton, Judy Tryon, Keith Kane and Darlene Koestner.

'Service For Soldiers Fair' Supports Troops, Families

The Blue Star Mothers of America will hold a "Service for Soldiers Fair" Sunday, Aug. 24, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave.

It's billed as a Community Summer Event that is "all about supporting our soldiers, their families and our veterans" with proceeds going to CarePacks to send packages to troops worldwide.

The suggested donation is $5 per person.

"I am sure you know a Blue Star Family," said Rebecca Lampert-Egan of Quincy, twice a Blue Star Mother herself. "They are your neighbors who have loved ones currently serving in the United States military."

"The summer is tough for these Blue Star Families.. The longer days and vacation play become difficult to handle while worrying and waiting on a soldier."

"When my two children were deployed to Iraq, our family summer was simply awful. Having fun seemed wrong. Guilt overcame us when we caught ourselves feeling too carefree."

"How could we enjoy ourselves while our soldiers were experiencing the dangers, discomforts and horrors of war?"

The alternative is the "Service for Soldiers Fair," sponsored by the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of the Blue Star Mothers of America "where the fun is all about supporting the soldier."

There will be refreshments and patriotic-themed games and other activities like raffles, the creation of gifts and letters of support for GIs in their billets around the world.

Volunteers will man Operation Quiet Comfort to make quilts for injured American soldiers and attendees will be offered the opportunity to sign the quilt squares with words of support.

A "Wall of Honor" will be created using soldiers' pictures. Families and friends are encouraged to bring photo copies of pictures of their soldiers and veterans for display on the wall.

Misaligned Door Won't Lock

Q. I have been unable to fully lock my front door for a while now because the door bolt will no longer go all the way into the frame. I think the door is misaligned. How do I fix this? —Gerard J., San Diego

A. Definitely check the alignment of the door. You can do this by holding the end of a ruler or other straight item against the top of the frame to see if the crack between the top of the door and the frame is straight or has a slight angle. You also can check the sides and bottom this way. If the door is not hanging straight, work with a friend to remove the door from its hinges and place shims under the hinges.

A shim can be as simple as a thin piece of cardboard cut to the shape of the hinge. When slid into place behind the hinge plate, it raises the profile of the hinge, which changes the angle at which the door is hung. You may need to re-hang the door a few times to get the proper width and placement of the shims.

If the door is straight or shimming doesn't resolve the latch issue, check the alignment of the bolt with its strike plate (the metal plate set in the door frame). Make sure the plate is screwed tightly to the frame and not wiggling loosely.

The latchbolt itself can be raised or lowered slightly by shimming it in much the same way the door is shimmed. You can insert a thin piece of cardboard behind the bottom hinge to raise the latchbolt, or behind the top hinge to lower the latchbolt.

Chamber President Peter Forman Tells Conway Agents, Managers Real Estate Growth Seen For South Shore

The message to Jack Conway Realtors agents and managers at their recent Mid-Year Awards breakfast was loud and clear: the South Shore and Conway Country is going to be one of the hottest areas of growth over the next decade.

That prediction was delivered by Peter Forman, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, to a roomful of more than 250 members of the Conway Company at the Plymouth Radisson. They heard Forman, a former state politician, sheriff and aide to the governor, describe their role in helping the region reach its potential.

"Conway Country has defined the South Shore and its economy for the last 20 to 30 years, said Forman. But that economy is now changing. And the outlook is very promising. When you sell that house, you need to sell the South Shore as a growing region."

Forman was the main speaker at the annual Mid-Year Awards breakfast at "Our agents are the engine that drives this company, and we know how important they are," said President Dick Cahill as he handed out the awards.

Chairman Jack Conway also delivered a special Conway Excellence Award to Massasoit Community College Professor Lois Martin, a recent winner of the Math Educator of the Year Award. Conway lauded Martin for her dedication to teaching a subject which is often difficult, but critical in this economy.

"I am so proud of our whole department, we are all about teaching at Massasoit," said Martin, a longtime Kingston resident. "I just want to convey my love for the beauty of math to my students, and watch them succeed."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Change Gyms? Maybe Not

QI have belonged to the same gym for the past five years. Each year my gym raises its monthly dues, and although I enjoy it and there are many amenities, the cost each month is pretty steep. Now a new gym has come to the area, and several members of my gym are canceling their membership and heading to the new gym because its monthly dues are cheaper for what seem to be the same amenities. How do you make a decision on which gym is better than another?

A Competition between fitness facilities for members is apparent in most cities. The arrival of a shiny new club in town appeals to potential members and members of other facilities who may be looking for a change. Determining the right one for you will depend on what is important to you in a fitness facility.

There must be something about your current gym that you enjoy to have stayed a member for five years and paid the member dues even as they increased. The overall gym environment, classes and programs offered, other members who belong to the gym, child care, security, cost, distance from your home or work, and knowledge and education of the staff are all reasons why someone may join or stay at a fitness facility. These reasons vary by person and are personal to the needs and wants of the member.

You can begin to decide if this new facility is worth leaving your current gym for by making a list of what is important to you and why you joined your gym in the first place. Once you have completed your list, make another list of what the new gym will offer, and compare them. If you find that what you enjoy most in your current gym will not be offered in the new gym, then this should help with your decision. If your list comes out even, then the deciding factor may come when you actually visit the new club and see how you feel upon entering it.

Everyone has a different perception of what a "good" gym is, so you will have to check it out for yourself. Many new facilities, and even older ones if you ask, will offer a one-day or temporary guest pass for you to try out the gym for free. If this is available, take advantage of this pass and use the gym to see how comfortable you are with the staff, other members, classes and the overall environment.

Speak with the sales staff about membership options, enrollment dues and guest passes for family and friends. Take a tour of the facility and ask questions. Observe or speak with staff members and trainers to get an idea if this will be the place for you. Check out the children's area, group exercise rooms, locker rooms and any other amenities available.

Choosing a fitness facility is a personal decision, which is why there are so many gyms throughout the country. If you have found a place where you are comfortable and able to workout effectively, do not feel pressured to change. Take your time and find the best fit for you.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Beyond Barbecue: The Summer Tapas Trend

(ARA) - Summer is synonymous with outdoor picnics, barbecues and entertaining family and friends. This year, instead of grilling up the same barbecue staples, experiment with tapas-style recipes that are light and sensible and embrace the flavors of the season. Your guests will sure be satisfied by these, small, tasty and distinctive food choices.

Tapas, which originated in Spain, is the name for a variety of appetizers or small plates of food, such as olives and cheese, seafood such as squid, empanadas, fried potatoes and omelets. Since arriving in the United States, the tapas trend has evolved into an entire cuisine. In fact, now there are a variety of ethnic small plate servings beyond tapas, which include meze, from the Mediterranean, and dim sum and sushi from Asia.

Preparing meals tapas-style is ideal when entertaining because you can offer your guests a variety of small plates that are portion-controlled yet deliciously light and sensible for the summer.

Free Senior Medical Trips

Medical transportation with curb to curb service Mondays through Fridays is provided at no cost to Quincy seniors.

The service requires two weeks notice for trips, including those to Braintree Hospital, Carney Hospital, Milton Hospital and eight major hospitals in Boston.

To request a trip, call the Transportation Office at 617-376-1242

Try these mouth-watering alternatives at your next gathering.

Traditional: Hamburgers and Hotdogs

Tapas-style: Mini Turkey Meatballs

Turkey meatballs are a great choice for small plates and let guests have a protein option that is more sensible than fatty hamburgers and hotdogs. Cook some in your favorite lightly-flavored sauce and place between three and five on a plate. Bon appetit!

Traditional: Fruit Bowl Salad

Tapas-style: Individual Grilled Fruit Skewers

During summer, grocery stores and farmer's markets are bursting with nature's bounty of sweet fruit. Go tapas-style and separate your favorite fruit selections on individual fruit skewers. For a unique taste, set fruit kabobs on the grill for several minutes and let the heat bring out the sweet flavor.

Traditional: Pizza

Tapas-style: Mini Pizza

Good tapas embrace light portions and variety. Everyone loves pizza so go tapasstyle and make a batch of mini pizzas for your guests. These can be made on Weight Watchers Whole Wheat Pita Bread with tomato sauce, sprinkled with low fat Mozzarella cheese and topped with a variety of vegetables including mushrooms, broccoli and onion.

Traditional: Sandwiches

Tapas-style: Tea Sandwiches

Tea sandwiches are prepared sandwiches that are small enough to be eaten in two or three bites. Most are made from traditional white or wheat bread and are filled with a variety of savory cheese and meats. Start by making full sandwiches and removing the crusts. Cut each into four triangle pieces. For a fun summer theme, use flower or animal shaped cookie cutters to cut out tea sandwich shapes.

Traditional: Chocolate Cake

Tapas-style: Yogurts or Chocolate Candies

Individually packaged yogurts or chocolate candies are a perfect dessert option for a tapas party instead of a high fat chocolate cake. Weight Watchers yogurts, for example, come in a variety of indulgent flavors including amaretto cheesecake, Boston cream pie and cherry cheesecake, so guests can choose their favorite for a cool summer treat. Another option is to serve is Weight Watchers chocolate candies including the new Peanut Butter Cups or Chocolate Mousse candies, unwrapped and displayed on a beautiful glass platter.

If you think tapas might be a good idea for your next gathering, try this recipe for delicious veggie sandwiches:

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ARE YOU PARTIAL TO DENTURES?

Some patients with missing teeth have neither enough remaining (or properly positioned) teeth for a bridge nor sufficient bone for implants. In such cases, a removable partial denture may replace the missing teeth. Partial dentures are composed of a cast metal base with clasping metal "arms," which hold the denture in place. Pink plastic is baked over the metal to lend the appearance of gum tissue. Porcelain teeth are then set into the pink gum plastic to replace the missing teeth. The base of the partial denture rests lightly on gum tissue, which will change over time. To ensure a proper fit, therefore, it is necessary to visit the dentist at regular intervals for modification to the denture base.

Dentures can be an affordable and time-effective solution for one or more missing teeth. Using proven state-of-the-art technology to enhance your experience, we maintain the most advanced procedures and equipment available to ensure that every patient achieves a healthy and beautiful smile. We emphasize preventive, functional, and cosmetic dental care for all ages. Teeth are meant to last for a lifetime. They will take care of you, if you take care of them. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because dentures, like teeth, are subject to accumulations of bacteria-laden plaque, they must be cleaned daily, like natural teeth.

And Teddy Walsh On New Paths

QHS Trio Leaves Distinguished Mark On, Off Field

By SEAN BRENNAN

This fall when the new school year begins at Quincy High School and students start to prepare for the upcoming academic year and fall sports season, three of the most distinguished Presidents to ever compete on the athletic fields and in the classroom will be beginning the next phase in their academic and athletic careers.

Michael LeBel, Ricky Salvucci and Teddy Walsh graduated from QHS in June, but the legacies that all three have left will be remembered for years to come. Not only did all three star in and produce in a combined four varsity sports (football, golf, ice hockey & baseball), but all three were standouts in the classroom as well.

For LeBel and Salvucci, the college experience will begin in September. LeBel will be heading down to the University of Rhode Island to study business and play baseball for the Rams, while Salvucci will be beginning his college career at Northeastern University in Boston with a concentration in engineering.

Walsh is planning on taking a year to play junior hockey for the Bay State Breakers of the Eastern Junior Hockey League before starting the next step of his academic career in the fall of 2009.

Before we get to the numerous achievements that these three accomplished playing high school sports, of which there are many; their real accomplishments in the high school sense took place within the halls and classrooms of QHS.

LeBel was a member of the exclusive National Honor Society (NHS) since the 10th grade, earned Distinction Honor Roll status all four years, was awarded the President's Award for Academic Achievement (silver) his senior year and was a member of the Museum of Fine Arts Docent Program and the QHS Career and Technical Advisory Board.

LeBel will be attending the University of Rhode Island on a partial baseball scholarship. He is planning on majoring in Business.

Salvucci graduated #6 out of his graduating class of 364 with a GPA of 4.249. He earned Distinction Honor Roll status all four years, was a member of the NHS throughout high school and was the NHS President his senior year and was a Peer Educator during his final three years at QHS.

He also was a Museum of Fine Arts Docent, a member of the Student Council, a D.A.R.E. counselor and the recipient of six Quincy scholarships for incoming college students.

MICHAEL LEBEL

RICKY SALVUCCI

TEDDY WALSH

Salvucci will be attending Northeastern U. as a recipient of a Merit of Academic Excellence Scholarship (4 years). His college focus will be in the field of Chemical and Material Engineering.

Walsh graduated #19 out of the graduating class of 364 with a GPA of 4.0. He was a member of the NHS since his sophomore year and earned High Honor/Distinction all four years.

He was awarded the Football Academic Award for the highest GPA from freshman to senior year, was the recipient of the William Dunn, Jr. Scholarship Award and the John Bogan Scholarship Award and was on the staff of the QHS newspaper during his junior and senior years.

For their entire academic prowess, LeBel, Salvucci and Walsh were just as decorated and accomplished on the playing fields.

LeBel was four-year member of the QHS golf team and co-captain his senior year. He played hockey in 9th, 11th and 12th grade, winning the Atlantic Coast League Sportsmanship Award and the QHS Pride Award this past winter.

But his best sport was baseball. LeBel, a four-year varsity player, was team captain this past year and was an ACL All-Star during his junior and senior years. He was also a member of Quincy Legion.

Salvucci was also a four-year member of the QHS golf team and co-captain his senior year. He earned ACL All-Star status last fall and was the recipient of the Edward V. Cossenboom Award. Salvucci also earned the ACL Sportsmanship Award during his junior and senior seasons.

He was a three-year starter on the QHS baseball team, winning the QHS Scholar Athlete award three times and the Varsity Team Rookie of the Year as a sophomore. Salvucci finished his baseball career on a high note; he was named to the ACL All-Star team and finished the year with a .431 batting average. He will play on the Fall Roster Baseball Squad at Northeastern U.

Walsh was a two-year varsity starter and team captain for the QHS football team. He was a four-year starter and a three-year captain for the QHS hockey team, finishing his high school career with 103 points and by being named to the ACL All-Star team three times and he finished in the top-3 in scoring in the ACL his junior and senior seasons.

He was also a three-year starter and captain of the baseball team this spring and earned ACL All-Star honors this season.

For Mike Draicchio, head baseball coach at QHS, these three epitomize what he and every other coach and teacher at QHS hope student-athletes become during their time as Presidents.

"These three always brought a no-nonsense approach to practice and games," he said. "They were never out-worked on the diamond and all three took their responsibilities as team captains very seriously. But it wasn't just that they are all great athletes - which they are - but it was the way that they went about their jobs in the classroom as well."

"They all took that responsibility of playing sports all year long and extended it to their school work. All of them graduated as some of the best and brightest, and they should all do very well in college.

"But when it came to playing baseball, without these three in the lineup we would not have been a state tournament team two out of the last three years. They held our team together and made it that much more enjoyable to coach. Their leadership will be impossible to replace."

For LeBel, Salvucci and Walsh, the chance to represent Quincy High School and each other is what drove them to be the best in both venues and helped to form a friendship that will last long after these high school memories faded away.

"I loved playing with these two during the baseball season and with Mike during hockey season," said Walsh last week at Adams Field. "My best memories were traveling or playing against teams from different leagues. Quincy kind of has a rep as a tough city with tough kids and when we practice and towns with that attitude it was always sweet when we won."

"We will always remain friends, but playing sports and going to school with them is what I'll remember most."

Added Salvucci: "Playing with Ted and Mike was great. They are good friends and it made it that much easier if I struck out or had a bad inning because they were always there to pick me up."

"Both of them always played their hearts out and I think we all pushed each other to be the best we could be. They always had my back either playing golf or playing baseball."

LeBel said, "I have known Ricky since 6th grade and it was actually Teddy who brought me back to hockey (LeBel did not play his sophomore year). Both of them inspire me and have always pushed me to become a better athlete and friend."

"We did some great things together in our four years at QHS and finishing up our time together playing baseball was a good way to end it."

All three agreed that high school sports brought them closer and the friendly competition in the classroom made them more well-rounded students, but all three are also ready to move forward and discover what lies ahead.

When asked if they will miss the Quincy High School experience, a second of silence was followed by three sly smiles, and this response from Walsh:

"I think we were all ready to graduate and move on...but driving by the school and knowing that we won't be going back kind of bums you out."

The guess here is that all the teachers, coaches and classmates who had the privilege of knowing LeBel, Salvucci and Walsh during the last four years at QHS share that same sentiment.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, July 18, 2008, Liquor Inspector/Lieutenant Peter Turowski received a call from a parent informing him that she had to take her 14 year old daughter to Quincy Medical Center the day before for alcohol poisoning.

The mother was very upset and wanted to help the Police catch the person who purchased the alcohol for her daughter. She stated one of her daughter's friends knew of a man who has been buying alcohol for underage children in the Wollaston area. She added many kids would telephone this man to place an order for alcohol and meet him later.

LT. DAN MINTON

A call was made and the man, riding a bicycle, delivered the alcohol to the Mass Fields playground on Willet Street. The parent provided the first name and telephone number of the suspect, along with his description - 50 years old and always wearing a baseball cap. In this case, the suspect arrived 15 minutes after the call with the two points of vodka that he handed over to the two girls at approximately 4 p.m. on the 17th.

The parent said she learned of this after she went looking for her 14-year-old daughter around 7 p.m. and found her at the playground semi-conscious. She immediately took her to Quincy Medical Center, where she was diagnosed with alcohol poisoning.

Lieutenant Turowski then went to Supreme Liquors and inquired about the suspect on the bicycle. The clerk said he was aware of the person but not as a suspect, although he did add that the suspect had said that kids are always asking him to purchase alcohol but he wouldn't because he was already barred from Wollaston Wine for buying for underage kids. Lieutenant Turowski confirmed this with Wollaston Wine management.

On Monday, July 21, 2008, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Lieutenant Turowski met with Officer David Coletti, the Community Policing Officer in Wollaston and updated him on the suspect. With the assistance of a 19 year old female, a call was made to the suspect and she placed an order for alcohol and told him to bring it to the Mass. Fields Park. The suspect said that he couldn't meet there because there were too many Police Officers checking the area lately (which was true).

The suspect said he would meet her behind Friendly's Ice Cream Restaurant in a half hour. Detective Rick Wash and Officer Dave Coletti joined in the surveillance. After a half hour passed, the female called the suspect again and he asked her what kind of alcohol she wanted and that there would be a $5.00 fee. She told him that she wanted vodka. The suspect arrived a few minutes later and the female handed him a ten-dollar bill, that was marked and the serial number noted.

The suspect took the order and the ten dollars and rode off, returning minutes later. He gave the female a bag and she looked inside, confirmed it was vodka, and then gave a prearranged signal to the Officers, who approached the suspect. The suspect, a 48 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for "Procuring Alcohol for a Minor." The suspect had $5.62 in his front pocket.

Lieutenant Turowski and Officer Coletti went to Supreme Liquors, which is two blocks away and spoke with the clerk, who confirmed that the suspect was just in the store and purchased the vodka. The clerk also returned the marked ten-dollar bill and even gave the receipt from the purchase that the suspect left behind. The receipt was for $4.38, combined with the money on the suspect equaled ten dollars.

Nice Work!

In this case, it was the effort of a concerned citizen/parent that helped us focus on the suspect and prevent another incident of alcohol poisoning, or worse, from occurring again. According to sources, this suspect actually had a book of clients and had been doing this for months. The Quincy Police Department would like to thank the parent who provided the solid information that led to this arrest. We would also like to thank Supreme Liquors for their assistance and cooperation in piecing this case together. Wollaston Wine should also be recognized for their refusal to allow the suspect in their establishment.

This is just another example of the community working with Quincy Police Officers for the betterment of all. When citizens provide information about past, present or future crimes, as well as suspicious behavior, no matter how insignificant it may seem, it helps the Officers take the necessary actions to keep the streets safe! Lieutenant Turowski can be reached at (617) 745-5778.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today," is a good old maxim; you will find it is a reliable rule to follow, and by closely adhering to it you will be saved a great deal of trouble, sorrow and regret.

DO IT NOW!

"If you have a task worth doing, do it now! In delay there's danger brewing, Do it now! Don't be a 'by and buyer'"

And a sluggish patience-trier;

If there's aught you would acquire, Do it now!

If you'd earn a prize worth owning, Do it now!

Drop all waiting and postponing, Do it now!

Say "I will" and then stick to it, Choose your purpose and pursue it.

There's but one right way to do it.

Do it Now!

All we have is just this minute.

Do it now!

Find your duty and begin it,

Do it now!

Surely you're not always going to be "a going-to-be"; and knowing

You must some time make a showing.

Do it now! . . .

'Christmas In July', Red Hat Luncheon Beechwood Center Finale

By LAURA GRIFFIN

It's hats off Thursday (today) to the staff and teachers at Beechwood Community Center as the Red Hat Society luncheon serves as the last hurrah for Beechwood.

The event ends a 28-year run for the private non-profit agency which offered inter-generational services ranging from daycare for infants to forums for senior citizens.

For the past 14 years, Beechwood operated at the former Myles Standish School at 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy, and, before that, at the then-closed Beechwood Knoll School on Fenno Street.

On Friday, the City of Quincy officially reclaims the former school building which will be renovated for the city's Elder Services administrative offices and a citywide Senior Center.

What the future center will offer is something of a mystery for the city's seniors whose official farewell to Beechwood and its staff began a week ago with a "Christmas In July" luncheon.

"We're making one more Beechwood memory," Executive Director Sharron Beals told the 40 guests who gathered for at tables dressed in green and red cloths with centerpieces of stuffed Santas and penguins and snowmen.

In true holiday spirit, pianist Louise Swanson, 92, played "Jingle Bells" as 26 toddlers paraded through the dining area. They are the last of the pre-school students at the center which has offered camps, classes and daycare for thousands of youngsters in the past decades.

The three and four-year old youngsters charmed their elders as they sang along, counted in Chinese and then chanted, "The Barney Song" with the lyrics, "I love you. You love me."

From the decorated evergreen and the garland to the red elf hats worn by guests, the occasion had all the trappings of Christmas except there was thunder and torrential rains outside and melancholy memories of years past within.

Beals offered a present of a china teacup to each guest. She recalled her first days at Beechwood when she saw seniors drinking tea from foam cups.

Beals decided that wouldn't do and decided to find teacups for the senior program. Then Beals enlisted the help of The Quincy Sun and the staff at the now defunct WJDA.

As a result of the publicity, Beals said dozens and dozens of individuals donated bone china cups and saucers to the center.

One woman gave Beals five cups and saucers saying she was thrilled to be done with them. "She and her sister had been fighting over them for years."

Beals public thanked Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth and the city's mayors from Arthur Tobin and Frank McCauley, to James Sheets and Bill Phelan for their support.

Maryann Mahony, the center's Elder Director for the past five years, told the diners, "I've enjoyed every minute with you. We've done a lot in five years. You've been my extended family."

Tops on Mahony's list of volunteers was her husband, John "Mo" Mahony. She praised others who made luncheon and senior activities at the center easier. Among those she named were Ruth Matthews, Gert Smart, Lillian DePaulo, Lee Cronsis, and Ruth Dolobe.

Mahony who has been active politically in North Quincy for many years, said she'll finally take up piano lessons and look for a new job, "I'll be pounding the pavement."

With just days until closing, staff members described their plans and feeling to Beechwood

Program Coordinator Alyson Ryan.

"I am a working mom of three," said Ryan, adding, "All three of my children have been enrolled at Beechwood. I am losing my job, my childcare and the wonderful friends I work with."

Ryan expects to return to school and hopes "that someday I can find work that means as much to me as my work at Beechwood."

Preschool Director Sharon Fayette said she will look for work in the Early Childhood field while office manager Fran Shields will play with her grandsons before looking for a new job.

Nancy Randall will continue the seniors' "Walk of Ages" group as she has for 28 years.

Bob Melpignano will continue teaching guitar as he has for 20 years, and Eniko Koyné, Beechwood piano teacher for 19 years, will continue to teach piano.

Koyné recalled that she met her husband, the father of her three children, at Beechwood, "It has been my family."

In 1981 after Proposition 2 1/2 passed, the Beechwood Knoll School was designated for closure. Dr. Cecil Paul developed a plan to use the empty school to benefit the community.

As a result, the Beechwood Community Center was founded in 1981 by Paul, who with Donald Strong and Janet Powell incorporated that year, the Beechwood Community Life Center.

Dr. Paul's vision continued through the work of his widow, Judith, who is chairman of the Board of Directors until the dissolution of the agency.

According to Beals, the center provided hundreds of programs for daycare and enrichment programs for youngsters and older children and served over 6000 seniors annually.

On March 14, Mayor Thomas Koch notified Paul of his plans to use the former school for a senior center and asked that the "city-owned former Myles Standish School be returned to the city effective Sept. 1, 2009."

The center's last lease would have expired on September 1, 2009.

Under that lease, the center paid the city one dollar a year. However, Bill Farrell, Treasurer for the Beechwood Community Center, told City Council in May that Beechwood had actually contributed nearly a million dollars worth of upkeep, grounds and building improvements over their 11-year occupancy.

Beechwood directors will close the center today, July 31, a month early.

Kerry Warns Obama: 'Don't Let Lies Stand'

By TOM HENSHAW

Sen. John Kerry has some advice for Barack Obama's campaign team — lies have to be answered swiftly and decisively.

"I thought we did enough," said the unsuccessful 2004 Democratic presidential nominee, "We miscalculated. You can't allow a lie to sit there."

Kerry was talking about a new book, "The Obama Nation," by Jerome Corsi, the same author whose previous literary efforts inspired the Swift Boat Veterans for Truth to attack him four years ago.

Some see "The Obama Nation" as the opening gun in an attack on Obama, the presumed Democratic candidate in 2008, by a group similar to the Swift Boat people.

"If I were not a public figure," said Kerry, "I would have sued him (Corsi). He wrote page after page of lies. The opposition was spreading those lies."

"We thought the truth was out there. The Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, the Chicago Tribune, the Boston Globe, even the Navy, looked at it and told the truth."

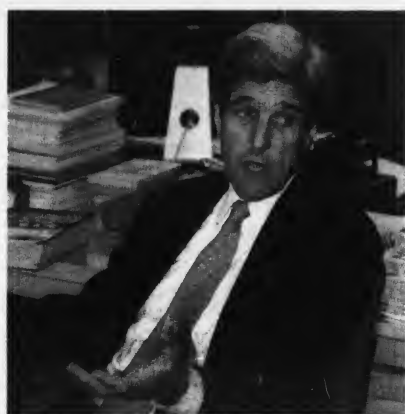

"We thought the truth would stand by itself. We miscalculated."

In a wide-ranging interview with The Quincy Sun Tuesday Kerry said he felt it was a mistake for Democratic candidates to ignore the right-leaning Fox News Channel.

"I make it a point to watch to all the channels," he said. "I've been on with Chris Wallace. I've done the Sean Hannity show and Bill O'Reilly's show."

"Bill O'Reilly is a friend of mine. He'll work to be fair. He deals with facts. He's a tough guy but he deals with facts."

Kerry said he is as much in the dark as you and I when it comes to guessing Obama's choice for vice president.

"Sure, I could give you some names to kick around," he said. "But let's wait and see what happens. If I started throwing names around it would just get people started."

Is Hillary Clinton still in the running? "A very competent lady," but who knows? Would he himself take a vice presidential slot with Obama? "I'm not interested."

The three overriding issues of the current campaign are (1) Jobs and the economy, create more jobs and get the paychecks up; (2) Get the troops out of Iraq and take on the terrorists with the rest of the world on our side; (3) Create an energy policy to deal with global climate change.

The presidential race between Obama and Republican John McCain will be a close one.

"The last few races have been pretty close," said Kerry. "If it hadn't been for Ross Perot, there would have been no Bill Clinton. If it hadn't been for Ralph Nader, Al Gore would have been president."

Actually, neither Obama nor McCain have been nominated by their respective parties and won't be until the Democratic convention later this month and the Republican convention in September.

The superdelegates to the Democratic convention in Denver, and Kerry is one, are not legally committed to cast their ballots for Obama, although such defections are unlikely.

"Obama is a terrific candidate," said Kerry. "I supported him early in the race and so did Ted Kennedy."

Kennedy, incidentally, is doing fine in his battle against brain cancer, said his fellow senator.

For the first time in memory, Kerry himself will face opposition in the person of Ed O'Reilly of Gloucester in the Democratic primary in September in his bid for a fifth term in the U.S. Senate.

Whatever, there'll be little if any change in the Kerry campaign style.

"I never take anything for granted," he said. "I'll do what I always do whether or not I have an opponent. The citizens have that right."

Appointed School Dept.
Human Resources Head

Mulvey Resigns Seat For School Director Post

Kevin Mulvey has resigned from the School Committee and began his new duties this week as Director of Human Resources for the School Department.

Mulvey was appointed last Tuesday by School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro from a field of five candidates.

He succeeds Tom Walsh who is retiring but is staying on to assist Mulvey in the transition.

Mulvey, an attorney, had a year and a half left on his four-year first term. A Joint Convention of the School Committee and City Council will elect his successor.

"I loved serving on the School Committee," Mulvey told The Sun Tuesday. "But this was an opportunity I just couldn't pass up. It's a challenge and a career change that I am looking forward to."

School Committee Vice Chairman David McCarthy praised the selection of

KEVIN MULVEY

Mulvey.

"A great choice," McCarthy said. "We hate to lose him as a member of the School Committee but he will be a great asset to the School Department and the right successor to Tom Walsh who has done an outstanding job."

"Kevin has the legal background, is methodical, he listens and is well-qualified to do a very good job for the School Department."

Mulvey's successor on the School Committee will be selected at a Joint Convention of the City Council and School Committee to be called by Mayor Thomas Koch who is also chairman of the School Committee. No date has been set yet.

It will be the second Joint Convention this year.

Nick Puleo was elected at a Joint Convention in February to succeed James Timmins who was appointed City Solicitor by Koch.

Puleo was runner-up in last year's city election with a vote of 7,296 to third place winner Elaine Dwyer's 10,897.

Puleo carried the Joint Convention over Karl Roos, a budget analyst and Robert Haley, Hanover town treasurer.

Eileen Mullen who finished fifth with a vote of 7,136 did not compete for the Timmins seat in the Joint Convention.

The new convention will be open to any resident over 18 years of age.

Don't Forget Sales Tax Holiday Aug. 16, 17

City residents can enjoy a tax-free weekend for the fifth consecutive year, thanks to a bill approved by the state senate and house and signed last week by Governor Deval Patrick.

The two-day summer sales tax holiday is effective Saturday, Aug. 16 and Sunday, Aug. 17 and applies to items costing $2500 or less.

"I am glad we can provide people with this small break in time for back-to-school purchases," Patrick said, adding "We hope it stimulates all sorts of sales activities during what is otherwise a slow time of year."

"This law is good news for buyers and sellers alike, giving a break to consumers when they really need it and a shot in the arm to retailers during the traditionally slow sales period," said House Speaker Salvatore DiMasi, Boston.

"It's important to be consistent and preserve our trust with taxpayers by providing another sales tax holiday this year," Senate President Therese Murray said.

"A sales-free tax-free weekend will be welcomed more than ever in this tough economy, especially with the high prices of food and fuel. The relatively small sacrifice in state revenue is worthwhile when you consider the positive impact on consumer confidence and taxpayers' wallets."

As in previous years, sales of telecommunications services, tobacco products, gas, steam, electricity, motor vehicles, motorboats, meals and items priced over $2,500 are exempt from the holiday and remain subject to the sales tax.

Massachusetts joins more than a dozen states in granting a sales tax holiday this year, according to the Federation of Tax Administrators.

"The sales tax holiday weekend is a highly effective way to stimulate economic activity and couldn't come at a better time for the retailing community," said Jon Hurst, president of the Retailers Association of MA.

Community Leaders Help QMC Plan Cancer Walk

A growing group of community leaders is hard at work helping to organize the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk.

"Last year was a tremendous event and we're happy to say more people are offering their help this year as we plan our 11th Walk," said Robert (Bob) Curry, owner of Curry ACE Hardware, chair of the QMC Board and one of the founders of the Walk.

The committee has doubled in size from 25 to 50 members from all sectors of the community.

The Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 28th and is a four-mile seaside walk. This year the Walk Committee is working to increase the number of events and activities during and after the Walk including hosting the Child Identification Program (CHIP), health and wellness activities and lots of family fun along with free refreshments.

The Quincy Police Department and many other law enforcement agencies will hold a community safety fair. Organizers also are directing a major effort to engage the Asian community in Quincy as well.

For more information, visit www.quincymc.org or call 617-376-5493.

In 1995, the Curry Family established the Marie A. Curry Fund at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) as a lasting, living memorial to their wife and mother who died of breast cancer. Marie's family and the City of Quincy's Mayor's Commission on Women joined together in 1998 to create a walk to support the Curry Fund.

Now in its 11th year, the QMC Cancer Walk supports the Fund's mission to promote the early detection and prevention of a wide range of cancers. Resources are used to ensure that women and men in our community who have the need can access free and potentially life-saving cancer screenings, to purchase state-of-the-art medical equipment to detect cancer, and to fund cancer education programs for caregivers.

Nearly $1.5-million has been raised for the Curry Fund since its inception.

Decline In Membership

Beth Israel Closing 'An Historic Loss'

By TOM HENSHAW

"I heard they hadn't had a minyan in two years," said Irving Isaacson, describing the 10-man minimum for an Orthodox Jewish service. "People are just not going to synagogue anymore."

Isaacson, a 50-year former member now living in Randolph, was tracing the demise of Temple Beth Israel, the 90-year-old synagogue on Grafton Street, Quincy Point, which closed its doors to worshippers last week.

Beth Israel President Harold Krasnoff of Hull, who announced the closing, declined to estimate the membership but Marilyn Reisberg, a member for 61 years, said 20 or 30 members "is a lot."

"We'll all miss it. I'm sorry to see it go," said Isaacson, who left the synagogue five years ago and moved into senior housing in Randolph.

"It's an historic loss," said Dr. Abraham Mann, the son of the temple's rabbi, Jacob Mann, who served for more than 60 years until his retirement in 2003. He died in Jerusalem in 2005.

Dr. Mann grew up in Quincy, attending the Daniel Webster School and playing ball in the field behind the synagogue but he left Quincy 46 years ago and now lives in New York.

"Closing a synagogue is a terribly moving experience," he said. "It's a sad day for the Jewish community that remains in Quincy. It's sad but it's the reality."

TWO SONS OF RABBI Jacob Mann, longtime spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue, attended the dedication of Rabbi Mann Square on Grafton Street in 2005. Rabbi Dr. Abraham Mann (left) and Dr. Rabbi Jonah Mann read the inscription on the plaque.

"People used to come in from Plymouth for the minyan. There was once a very strong attention to the Jewish tradition. Now new ethnic groups, new cultures move in."

Marilyn Reisberg recalls the day 61 years ago when she got married in Temple Beth Israel and the congregation was so large that "there was standing room only for Yom Kippur services."

"I knew it was coming for over a year," she said. "It was a congregation in demise starting 15 years ago. It has been closed all winter."

"I'm 80 years old and I don't know how much longer I'll be around. Most members of the congregation are well over 65."

The closing of Temple

Beth Israel leaves Quincy with only one active synagogue, Temple Beth El at 1001 Hancock St., where once there was four.

Reisberg herself has joined Temple B'nai Shalom in Braintree, which is joining with Temple Beth El to celebrate the High Holy Days (Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur) next month.

Krasnoff said the disposal of the Beth Israel property at 33 Grafton St. and the sacred articles like the Torah and the Ark is still undecided but Reisberg said everything will probably go to Maimonides School in Brookline.

Welcome To Quin-zee

There are probably a lot of people in Quincy these days wondering-why.

Why we pronounce it Quin-zee instead of Quin-see.

They are mostly tourists from out-of-state flocking to Quincy this year, thanks largely to the HBO mini-series "John Adams" based on David McCullough's Pulitzer Prize winning biography.

Some 15 or so other Quincys in the U.S. pronounce it Quin-see. Including our sister city, Quincy, Ill. Are they right and we're wrong?

No.

Being the first Quincy in the U.S. there's a good reason why we say Quin-zee and not Quin-see.

That was the way the man for whom Quincy is named-Col. John Quincy-pronounced it back in Colonial days. As did the family.

He was the great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams, also named for him.

Many visitors think Quincy was named for the sixth president. In fact there are some right here who think so.

If some of the early settlers had their way, it wouldn't be Quincy at all. It would have been the town-and now-city of Hancock.

They wanted the honor to go to native son John Hancock instead of Boston born Col. John Quincy. Hancock was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree the new town of Quincy Feb. 22, 1792. Hancock signed it the next day.

But at the first town meeting in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock inn honor of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

It touched off a verbal battle but the petition was shot down. Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished but deceased person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased. He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741-12 of those years as Speaker of the House.

He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

The colonel is the reason we say Quin-zee. But, did you know the French have a far different pronunciation?

The late Paul Harold was honored with the William O'Connell award by the Quincy Historical Society in 1984.

And celebrated the occasion by treating those present to Quincy wine.

He had visited France and arranged to have two cases of the namesake Quincy wine imported from the Loire Valley in France where the Quincy vineyards are located.

HAROLD

The name Quincy is actually French Harold told those in attendance as they sipped the wine. And noted the French don't pronounce it Quin-zee. Not Quin-see either.

In France, it's Can-say.

But it will always be Quin-zee to us.

And so we would like to welcome all of you who are visiting not to Quin-see, not to Can-say but to Quin-zee.

Have a great visit.

R.R. STATION WOLLASTON MASS

THIS 1917 real photo postcard shows a steam driven passenger train approaching the old Wollaston Depot on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad's Old Colony Line. This view north from the Beale Street bridge shows two waiting taxis. One is horse drawn. This station was designed in classic 19th century Victorian style; capped with a handsome clock tower complete with a wrought iron weathervane and trimmed in ornate iron filigree. Built in 1870, it was originally on the other side of the tracks. It was known then as the Wollaston Heights Station and was built to serve the new suburban community being built atop the hills of Wollaston. The developers offered one-year free train service to Boston as an incentive for homebuyers. To allow for the widening of Newport Avenue in the early 1900's the station was moved to this location. The MBTA demolished the structure in 1969 to make way for the present modern Red Line station here now. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

READERS FORUM

A Different Opinion On Beechwood Center Closing

This is response to Jennifer Logue's article in the Readers Forum on the closing of Beechwood on the Bay. She asks what will happen to the 50 seniors who come to Beechwood each day for care and companionship.

Jennifer, have you ever actually seen 50 seniors being cared for at Beechwood? I worked in the office for 10 years. There were never more than 8 to 10 seniors there, and they were not allowed every day. They were allowed to come on certain days of the week, and they also were given a time allotment.

If you happened in on a Thursday there would be many seniors there for the luncheon that the City of Quincy provided, not Beechwood. Sharron Beals, the executive director, took many pictures on those Thursdays and always had them displayed in The Quincy Sun, as if that is what it was like on any given day. It was not! Remember, I worked there for ten years, I saw all that went on.

Ms. Beals displayed a section of the new gym roof in The Quincy Sun article (July 31, 2008) "Christmas in July." I think she was trying to let everyone know that Beechwood had put on and paid for the new roof. She is correct, except the roof was done while I still worked at Beechwood. I have been gone close to five years. Why show the roof now? When you rent a building for $1 a year for 14 years, maybe you should kick in for the new roof.

Now, for the $70,000 per year to maintain the building! I would have to actually see proof of that. Just putting something in print does not make it a fact. Why should the city be paying rent elsewhere when we have a building of our own? The rent Quincy pays for buildings we rent for the seniors can now be put toward the maintenance fee of our own building. The seniors in Quincy will benefit from the Senior Center that will be in this building.

As for the Senior Olympics, that also was City run. Some of the activities took place in the building. The building will still be there and the City and its' gracious donors will still run the Senior Olympics. They did a wonderful job this year.

Jennifer, you don't have to worry, the parents have all found new places to bring their children. The music instructors have relocated in the community, so their students won't suffer without them. The staff will find jobs, I am sure. Many are still close friends of mine; they seem to be handling this change fine.

If you remember reading the articles from the Mayor, he gave Ms. Beals the opportunity to stay open until at least December in order for the parents to find day care or for Beechwood to find a new facility. She can now sit and play as hard as she worked as she explained in one of her many articles in The Quincy Sun.

Hopefully in a year or so when the new Senior Center is up and running you will see that your worry was all for nothing.

Falco, Mullen Face 'Intensive Interviewing' For Police Chief's Job

By FRANK McCAULEY

With the retirement of former Police Chief Francis X. Finn approved by the State Retirement and Pension Boards, Mayor James A. Sheets said that he will begin "intensive interviewing" with the two candidates to succeed Finn next week.

Sheets said he plans to meet with Sgt. William Falco and Lt. Francis Mullen for two hours each next week.

If all goes according to plan, Sheets said he will name the new chief by Sept. 1 Falco was the top scorer in a Civil Service examination while Mullen finished second.

(Editor's note: Mayor Sheets chose Lt. Mullen to fill the Chief's job. Sgt. Falco, who went on to become a police captain, was later appointed Chief by Mayor William Phelan.)

REHIRING UNLIKELY, MORE LAY-OFFS LOOM

With the city slated to lose $1.5 million in local aid this fiscal year, Mayor Sheets said it is unlikely 47 laid-off workers will be rehired this year and it is possible that more employees will be cut from the payroll next year.

The state legislature voted to reduce local aid by four percent to balance the state budget. With the governor expected to approve the measure, Quincy's local aid will drop from $35,535,759 to $34,100,000.

Sheets called the legislature's action "the worst news of my administration" because it's really the first time the legislature has itself cut local aid.

A Big 'Thank You' For Maryann Mahony

I have been a volunteer at Beechwood on the Bay for the past couple of years helping in the Senior Room.

I read the article in July 24's issue of The Sun on the closing starting the effect it will have for all who attend the programs. While the article was a well-deserved tribute to Sharron Beals and all the good work she has done. I was so very surprised not to read anything on Maryann Mahony.

Everyone knows Maryann supervised the Senior Room and poured her heart and soul into making it a warm and entertaining place for all who came. I think this woman deserves to be mentioned, deserves a big thank you and most of all a round of applause.

Marie's Kitchen

Phil's Scalloped Linguine

I was talking to my brother Phil and he asked me if I wanted to have dinner with him and my sister-in-law Teresa. I told him I was already preparing dinner.

When he told me he was cooking one of his favorite dishes, which sounded better than mine. He said I should come for lunch the next day to have a taste which I did.

So today's recipe is so easy to prepare, and so delicious.

SCALLOPED LINGUINE

- 1 pound linguine
- 1 pound large scallops
- 1 medium onion (chopped)
- 2 cloves garlic (chopped)
- 1/2 cup sliced black olives
- 1 package fresh mushrooms (cut)

Olive oil for sauteing grated parmesan cheese for topping
salt and pepper to taste

Start the water for the linguine and cook according to directions. While they are cooking, prepare the scallops by cutting them in fours. Cut the mushrooms. In a large frying pan, heat the oil, add the garlic and onion and sauté for a couple of minutes. Add the mushrooms, and stir until they are tender. Add the olives and scallops and cook until scallops are done.

Drain the pasta and place in the same frying pan and cook until well blended. Serve with Parmesan cheese.

I sat there for lunch and even though he filled a large dish, I almost ate the whole thing.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Don't Rely On Luck Alone

Sometimes homeowners get lucky. I just read the narrative of a recent fire incident report where I'd say luck played a role in the homeowners' good fortune.

Once you read it I think you'll agree. It read:

"Arrived on scene...to find a reported fire on the second floor; all occupants evacuated. Investigated the report of a smoldering fire in the rear right bedroom closet... The cause was determined to be electrical arcing from an extension cord.

The cord supplied power to a fish tank located on top of a dresser inside the closet. The fire started three quarters down from the top of the dresser on the right side where the pump and the light for the fish tank plugged into the extension cord. The fire extended up the right side of the closet until the heat cracked the glass in the tank relieving the tank of water and knocking the fire into a smoldering state. Fire service personnel checked for extension and evacuated any remaining smoke from the building..."

I've witnessed something similar once when a soldered plumbing fitting failed during a structure fire and controlled the fire allowing a young boy to escape a confined area and notify others to evacuate a building. In both these instances luck prevailed while in the latter incident a young boy's life was spared.

Extension cords concern me and in this instance there is no indication of its condition prior to the fire. You would think that there would be little mechanical abuse to it where the cord was isolated within a closet; the narrative seems to indicate the fire started three quarters along its length towards the floor. That to me indicates that it was hanging vertically at the point of origin where it failed.

*Electrical fires were the third leading cause of fire deaths in Massachusetts in 2006. 579 electrical fires caused four civilian deaths. Some of those fires were a result of overloaded power strips and extension cords and cords frayed due to age and mechanical damage. (*State Fire Marshal FIREFACTORS)

I suggest then that we take the time to examine the cords we routinely use in our daily lives; we equally take them for granted. Make certain that they are not overloaded with excessive appliance usage. Check for frayed wires and cracked insulation and replace them with new ones that have a certification label from an independent testing laboratory.

Power strips should only be used with a few low current devices such as electronics. Avoid using an extension cord that is not properly rated for the appliance it powers. For instance, a typical "lamp cord" cannot carry the electrical current needed for appliances such as space heaters or air conditioners. Remove extension cords from underneath rugs, carpets or furniture where insulation can be worn causing overheating and arcing.

Please take some time in a proactive effort to keep a fire safe household. Do not rely on luck alone. Checking our extension cords that we so frequently take for granted can be a good and valid first step in fire prevention.

Thank you for doing so.

Beach Side Johnny's Celebrates Grand Opening

Located at 793 Quincy Shore Drive along Wollaston Beach, Beachside provides a waterfront dining experience at the site of the former Hot Rod Harry's.

Owner John Pacione of Quincy said he is excited to bring some of his favorite home cooking specialties to Quincy.

"We have all of the traditional favorites, as well as a variety of homemade specials made fresh daily," Pacione said.

"We invite folks to bring the whole family to the beach for a beautiful waterfront atmosphere and a great affordable homemade meal."

Beachside Johnny's has all of Harry's favorites along with many new items, including pizza, fried dough, Richies Slushs and a full children's menu.

Prices are reasonable. Beachside is open 7 days a week from 11 a.m. until midnight and can be reached at 617-471-3251.

Koch To Host Community Cookout

Mayor Thomas Koch will host his second annual Community Cookout from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 7 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The event, which Koch started last year as a candidate for mayor, will feature hot dogs and hamburgers, Moonwalks and games for youngsters, sports, bocce for adults and entertainment. The cookout is free.

"It was a great night of family, friends and fun last year, and we decided to make it a tradition," Koch said. "I want to invite everyone to stop by. These are the kinds of events that make our city special—everyone getting together to share a few laughs and relax. And there is no better place than Pageant Field for these kinds of community events."

Several hundred people attended last year's event, which is paid for by the mayor's campaign committee. Koch has been visiting community groups and organizations across the city during his first six months in office, but said he wanted to get together with as many people from around the city in a more informal setting.

"I am looking forward to seeing a lot of old friends, and hopefully meeting some new ones," Koch said. "And if folks want to talk about issues in the city, what's better than doing it over burgers and dogs?"

Germantown Neighborhood Center's Annual Fashion Show Today

The Germantown Neighborhood Center will be hosting its annual Intergenerational Fashion Show today (August 7) with the seniors at the O'Brien Towers.

The girls, who attend the Center's Girl Power Camp, with help from the Boys Camp, have organized the show. The campers have worked hard to make this event a celebration of Quincy's diversity.

In addition to bringing together students and senior citizens, the show will feature multicultural fashions. The project has taught the students the importance of community service and everyone is looking forward to presenting their work.

The Fashion Show will be held at the O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St., from 12 Noon to 2:30 p.m. Applebee's will donate the lunch.

The show is sure to be fun for all ages, so join us for this great community event.

Work To Resume On Fore River Bridge

Work will soon resume on a new bridge over the Weymouth Fore River soon after Gov. Deval Patrick signed off on a nearly $3 billion eight-year plan to repair or replace 250 to 300 of the Commonwealth's most neglected bridges.

"This program will make our bridges safer at a time of critical need, create thousands of jobs and provide long-term economic benefits along the way," said Patrick.

The accelerated bridge repair plan will be financed using $1.1 billion in grant anticipation notes. Which borrow against anticipated future federal funding and $1.9 billion in gas tax bonds to be repaid with existing tax revenues.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, July 21, 2008, at approximately 4:45 p.m., Officer Bruce Trieu was walking the beat in Quincy Square.

As he approached Brennan's convenience store, he looked into the glass window and witnessed a man holding the store clerk by his shirt collar as he dragged him toward the cash register counter.

The officer saw the victim trying to fight off the suspect by punching the suspect numerous times. Even though the victim was able to punch the suspect in the face, the suspect maintained a hold on him. Officer Trieu immediately went inside of Brennan's and identified himself as a Quincy police officer. The clerk/victim screamed, "He tried to rob me." Officer Trieu immediately placed the suspect in handcuffs and asked the victim if a weapon was involved. The victim said no. Officer Trieu notified Communications of the arrest and requested a cruiser for transport.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer then interviewed the clerk, who said the suspect came into the store to try to place a bet with the lottery. He said the machine did not accept the lottery ticket because it was marked incorrectly. When the clerk tried to show the suspect why his lottery ticket would not work, the suspect pushed him back stated, "Give me your money" and then reached over the counter, opened the cash drawer and tried to grab the money out of the cash drawer.

The clerk stated he immediately grabbed the suspect by the hand. The suspect then grabbed him by his shirt collar and tried to pull him over the counter. The clerk stated he tried to free himself but was unsuccessful. He was afraid of being pulled over the counter, so he started throwing punches to get free. This is when Officer Trieu witnessed the crime occurring and arrested the 46-year-old Quincy resident for unarmed robbery.

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Friday, July 18, 2008, at approximately 5:45 p.m., Officer David Zupkofska was dispatched to the rear of the Quincy Athletic Club located 100 Quincy Ave. for a report of a man yelling in an enclosed fenced in area.

Upon arrival, Officer Zupkofska observed a white male inside the penned in area. Upon seeing the Officer approaching, the male threw a paper bag over the fence. Detective Brian Coen, who just arrived, opened the bag to find an opened one-quart can of Styrpeeze paint stripper. Officer Zupkofska then observed the male/suspect place a white plastic bag to his face and appeared to be inhaling. The Officers believed that the suspect was inhaling toxic vapors.

Officer Zupkofska notified Communications to send additional Officers due to the difficulty in approaching the suspect inside a small fenced in area who was quickly becoming agitated. An ambulance was also dispatched to the scene.

The officers spoke with the suspect, trying to get him to come out, but he then armed himself with a large branch (approx 5' in length, 2" diameter with a pointed end) and ranted and raved. He then began pacing back and forth while shouting and slamming one end of the branch on the ground.

Officers on scene who knew the suspect from a long history, going back to the late 1980's of inhaling mind altering chemicals, attempted to speak to him and called him by his first name. The suspect shouted that was not his name and gave a false first name.

Sergeant Mark Foley arrived on scene and spoke with Officer Dennis Keenan, who stated that he was familiar with the suspect and knew him to be a "huffer", which is a street term for a person that inhales toxic vapors. Officer Keenan informed all Officers there that the suspect has an extensive prior criminal record including violent acts, resisting arrest and assaults on law enforcement personnel. He added that the suspect had just been released from prison. Officers continued attempts to reason with the suspect, who continued to shout at Officers and ignored verbal commands to exit the fenced area.

Sergeant Foley approached the gated entrance to the area, which had a posted sign, "No Trespassing Police Take Notice". The Officers again observed the suspect take the white plastic bag and place it over his mouth and nose while inhaling. Sergeant Foley at-

One Of 10 Still In Running

Anthony Acito Moves On In TV Musical Reality Show

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Anthony Acito, the Quincy resident chosen as one of 12 finalists on ABC TV's summer reality show "High School Musical: Get in the Picture," has survived the judges' first cut, and is now one of only 10 teenagers in the running for first place.

The nationally-televised TV show, which has been airing on Sunday and Monday nights, will now broadcast on Monday evenings only at 8 p.m. and will award one winner the chance to appear in a music video to run during the end credits of Disney's feature film production of "High School Musical 3: Senior Year", opening in October.

Seventeen year-old Anthony, one of the most popular kids in his senior class at Quincy High that graduated in June, appears to still be a favorite amongst his peers. Labeled as "a teddy bear," who "puts a smile on your face," during a first-impression, personality game which the contestants played with each other on last Sunday's show, Anthony seemed to never stop smiling.

On that episode, as the group walked through the actual cafeteria where previous "High School Musicals" had been filmed, they were surprised by a visit from the film's director-choreographer, Kenny Ortega, who inspired the teens to sing "You Are The Music In Me" as a group.

Ortega, who will be judging the finale, pulled each of them out, individually, to sing a few bars of the song, and to give them an opportunity to shine in their own moment.

And there was a second surprise announcement on Sunday's show—the producers actually invited the finalists to be in a crowd scene in the Disney film. They provided costumes and make up for the very special 'extras' to appear in a basketball game scene.

Anthony and the other contestants have been working hard, and with each other, on performance skills. The six-member faculty of the reality show has been providing coaching, some intense dance instruction, and advice, guidance and pep talks.

But tensions were highest on Monday night's episode, where students exercised lessons in 'letting go,' and 'coming out of their shells' by roaming the aisles of a local K-Mart and singing to shoppers!

Then the group was divided into trios, and performed a song for the faculty judges, incorporating harmony and musical staging. Two of the contestants didn't make the cut, and were designated to be in the chorus.

In addition to starring in the music video, the winner of the competition will also receive an exclusive talent hold agreement with ABC and a recording contract for two singles with Walt Disney Records, one of which will be a version of the song from the music video.

As long as Anthony remains in the competition, he can be seen on ABC, Monday nights at 8 p.m.

SALLY OWEN prepares to cut the cake celebrating her 100th Environmental Treasures tour. It was a surprise party for Owen how has organized the tours, year-round for the past eight years.

DOZENS OF TRAILBLAZERS enjoyed the first hike through the city's newly acquired Hazeltime site which abuts Faxon Park.

The 13.5-acre site was purchased under the city's community preservation program.

Trail Cuts Through Hazeltime Parcel

Sally Owen's 100th Tour A First For New Open Space

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Dozens of hikers celebrated Sally Owen's 100th "Environmental Treasures of Quincy" tour last weekend after enjoying the first official hike at the city's recently acquired open space, known as the "Hazeltime" parcel.

Last week's tour was the first time the roughly mile-long trail cut through the Hazeltime site had been traversed.

The 13-acre property abutting Faxon Park was purchased less than a year ago for $3.3 million under the city's Community Preservation program financed by a state program and the city's motel and hotel tax.

Volunteers headed by Steve Perdios of the Quincy Environmental Network had spent nights and weekends opening the trail through forest and underbrush. Perdios is Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee (CPC).

Perdios, also, guided the tour last Saturday and organized the celebration at the adjoining Faxon Park to honor Owens whose "Treasures" tours have been offered every month almost non-stop for the past eight years.

In 2000, Owen launched the first "Treasures" tour aimed at spotlighting the city's environmental delights.

"I went to the Park Department and had an idea," Owen said, adding that Tom Koch, now mayor, headed the department at the time. "I'm grateful to the mayor for his support."

She wanted Quincy's other residents to appreciate the city's magnificent offerings and often hidden gems from its beaches to its Blue Hills border to its glacial rocks and unique formations.

As a result, there's been a tour almost every single month, year-round for the past eight years, with a few exceptions for blizzards or rainstorms, according to Owen who said the winter tours are often packed.

"My goal was to try to have people in Quincy learn about (its natural gems)," said Owen.

Owen's idea worked because she said that every single month, one of the participants will tell her, "I've lived in Quincy all my life and...." they didn't know about an area or a particular history.

Maureen Mazrimas of Squantum, also a CPC member, echoed Owen's comment when she described visiting Squaw Rock in Squantum Park and learning that some of the rocks are unique.

"I've lived in Squantum 37 years," Mazrimas said, adding she'd been surprised at how much she learned on the Squaw Rock tour.

"She has done a fabulous job of informing people," Mazrimas said of Owen. Mazrimas added that the tours often feature the city's "buried treasures."

"I really have to be grateful for the people who lead the tours," Owen said, noting that tour leaders from different fields focus on their expertise. Tour leaders often call Owen with their ideas.

"We frequently go to the same place," said Owen, adding that each expert leader provides a new layer of interest. For example, at Merrymount Park, one guide discussed glaciers in Quincy, another the Olmstead Historic sites, and, on another trip, participants enjoyed stargazing.

She said that, often, tour leaders are "passionate" about their subject.

"They love sharing (their expertise)," she said, describing many people who give freely of their time and energy to protect or save a city treasure and no one knows about their contributions.

"You do these tours and you learn all these people who are working (on different projects) and we don't know about it," said Owen.

The 100th tour offered an example of such efforts, according to Mazrimas, who, also, saluted the volunteers who'd prepared the park.

"Kudos to them," said Mazrimas of the 12-14 volunteers who opened the path, offering hours and hours of volunteer hours. Mazrimas had visited the property when the CPC was considering its recommendation for purchase.

"I couldn't go very deeply

THE 100TH TOUR cake honoring Sally Owen was shared after the first hike in the city's new conservation property abutting Faxon Park.

TOUR LEADER Steve Perdios describes the unique offerings at the Hazeltime site, the city's recently acquired 13.5-acre conservation property. Perdios of the Environmental Network of Quincy is chairman of the Community Preservation Committee.

into it," Mazrimas said, "There hadn't been a trail carved out."

As for the trail, Mazrimas said of the dozen volunteers, "It goes to show what people will do. No city funds (were used) to carve out that trail."

The work was worth it and the tour was a success, according to Mazrimas and Perdios.

Mazrimas said the Hazeltime site offers "fabulous, fabulous views. You look into the woods and it's hard to believe I'm in the middle of a city."

Perdios described the spectacular view of Quincy Bay, seen from the top of a hill on the site, in much the same way.

"It's such a picturesque property," Perdios said, citing, also, the property's ancient stone wall and pond.

In addition, Perdios said the Hazeltime site creates an enormous conservation area as it abuts not only Faxon Park, but, also, the 50-acre Eaton Pond conservation area in Braintree.

Currently, Perdios said the only access to the new trail is at the Southeast corner of Faxon Park beyond the stone wall. The entrance is marked with spray paint, as is the new trail.

The Hazeltime property was purchased from AvalonBay Communities, Inc., which had proposed a 146-unit development on the site which is located off Falls Boulevard, Quincy Point.

Each of the monthly tours is publicized, Owen said. However, she encouraged interested persons to submit their e-mail address to her at 617-472-0799 or their mailing address to the Quincy Park Department.

More Than 10,000 Expected To Attend Celebration August Moon Festival In Downtown Quincy Aug. 24

Thousands of people are expected to converge on Hancock Street in downtown Quincy to enjoy the 21st Annual Quincy August Moon Festival Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The festival is a free event presented by Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), and will take place from approximately 1400 to 1600 Hancock St., a short walk from the Quincy Center MBTA station and close to free public parking.

The street will be closed to traffic and all vehicles must be removed from the street the night before.

"The City of Quincy is proud to celebrate many wonderful events bringing together our community. The August Moon Festival is an exciting example of our spirit and diversity" said Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, "I hope everyone can join us."

"Thank you to the hundreds of volunteers working hard to make our new venue a great success" said Jenny La the Festival co-chair. "Their work is a reflection of the growth of the Asian Community in the area and their sense of community pride."

The Quincy August Moon Festival started as a small event at the Wollaston Lutheran Church parking lot and grew to one of thousands at Presidents Plaza and Kam Man Marketplace. Now in Quincy Center, the festival continues to grow and entertain the entire city.

As a family event, the festival will offer entertainment for all ages. There will be performances of Chinese, Filipino and Indian music and dance and exhibits featuring the work of local Asian artists.

The festival will also feature the Lion Dance, Japanese Taiko Drumming and entertainment for elders.

There will be a children's area organized and staffed by the South Shore YMCA featuring free games and crafts for elementary and middle school aged children.

Local restaurants will also serve various types of Asian cuisine including Chinese and Vietnamese foods and Kam Man Foods will give away samples of delicious Moon Cakes.

More than one hundred local businesses, government and social service agencies and individuals will be participating in the August Moon Festival.

"We are grateful for the commitment and support of our Grand Sponsors, Sunshine Travel, Mohegan Sun and especially Mayor Koch and the City of Quincy," said John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.

THE 21ST ANNUAL Quincy August Moon Festival will be held on Hancock Street in Quincy Center Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"With their invaluable support, we hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian cultures, and better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American Community."

August Moon is one of the two most important holidays on the Lunar Calendar and celebrates abundance and togetherness. The annual Quincy August Moon Festival shares this message by bringing families together from the local and South Shore community to learn more about Asian cultures in a day filled with fun and entertainment.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community and aim to benefit the entire community. We have staff and volunteers fluent in English, Cantonese, Mandarin, Vietnamese and Toisanese.

For more information about the QARI's programs and projects or the festival, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.qari.info.

Credit-Card Lawsuit Exposes Sleazy Tactics

Subprime credit cards are often attractive to consumers who have had credit problems and can't get approved for a regular card. But the consumer abuse associated with these cards makes them something to avoid.

The Federal Trade Commission has finally instituted a lawsuit against a subprime credit-card company after a long investigation, and the details of the suit are worth noting.

Among the counts of the lawsuit are: misrepresentation of available credit, failure to disclose fees and failure to disclose how use of the credit card would adversely affect available credit.

Here's how the government says it worked:

More than 1 million consumers applied for and believed they would receive a credit card with a $300 available credit limit, that there were no upfront fees and no deposit was required. The promotional mailings were misleading, with consumers required to follow a complicated set of asterisks and miscellaneous symbols on the front and back of multiple pages of text. Only there, buried in tiny print in various places, was the disclosure that there "may be" certain fees such as annual fee, account-opening fee and maintenance fee, which in this case amounted to $185 of the available $300 credit limit.

Also buried was the notice that the company would withhold half the credit until the fourth month. Only $115 of the original $300 would be left after fees were immediately deducted from the available balance.

Another objectionable tactic was the use of behavior-model credit scoring. According to the lawsuit, the behavior model of credit scoring takes into consideration where the consumer is using the card. Negatives include purchases from direct-marketing merchants, marriage and personal counselors, tire retreading and repair shops, nightclubs and bars, and pawn shops. When those types of purchases were found, the credit limits were immediately lowered to below an existing balance and the consumer was charged fees for being over the limit.

If you receive offers for subprime credit cards, always read every word on the offer. Visit the Federal Trade Commission Web site at www.ftc.gov and do a search for credit cards to learn if that company is being investigated. Better yet, if you have problem credit, work to clear it up before applying for a more mainstream credit card.

Young Children, Older Adults At Highest Risk Of Death From Homes Fires

People at the highest risk of death in home structure fires are the very young and very old, according to the Characteristics of Home Fire Victims report released today by the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

Key findings from the report:

AGE

- In 2002-2005, children under age 5 were one and a half times as likely to die in a home fire as the general public.

- People age 65 and over were more than twice as likely to die in a home fire and the risk of death increased with age among older adults, with those 85 and over being nearly four times as likely to die.

- The highest risk of non-fatal injury from home fires was faced by people age 20-49 and 75 or over. Risk of injury for adults between 20-34 years old was 30 percent greater than the average person.

- For children 14 and under, heating equipment is the leading cause of civilian fire deaths. Children under the age of 5 are more than eight times as likely to die in fire caused by playing with heat source than are people of all ages.

GENERAL

- Overall, fire deaths and injuries in home structure fires are down. On average, 2,870 people died in home structure fires annually in 2002-2005.

- In 2005, home structure fire deaths were down 45 percent and injuries were down 35 percent, compared to 1980.

- More than two of every five people injured (but not killed) in home fires were trying to fight the fire or rescue someone when they were injured.

- More than one of every three fatal fire victims never woke up before being injured.

GENDER

- Males have a 30 percent higher risk of home fire death than females and an 18 percent higher risk of non-fatal home fire injury.

- Males were more likely than females to be fighting the fire or trying to rescue others from it when injured, while females were more likely than males to be escaping when injured.

REGION/POPULATION

- Rural communities were found to have the highest fire death rates in the nation. In 2006, the highest fire death rates by far were in southern communities with populations under 2,500 people. Comparable areas in the west had the second highest death rate.

CAUSES

- Smoking materials have historically caused the largest number of civilian deaths in home structure fires; however in 2002-2005, heating equipment and smoking materials each accounted for 24 percent of civilian fire deaths. Cooking equipment continues to be the leading cause of civilian fire injuries.

- For children 14 and under, heating equipment is the leading cause of civilian fire deaths. Children under the age of 5 are more than eight times as likely to die in fire caused by playing with heat source than are people of all ages.

- Fire deaths due to smoke inhalation outnumber deaths due to burns.

NFPA offers the following tips on 10 things people can do to be fire-safe at home:

- Watch your cooking
Stay in the kitchen when you are frying, grilling, or broiling food. If you must leave, even for a short time, turn off the stove.

- Give space heaters space
Keep fixed and portable space heaters at least 3 feet from anything that can burn. Turn off heaters when you leave the room or go to sleep.

- Smoke outside
Ask smokers to smoke outside. Have sturdy, deep ashtrays for smokers.

- Keep matches and lighters out of reach

- Keep matches and lighters up high, out of the reach of children, preferably in a cabinet with a child lock.

- Inspect electrical cords
Replace cords that are cracked, damaged, have broken plugs, or have loose connections.

- Be careful when using candles

- Keep candles at least 1 foot from anything that can burn. Blow out candles when you leave the room or go to sleep.

- Have a home fire escape plan

- Make a home fire escape plan and practice it at least twice a year.

- Install smoke alarms
Install smoke alarms on every level of your home, inside bedrooms and outside sleeping areas. Interconnect smoke alarms throughout the home. When one sounds, they all sound.

- Test smoke alarms

Test smoke alarms at least once a month and replace batteries once a year or when the alarm "chirps" to tell you the battery is low. Replace any smoke alarm that is more than 10 years old.

- Install sprinklers

If you are building or remodeling your home, install residential fire sprinklers. Sprinklers can contain and may even extinguish a fire in less time than it would take the fire department to arrive.

Poor Nutrition Can Undermine Workouts

Q. I have been exercising regularly for the past several months, but have only seen slight changes in the way my clothes fit and even smaller changes on my scale. My husband thinks my eating habits are sabotaging my workouts. Could he be right, or do I just need to work harder?

A. Your husband may be right on this one. Exercise is a great tool to help facilitate weight and body-fat loss, but it is only one part of the puzzle. Factors such as nutrition, stress, medical conditions and other lifestyle choices are just as important as your workouts. Each factor depends on the others to truly allow your body to be healthy, fit and strong.

There is no question that exercise is extremely important to help keep bones and muscles strong, to maintain lean muscles and promote flexibility and cardiovascular function. However, the importance of nutrition cannot be overlooked. The body uses calories for energy, and the amount the body consumes can affect how your body responds.

Your exercise routine cannot cancel out the overconsumption of calories, which can result in the body's inability to lose body fat. Try keeping a food log for a week to truly monitor your eating habits. After a week, look at where you could have made better choices and begin to make adjustments. If you continue to complete your exercise routine, with these new small changes to your diet, you should begin to see changes.

Nutrition and exercise must go hand and hand. Take your time and begin to modify your lifestyle so there is room for both. You'll also need to take note of other factors such as stress and medical conditions. Make a total evaluation of your lifestyle and find where there is room for improvement.

Seek the assistance of a professional nutritionist or dietician to help with your meal planning and analysis of your food logs, and consult a certified personal trainer if needed to help in designing a workout routine that will help you reach your goals.

Continue to work out even if your nutritional habits take a while to change, because the benefits of exercise are tremendous. However, improving your nutritional habits will put you in a win-win situation.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in Week of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475

Quitting Time:

A Look At Smoking And Preventing Diabetes And Heart Disease

(ARA) - It's well known that smoking causes cancer. But did you know that smoking may also raise your risk for type 2 diabetes? Or that it's a major factor in nearly half of heart attacks? It's never easy to stop smoking, but millions of people have quit - and you can, too. Now might be the time to give it a try.

Cigarettes contain more than 4,000 chemicals, including ammonia and substances found in rat poison. No matter how long you've smoked, you'll be healthier just 20 minutes after you quit, as your pulse rate goes back to normal. That reduces the stress on your heart. After just three days, the nicotine leaves your body and each breath comes easier. What about financial benefits? A pack-a-day smoker saves about $150 after one month without cigarettes, more than $1,800 after one year and close to $50,000 after 25 years.

About four out of five smokers would like to quit. Are you one of them? Here are some tips to get smoke-free:

- Make a Plan. Write down the reasons you want to stop smoking. Maybe you want to be around to see your kids graduate. Or be able to spend time with your grandchildren in the extra 10 years, on average, you'll live as a non-smoker. Then stock up on distractions — carrots, pretzels or sugar-free gum.

- Choose your official "Quit Day." According to Dr. Ann L. Albright, president of Health Care & Education at the American Diabetes Association, "The day you quit should be during a time that you expect your life to be fairly calm so that stress won't tempt you to smoke and withdrawal symptoms won't significantly interfere with your life." Then throw away matches, lighters and ashtrays.

- Get Help. Quitting cold turkey works for some. But more succeed by blunting the discomfort of withdrawal. Nicotine replacement therapy (NRT) can help. Options include the nicotine patch, gum, lozenges, inhaler or nasal spray. For some, prescription medicines such as bupropion (Zyban) or varenicline (Chantix) are more effective than NRT in reducing the craving for nicotine. Talk with your doctor about the best option for you.

- Get Support. When you're fighting the urge to smoke, don't go it alone. To speak with a counselor, call the National Network of Tobacco Cessation Quilines at 1-800-QUITNOW (1-800-784-8669) or the National Cancer Institute's Smoking Quilines at 1-877-44U-QUIT (1-877-448-7848).

- Stay Strong. The urge to smoke lasts about four minutes. Do what you can to wait it out. Many people go back to smoking in their first week without cigarettes. Stay strong, day by day, until you're smoke-free for a full seven days. Then treat yourself with that new CD you've been wanting. "It's a good idea to plan rewards for sticking to your goal, such as going to a movie for each week you don't smoke," Dr. Albright says. After three months, the chances that you'll smoke again drop sharply. Going 90 days without a cigarette could end up giving you a longer life.

- Keep Going. Visit www.smokefree.gov to learn more about what it takes to quit smoking for good.

It might not seem this way sometimes, but most people don't smoke. For example, in Massachusetts only 15 percent of adults are smokers. And throughout the United States, nearly half of all adult smokers have already quit.

To learn more about how quitting smoking can lower your risk for type 2 diabetes, heart disease, and stroke, call the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-DIABETES (1-800-342-2383), e-mail AskADA@diabetes.org or visit the website www.CheckUpAmerica.org.

You can also learn more at cdc.gov/tobacco/quit_smoking.

Exercise Tips For Success

(ARA) - Everybody knows that exercise is good. Doctors have told us for years that exercise can help us lose weight, look better, feel better, and even sleep better. However, exercise sounds like work, and many of us claim that we just don't have time to add more work to our daily lives.

Dr. Bart Lerner (EdD), president of Argosy University, Phoenix, offers guidelines for approaching an exercise regimen that can help everyone benefit from exercise. Lerner says, "Simply stated, sport-exercise psychology can be defined as mental management of physical resources. Staying mentally focused is the most important factor."

To build motivation for exercise, Lerner recommends outlining the reasons why you want to participate in the activity. Some people exercise to improve their performance in a sport, while others exercise to tone muscles, or socialize with friends at a gym. "There is usually more than one reason why we exercise," Lerner says. "The number one reason is weight control. It could be to lose extra weight gained throughout the year or to address health problems that have a tendency to appear in overweight people."

Making changes in your environment can help keep motivation levels high. If your exercise equipment sits in the basement, consider moving it to a more convenient spot in your house. If you don't have the facilities at home, purchase a gym membership. "When you provide for successful exercise experiences, good things can happen," says Lerner, "You don't have to do three sets of 10 from the start. Provide realistic goals. Doing one set will give you success, and you can build on that success each time."

Lerner also suggests making your exercise fun.

"People are less likely to see exercise as a chore when it contains elements of fun. Consider adding music as a motivator during the session. Mix it up a bit by varying the content or sequence of the workout. Work on arms and legs one day, and legs and stomach the next," says Lerner. "By setting realistic goals that you can achieve frequently, you feel satisfied along the way. As you progress in the level of your workout, you'll feel better. At that point, the workout becomes its own motivator."

Lerner says that those who seek to benefit from working out should exercise three to five days a week for 25 to 45 minutes at a time.

During each session, try to reach 60 percent to 70 percent of your maximal heart rate. A simple formula for figuring maximal heart rate is to take 220 and subtract your age. Each time you exercise, try to reach 60 percent of that number. To find your heart rate, feel your pulse and count the beats for ten seconds. Multiply by six to get the heart rate per minute.

"Exercise can reduce the chances of heart disease and hypertension, and reduce stress," Lerner says. "It releases endorphins in the brain, which can add to our emotional well-being. Exercise also makes one more aware of self, and can build confidence."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MISSING LINK

When missing teeth need to be replaced, one option is a "fixed bridge." This dental appliance bridges gaps between teeth by cementing the bridge (which holds a prosthetic tooth known as a "pontic" in lingo) to healthy abutment teeth on either side of the gap. Simply put, a fixed bridge is typically composed of a pontic fused between two crowns that attach to abutment teeth. Aside from a traditional bridge, another popular design is the resin bonded, or Maryland, bridge, which consists of a pontic fused to metal bands that can be bonded to the abutment teeth with resin cement and hidden from view. This design reduces the amount of preparation that healthy abutment teeth need to endure.

Could a "fixed bridge" solve your missing teeth problem? Combining the right mix of personal care, high technology, and continuing education, we maintain a commitment to our patients in every facet of our practice. If you have questions or concerns, please let us know. Our full line dental services include crowns, bridges, dentures, and cosmetic dentistry. A Job Well Done tempted to speak with the suspect but he walked away from the fence and shouted, "S%& you, you better pull out those guns and shoot me because I am not coming out, %^&* you." Based on the statement from the agitated suspect that he was not coming out and he would resist, Sergeant Foley took out a ballistic shield from his cruiser and advised the suspect that they were coming in to get him and it was his last chance to come out voluntarily.

As soon as the Officers made their move, the suspect rapidly inhaled vapors from the bag and moved away from the only gate. Once inside the fenced in area, the Officers approached the suspect, who began swinging the white plastic bag at the Officers. The bag contained an orange substance that was consistent with the substance contained in the quart can of paint stripper. The substance flew out of the bag and struck Sergeant Foley on his right ear, cheek, forearm and all over his uniform.

Officer Patten was also hit with the toxic fluid and both experienced a burning sensation immediately on the affected areas. Sergeant Foley slammed the suspect into the fence with the shield and Officers' Keenan, M.J. O'Brien and Tim Simmons attempted to place handcuffs on the suspect, who struggled but was quickly overcome.

The ambulance on scene treated Officer Patten and Sergeant Foley for chemical burns. Photos of the Strypeeze can and the white plastic bag containing the Strypeeze were taken as evidence. The suspect, a 40 year old Quincy resident was charged with two counts of "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon." This suspect, who has been in and out of prison for years, and just got out, has been sniffing glue and other chemicals since back in the 1980's when I was in patrol. He and another man, who died in 1996, were the forerunners of this activity.

Host Families Needed For Area Hockey Team

The Boston Junior Rangers Hockey Club, a newly formed AAA Midget hockey team, based out of the Bavis Ice20Arena in Rockland, is looking for host families for several of their players.

The team is made up of players from all over the United States. They will attend local area high schools while playing for the Junior Rangers.

Head Coach and General Manager Bobby Kinsella came to the Junior Rangers from the Sioux City Musketeers, a Tier 1 Junior A hockey program in Sioux City, Iowa.

"We're bringing in some of the best young hockey players in the country," he said. "These young men are leaving their homes to play with and against the best players in the country. They have aspirations to play in college and our job is to help get them there."

The host family or billet family concept is something of a hockey tradition, and is especially important at the Midget and Junior level of hockey. It involves host families opening their homes to out-of-state or out-of-country players and provides an opportunity for these young men to pursue the next step in their developing hockey careers.

During their stay, bonding takes place between the player and the host family and lasting relationships are forged. The billet home becomes a player's second home and the community becomes a second hometown.

Billet families are considered an important part of the Boston Junior Rangers Hockey program and a monthly stipend is provided to all host families, from the team.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A longtime situation starts to move into a new phase. The question for the uncertain Lamb right now is whether to move with it. Facts emerge by midmonth to help you decide.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A talent for organizing your priorities allows the Divine Bovine to enjoy a busy social life and not miss a beat in meeting all workplace and/or family commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) What began as a dubious undertaking has now become one of your favorite projects. Your enthusiasm for it rallies support from other doubters-turned-believers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Accept the help of friends to get you through an unexpectedly difficult situation. There'll be time enough later to investigate how all this could have happened so fast.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Change is a major factor for the Big Cat through mid-month. Be prepared to deal with it on a number of levels, including travel plans and workplace situations.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not like all the changes that have begun to take place around you. But try to find something positive in at least some of them that you can put to good use.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's unsettling experience could create more problems if it's not handled with care and love. And who's the best one to offer all that? You, of course.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It might not be the right time for you to start a new venture. But it's a good time to start gathering facts and figures so you'll be set when the GO! sign lights up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sagacious Sagittarius should have no trouble deciding between those who can and those who cannot be trusted to carry out a workplace commitment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Surprise, surprise. It looks as if that one person you once thought you could never hope to win over to your side just might suddenly choose to join you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might have to set aside your pride for now and accept a change that isn't to your advantage. Cheer up. There'll be time later to turn this around in your favor.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your creative self emerges as dominant through midmonth. This should help you restart that writing or arts project you've left on the shelf for far too long.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of encouraging others by example to come out from the shadows and enjoy life to the fullest.

Quincy Tennis Applications Are Now Available

The Quincy Recreation Department (QRD) is now accepting applications for their 38th annual Tennis Tournament Championships.

The event is co-sponsored by the Quincy Credit Union.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, "This marks the 13th year that the Credit Union has provided the financial backing to keep this traditional tournament a low cost activity for all ages and abilities of Quincy families. The generosity of the Credit Union to our citizens is to be commended."

The Tournament is open to Quincy residents with eleven events crowning City Champions. A special division, now in its sixth year, conducts a championship for City Employees regardless of their residency.

This year's deadline for applications is Sept. 5 and the Tournament will start Sept. 10. All matches are played on the municipal courts on Russell Park behind Quincy High School. Weather permitting, the tournament is scheduled to end Sept. 23.

This event is believed to be the largest and oldest municipal tournament in New England. The entry fee is $15 for adults and $8 for youths under 16 and entitles participants to enter as many events as they qualify. All participants receive a Tournament t-shirt.

The events are Men's Singles, Men's 35 and over Singles, Men's 50 and over Singles, Men's Doubles, Women's Singles, Women's 35 and over Singles, Women's Doubles, Mixed Doubles, Boys 16 and under Singles and Girls 16 and under Singles.

There is also a Men's Singles "B" event, which is conducted from a pool of players who are defeated in the Men's Singles first round.

The City Employee event rounds out the Tournament.

Applications can be obtained at the Quincy Recreation Department, Quincyrec.com, or in special boxes at the tennis court's entrance.

Call the QRD at 617-376-1394 if you have any questions.

At Beechwood Site

November Opening Seen For Senior Center

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city's new Senior Center at the former Beechwood site should be open by Thanksgiving, according to Tom Clasby, Director of Elder Services. "This is going to be a wonderful place for our city and our seniors that is long overdue," said Mayor Thomas Koch who expects to use a $150,000 earmark in the state budget as well as federal grant funds to get the center up and running.

"I am confident this will be an outstanding center," Clasby said this week, adding, "The people I talk with about it are extremely excited; they see this as a very very positive step."

The center will be located in the former Myles Standish School, 440 East Squantum Street, North Quincy, when the non-profit tenant, Beechwood on the Bay, Inc., leaves at the end of August. Beechwood closed with its last function Aug. 1.

"We have gone in and done a preliminary evaluation," Clasby said this week, adding, "We are right now drawing up the plans."

TOM CLASBY

Clasby said that Koch toured the building last week with him and other city officials, including Health Commissioner Drew Scheele; Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services and Gary Cuniff, Director of Public Buildings.

"The building is in good shape," Clasby said, adding that he expects to move quickly once the structure is empty.

Under Koch and Clasby's plan, the building will house Elder Service administrative offices, provide space for senior citizen programs, and, on an indefinite basis, be home to the city's Health Department.

The Beechwood on the Bay sign at the property has already been removed. However, Clasby said that, contrary to published reports, the Beechwood staff will officially remain in the building until Aug. 31.

"To this day, we don't have the building," Clasby said. The former school has approximately 15,000-sq. ft. of space on 11.2 acres near

12 Dead Birds But:

No West Nile Virus Found Here - So Far

By TOM HENSHAW

The West Nile Virus Encephalitis season is in full swing in Massachusetts and once again Quincy appears to have escaped an assault by the mosquito-borne disease that can be transmitted from birds to humans.

"Twelve dead birds have been found in the city," said Cindy DeCristofaro, the chief sanitarian in the Public Health Department, "but none of them has been tested for West Nile. No mosquito samples have tested positive either."

Last year, a total of 19 dead birds were found in Quincy and reported to the state but none of them were thought to be candidates for testing.

"The state determines which birds should be tested," said DeCristofaro. "Right now it's just crows and blue jays. It depends on

To Compete In Squantum's 'Causeway Challenge'

Grandfather, Grandson Finishing 16-Foot Skiff

GRANDFATHER AND GRANDSON, both named Rance Gillespies, prepare for the final work on their joint project, a 16-foot skiff, in Gillespie's driveway on Bayberry Road, Squantum. The project began a year ago. Young Rance plans to enter the boat in the "Causeway Challenge," next week's fundraiser for Squantum's 2009 Fourth of July celebration. In the background are wooden fish carved by the elder Gillespie.

(Quincy Sun Photo/Laura Griffin)

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Nearly a year from the start date, the Gillespie masterpiece is almost finished.

The 16-foot boat, a joint project built by grandfather and grandson, is nearly ready for its maiden voyage down Bayberry Road into the Atlantic.

Twelve year old Rance Gillespie, 3rd, calls it a "pogy boat," his grandfather, also Rance, calls it a "16-foot working skiff."

But the names don't matter to this Squantum pair who've been working together for more than year to build their boat.

Last Sunday, they were near the finish line and the first coat of paint on the raw wood as young Rance, guided by his grandfather, sanded the sides.

Then, as 67-year old Gillespie measured the skids for the bottom and young Rance held the strips steady, they talked of colors.

"Maybe, blue and white and gray," said Rance who attends Atlantic Middle School. Rance said he's 12, but he'll be 13 in just over a week, actually Aug. 18.

The Gillespies are hoping to finish in the next few days in time for young Rance to compete in Squantum's "Causeway Challenge" on Saturday, Aug. 23. The event is a fundraiser for Squantum's 100th Fourth of July celebration in 2009.

Rance will be 13 by then, "I'll probably go for stripers." He's already a seasoned fisherman and said his largest catch was a 42-inch striper.

Like his grandfather, he's also caught bluefish, flounder and mackerel and fished at Martha's Vineyard. Gillespie has kept a boat in Florida.

After the contest, Rance has big plans for his boat.

"I'm going to catch pogies and sell them," Rance, said of his plans to fish for his fortune in Quincy Bay.

Pogies are "little mackerel," Gillespie said, noting they travel in schools and can be caught with nets or poles. The pogies are used and sold for bait.

Rance is likely to do well as Gillespie described the youngster's work on the boat project from gluing to measuring to cleaning up.

In fact, building the boat was the boy's idea. Young Rance saw his grandfather rebuild an '83 El Camino with another grandson, D.J. Gillespie of Scituate. D.J., now 19, is a freshman at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, NY.

He reasoned that if his grandfather could build a car with D.J., perhaps he could build a boat with him.

Gillespie recalled Rance asking, "Can we have a project?"

"We built the jig last summer," Gillespie said explaining that a jig "is the frame" of the boat structure, like a pattern for a sewing project.

The jig has to be built first so Rance and Gillespie started with cheap plywood on the original draft. The jig lies under the structure and is used for measurement.

While Gillespie has rebuilt a number of cars, including a '46 Ford Coupe and the car used in "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?" this is his first ship-building.

"This is our first experience. We're hoping it will float," laughed Gillespie who has actually been building wood structures on his own since he was his grandson's age.

For a few minutes, he reminisced, describing the sturdy wooden huts he and his friends built each summer in the 1950's on Squantum beaches and empty lots and on the sand off Moon Island Road.

One hut actually had three stories, he recalled. In the intervening years, there have been building projects with his two sons, Rance's father, Rance, Jr., of Squantum and Donald of Scituate.

Now this boat he's built with his grandson appears to be just as sturdy and seaworthy to boot.

Gillespie offered a detailed description of the hull and side thickness and the boat's measurements and components, such as the Marine plywood and yellow pine, the specials screws, stainless steel fasteners and West System Epoxy glue.

Rance said he'll dock it in the cove on the bay side of Squantum where his grandfather kept his boats for years and his father Rance, Jr. docks his boat.

The 67-year old Gillespie is retired from Gillette. For 10 years, he was a member of Wollaston Yacht Club where he served as Commodore.

Gillespie and his wife Susan (Kelly), a Registered Nurse, are lifelong Quincy residents. They raised their four children in Squantum.

In addition to Rance, Jr. and Donald, they have two daughters, Kelly Ryan of Dorchester and Lynn Beliveau of Westboro. They have nine grandchildren.

Gillespie wondered aloud what kind of projects the next seven children will suggest.

Mariano Vs. Roos

Veteran, Newcomer Vie For Mulvey School Seat

BY TOM HENSHAW

It will be the undefeated veteran versus the rookie wannabe when the City Council and the School Committee meet in the fall to choose a successor to School Committeeman Kevin Mulvey.

State Rep. Ron Mariano, a former member of the committee for 16 years and a state legislator since 1992, has been nominated by Mayor Thomas Koch to fill the final year of Mulvey's four-year term.

Karl Roos of Park Street, Wollaston, who has never run for public office but earlier this year sought an appointment to succeed James Timmins, announced Tuesday that he too wants Mulvey's seat.

The successor to Mulvey, who resigned to become human resources director of the Quincy Public Schools, will be chosen by a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee, probably next month (September).

Koch said he asked Mariano to submit his name for the school post after an absence of three years. "We had a good talk about it, and he agreed to seek the appointment," the Mayor said.

"There is no question that Quincy Public Schools are much better off today thanks to the work of Ron Mariano over the years," added Koch, who is also chairman of the School Committee.

"We are now at a moment of time when his experience, dedication and knowledge will be a huge asset to the School Committee."

Mariano, a Quincy school teacher for 12 years, served on the School Committee from 1989 to 2005 before deciding not to run for a fifth term after he was named chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Financial Services.

Roos is the father of three children, two of them about to enter the Wollaston Elementary School and one about to enter Central Middle School, and the treasurer of the Wollaston School PTO.

He was the runnerup to Nick Puleo in the joint convention in February that was called to fill the vacancy created when Timmins was named city solicitor.

Puleo got 10 votes and Roos four, all from members of the School Committee. Roos, a pharmaceutical salesman, said he was encouraged by supporters to be a convention candidate again.

Koch said his decision to ask Mariano to seek the seat was framed largely by his knowledge of school construction projects and the positive working relationships he has built with state officials in charge of these projects.

KARL ROOS

"We have worked hard over the last six months to build a positive and trustworthy relationship at the state level and I think we have seen results," said Koch.

"Adding Representative Mariano to the mix will only help us to continue to build that trust as we move forward with school projects critical to the city's future."

Construction of a new Quincy High School is now well underway and the city earlier this year reached a cost savings agreement with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (SBA) to shave about $1 million from the bottom line.

The SBA is now working closely with the city and school officials as plans for a new Central Middle School begin to take shape.

Davis Sets Aug. 26 For Meeting On 168 New Units At Cliffwalk

Ward 4 City Councillor Jay Davis will hold a neighborhood meeting on Aug. 26 at 6:30 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center to discuss a proposed expansion of Cliffwalk Apartments, located at 790 Willard St.

Davis informed his constituents by letter that the developer, CJ Willard Street LLC, has proposed constructing an additional 168 units on land adjacent to the current structure which has some 120 units. The addition would be similar in scale and style to the current building.

Cliffwalk with offices at 790 Willard St. was built in 2002 and is managed by the same developer. The property is located off

Batterymarch Park Drive and Willard Street in West Quincy.

According to Planning Director Dennis Harrington, the property is part of a Planned Unit Development or PUD and would require a Special Permit.

The expansion plans must be reviewed by the Planning Board for a recommendation and the final decision would be made by the City Council acting as the Special Permit Granting Authority.

The Ward 4 Community Center is located at 100 Brooks Av.

That Crush On McCain

Quincy had a sort of political crush on John McCain back in 2000.

It faded a little this past February.

Will it bloom again in November?

In the 2000 Presidential primary McCain carried Quincy over George W. Bush with 65 percent of the vote to Bush's 29 percent in a six-candidate field.

The vote was 3,870 to 1,756.

Also in that race were Orrin Hatch, Steve Forbes, Alan Keyes and Gary Bauer.

On the Democratic side, Al Gore rode to a 58 to 34-percent win over Bill Bradley-5,925 to 3,518.

Far behind and out-of-sight was perennial candidate Lyndon LaRouche, Jr. with a total 47 votes.

Bush, of course, went on to win the Republican nomination and the White House, which a lot of people would like to forget.

There was some party switching here in those 2000 primaries with some 855 registered voters changing affiliations.

Though Quincy has been a Democratic stronghold since the coming of John F. Kennedy, the biggest crossover was among Democrats: 645 of them to unenrolled (Independent) and 91 to Republican.

Only 89 Republicans changed horses: 67 to unenrolled and 22 to Democrat.

And 121 unenrolled declared themselves Democrats or Republicans: 70 Democrats and 51 as Republicans.

The unenrolled, of course, didn't have to switch. They could have voted as a Democrat or Republican by merely taking either ballot on Election Day. They would technically be a Democrat or Republican for the moment and then change back to unenrolled.

McCain appeared to be the biggest benefactor of the switching with most of those crossing over indicating they were doing so to vote for him. They liked his maverick style and straight talk.

Is that appeal still there? He's now eight years older (72 later this month) and many are waiting to see who he picks as a running mate before climbing aboard.

McCain also has an albatross in Bush whose popularity is down in the political basement.

In defeating Bush here in 2000, he was running

County Commissioners To Honor RSVP Volunteers

The Norfolk County commissioners will host their annual RSVP Volunteer Recognition Luncheon Thursday, Aug. 28, at 11:30 a.m. at the Lantana in Randolph.

Any person 55 years of age and older who registers with the Norfolk County RSVP at this event and commits to at least four hours of volunteer service between August and November, 2008, will be complimentary guests of the commissioners.

During the past year, more than 400 area seniors have provided thousands of hours of volunteer service through the RSVP.

"We're proud of the volunteers at Norfolk County

RSVP," said Commission Chairman Francis O'Brien.

"Our volunteers understand the importance of caring about your neighbors and doing what you can to make life better for your community."

"They have compassion and integrity, and it's an honor to be the local sponsor of this wonderful program." Norfolk County RSVP volunteers have served such programs as adult literacy, companionship, elementary reading tutors and other human services.

against a fellow Republican.

How he fares this year against a Democrat, Barack Obama, will be interesting.

In this year's Presidential Primaries held in February, McCain slipped slightly, finishing a close runner-up to former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney.

The difference was just 254 votes-2,716 for Romney and 2,466 for McCain. Or, 48 to 43 percent. Considering McCain was on Romney's home turf, the vote would seem to indicate he still has a following here.

In the Democratic primary, Quincy voters gave Hillary Clinton a big nod over Obama.

Clinton racked up 63 percent of the Democratic vote with 11,292. Obama, lagged far behind with a 29 percentage 5,190 vote. Can McCain woo Quincy as he did in 2000?

He would seem to have a fairly good chance even though Quincy is still a Democratic town-but not as strong as it was a few years ago.

Democrats still outnumber Republicans here. At the last official count in February there were 24,713 Democrats to only 5,875 Republicans.

But the unenrolled have become a major force numbering 23,875-just 838 behind the Democrats.

They will be a key as to who carries Quincy in the Nov. 4 election. And independents elsewhere will play a major role as to whether McCain or Obama gets to move into the White House.

Polls show the election as close now and tightening, setting the stage for the independent influence.

THE STATE PRIMARIES Sept. 16 have taken a back seat with the Presidential election holding the spotlight. Not much interest locally, either.

Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano, Steve Tobin and Bruce Ayers again have no opposition.

But if you are planning to get out and vote and aren't registered you have until Wednesday, Aug. 27. The Election Department at City Hall will be open until 8 p.m. that date to accommodate you.

Scenes From Yesterday

Electric Car Terminus and Square, Hough's Neck, Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS A 1907 POSTCARD view of the Electric Car Terminus and Square at the end of Sea Street in Hough's Neck. The peaked roofed building in the right center with the porch is the Quincy Yacht Club, the only building in this view that remains today. In front of it with the oval sign was the widely popular Norteman's Pavilion where they featured shore dinners, boiled live lobsters and fresh shellfish, all taken from local waters. It alone attracted summer tourists by trolley and steamboat to Hough's Neck from all around Boston. On the

Myles Standish School 'Fits The Bill' For Senior Center

Quincy's seniors deserve to have a facility dedicated for their use and their well-being. A comprehensive senior center has been talked about for decades and we are now on the verge of seeing that dream turn into reality.

As chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging Board, I am proud that under Mayor Thomas Koch's leadership and with the assistance of Elder Services Director Thomas Clasby and the Council on Aging board, we will be opening the first citywide facility for programs to serve our senior population.

I recognize that our local community centers provide a number of programs for our seniors and have done a good job with very limited space and resources. But just like the educational needs of our children have outgrown a one-room schoolhouse, the needs of our senior citizens require a facility, as recommended by the state, of some 15,000 to 20,000 square feet to serve a senior population the size of Quincy.

Quite simply, the former Myles Standish School fits the bill. It is on one level, handicapped accessible, and has access to a bus line. When Mayor Koch asked us what our budget was, the reality was we didn't have one for new construction. The cost estimate for the previously considered site, which would have been much smaller in size, was upwards of $3 million.

During this difficult economic time, it is apparent that we have little money to work with, and that is another reason why this site works. We, the taxpayers of this city, own the building and thanks to our state delegation we have a state earmark to assist with the building renovation.

As far as the Beechwood Community Life Center is concerned, they have done a wonderful job serving our community. Originally started in the Beechwood Knoll School under the leadership of the late Cecil Paul, it moved to Myles Standish when the city reopened the school. The lease with the city was to end next September and the Mayor started talks with the Chairwoman of the Board of Directors. A letter was sent to Beechwood asking for return of the building this year. However, the Mayor made it clear on several occasions that the timetable was fluid and flexible and would work with Beechwood on the transition.

This is going to be a wonderful project for our seniors, and our entire community, that is long overdue.

John W. Molloy, chairman
Council on Aging

Praises Morrissey On Green Commission Bill

Several exciting bills were passed during the state's last legislative session-the Green Communities Bill, the Global Warming Bill, the Green Jobs Bill, and the Environmental Bond Bill, among others.

These bills are necessary for the state to reduce its emissions of greenhouse gases, improve its environment, increase the health of its citizens, and, as Gov. Deval Patrick says, sow the seeds for a new green economy.

I would like to thank the state legislators and Gov. Patrick for making Massachusetts a leader in addressing these important environmental issues. Quincy's Senator Michael Morrissey deserves special recognition for his work on the Green Communities Bill, which encourages investment in energy conservation and efficiency. It also makes community-owned clean energy projects more attractive than ever.

Energy policies are not going down. I hope Quincy will take advantage of the new policies and its own wind resource to reduce its carbon footprint along with its energy purposes. Two or three wind turbines the size of Hull II would likely cover the municipality's electric bill.

nated by Almquist Flowerland in May and distributed to families for the "Grow Together" contest.

Alyson Ryan, of the Beechwood Center staff, said there have already been reports of sunflowers towering over eight feet tall.

Participants are asked to call the Beechwood Center at 617-471-5712 by Friday with measurements or their tallest sunflower. Although the Beechwood Center has closed staff members are still there for the sunflower contest results.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Jim and Sue's Favorite Sauces

On a recent trip to the Cape, our children had cottages practically beside each other. So as we all usually ate together, and took turns cooking, it was quite a variety of foods.

One day my son Jim along with his sister Suzie decided to have a sauce making contest. And the rest of the family would taste each one served separately and vote for the best one.

I visited each one of them during the afternoon, but neither one would tell me how they were making the sauce, for fear I would tell the other one.

So when we all gathered at Suzie's place, there were more than 20 of us eating pasta from both sauces. Each had a number and we all placed either number one or two on a small piece of paper. Here are the recipes for both sauces.

JIM'S SAUCE

Salt pork cut in small pieces (about 2 tablespoons)

1 small eggplant (cut in small bite size pieces)

1 small zucchini (also cut in small pieces)

2 cloves garlic (chopped)

1 medium onion (chopped)

1 package fresh mushrooms (cut)

1/4 cup red wine

1 can tomato paste

2 cans tomatoes

salt and pepper to taste

Olive oil for sautéing
grated romano or Parmesan cheese for topping

Sauté the salt pork with a smidgen of olive oil and then add the garlic and onion. You can remove the salt pork if you wish, but Jim left it in the sauce and it gives the sauce a great flavor. Cook until all vegetables are tender. Add the tomato paste, tomatoes and wine and simmer for at least two hours. He used two pounds of pasta.

SUZIE'S SAUCE

2 cloves garlic (chopped)

1 medium onion (chopped)

Olive oil for sautéing

2 tablespoons fennel seeds

2 tablespoons fresh sage

1 pound ground turkey sea salt and pepper to taste

1 jar tomato paste (or canned)

2 cans plum tomatoes (pureed)

1 medium zucchini (grated)

2 carrots (grated)

In the hot oil, sauté the garlic and onions. Add the turkey with the fennel seeds and sage (Sue says it gives of flavor of a sausage), salt and pepper. Cook until turkey is done. Add the tomato paste and the tomatoes and simmer uncovered for 2 1/2 hours. She also used two pounds of pasta.

When all the votes were taken, I still think it was a tie. I just had to vote that way.

QEN To Host Final Working Professionals' Walk Aug. 14 & 28

The Wellness Sub-committee of the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) has been hosting a Working Professionals' Walking Club throughout the summer months.

The QEN will be holding its final to Working Professionals' Walks on Aug. 14 (today) from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Wollaston Beach (meet at Caddy Park) and on Aug. 28 from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Faxon Park (meet near picnic tables in parking lot).

This walking program was designed for people working full-time who cannot make it to daytime walking events. Each walk begins with about ten minutes of stretching followed by a brisk-paced 45-minute walk.

Walks are weather permitting. If it is raining, walks will be rescheduled to the following Thursday. Call Courtney at 508-944-3990 if you would like more information.

Clasby, also, said that city officials had expected to continue negotiations with the former tenant until Beechwood on the Bay, Inc., announced the August date of departure.

In May, Clasby told city councillors that he planned to expand COA offerings at the new site. He said the new programs will include a congregate meal site, a computer-training lab, game room, movies, library services, a music room, putting green and bocce court.

Earlier this week, Clasby said his department already offers a dozen services to 7000 of the city's 18,000 senior citizens. The COA offices are currently located at 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy, at the former naval base.

These include transportation, legal aid, eye, foot, and hearing screening, and educational presentations. The COA operates 11 transportation vans.

Up until now, dozens of COA programs were offered at community sites, such as libraries or halls. Many of these will now be conducted in the one location, Clasby said.

"Our services are available to all 18,000 seniors," Clasby said, adding that other COA directors tell him, "Their numbers increase, (with new senior centers). If we build it, they will come."

Clasby said that supporters of the move include Edward Flynn, Executive Director of South Shore Elder Services, Inc., who wrote a May letter supporting the proposal.

"I believe that the location that he (Koch) has chosen is a good one and will work well for Quincy seniors," stated Flynn in that letter.

Flynn, also, offered to increase the SSES nutrition program at the new site. SSES provides hot meals and services throughout the South Shore.

Clasby expects his department's van services will fit well into the new center's operation and planning.

It's A Body? No It Isn't

The peace and serenity that marks the Bay Point Marina in Quincy Point was shattered by a brief period of excitement last week.

The worker at Sea Crest Marine thought the object floating in Town River Bay late Friday afternoon might be a human body or at least parts thereof.

So he called police.

The cops weren't sure, either.

Chief Paul Keenan said only that it looked like "tissue or organs." But whose? Or what's?

They decided to err on the side of caution.

So they called the state medical examiner.

With no one else left to call, the ME ruled that the remains were probably those of a pig or a fish.

Case closed.

Serenity once again ruled the Bay Pointe Marina in Quincy Point.

Despite Rain, Koch Hosts Over 500 At Cookout

More than 500 people braved the rain for a summer barbecue hosted by Mayor Thomas Koch at Pageant Field last week.

Volunteers manned grills for four hours, handing out more than 500 hamburgers and 600 hot dogs to the crowd, which stayed mostly dry under the pavilion at Pageant Field.

"It was a great night, despite the rain," Koch said.

"We got to see a lot of old friends and met plenty of new ones. It's these kind of community events, where we can get together for a little fun, that make Quincy such a great place."

As the weather broke, kids played on Moonwalks and bocce and volleyball courts were packed with players. More than two-dozen volunteers coordinated the event, which Koch started as a mayoral candidate last year and plans to make an annual event.

"The volunteers, as usual, did an incredible job, and we all had a wonderful time," said Koch. "While we were all there to have a good time, it was great to talk to so many people about their concerns and hopes for the city's direction. I am looking forward to doing it again."

Health Care Measure Passes House, Senate

The State House and Senate have agreed on comprehensive legislation aimed at bringing down escalating health care costs and creating greater access to primary care.

The bill authorizes the attorney general to hold an annual public hearing with health care providers and insurers to investigate and report on health care costs and make cost reduction recommendations.

It also creates a 15-member Special Commission on Health Payment Reform to probe the current payment system and make recommendations for restructuring no later than April 1, 2009.

"The legislation promotes the modernization of the health care system to reduce waste and improve quality care, establishing the Commonwealth as a national leader in the statewide adoption of electronic medical records and uniform billing," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"Together, this could save the Commonwealth hundreds of millions of dollars."

All that is needed for the measure to become law is the governor's signature.

More Than 10,000 Expected To Attend Celebration August Moon Festival In Downtown Quincy Aug. 24

Thousands of people are expected to converge on Hancock Street in downtown Quincy to enjoy the 21st Annual Quincy August Moon Festival Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The festival is a free event presented by Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI), and will take place from approximately 1400 to 1600 Hancock St., a short walk from the Quincy Center MBTA station and close to free public parking.

The street will be closed to traffic and all vehicles must be removed from the street the night before.

"The City of Quincy is proud to celebrate many wonderful events bringing together our community. The August Moon Festival is an exciting example of our spirit and diversity" said Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch. "I hope everyone can join us."

"Thank you to the hundreds of volunteers working hard to make our new venue a great success" said Jenny La the Festival co-chair. "Their work is a reflection of the growth of the Asian Community in the area and their sense of community pride."

The Quincy August Moon Festival started as a small event at the Wollaston

Lutheran Church parking lot and grew to one of thousands at Presidents Plaza and Kam Man Marketplace. Now in Quincy Center, the festival continues to grow and entertain the entire city.

As a family event, the festival will offer entertainment for all ages. There will be performances of Chinese, Filipino and Indian music and dance and exhibits featuring the work of local Asian artists.

The festival will also feature the Lion Dance, Japanese Taiko Drumming and entertainment for elders.

There will be a children's area organized and staffed by the South Shore YMCA featuring free games and crafts for elementary and middle school aged children.

Local restaurants will also serve various types of Asian cuisine including Chinese and Vietnamese foods and Kam Man Foods will give away samples of delicious Moon Cakes.

More than one hundred local businesses, government and social service agencies and individuals will be participating in the August Moon Festival.

"We are grateful for the commitment and support of our Grand Sponsors, Sunshine Travel, Mohegan Sun and especially Mayor Koch and the City of Quincy," said John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.

"With their invaluable support, we hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian cultures, and better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American Community."

August Moon is one of the two most important holidays on the Lunar Calendar and celebrates abundance and togetherness. The annual Quincy August Moon Festival shares this message by bringing families together from the local and South Shore community to learn more about Asian cultures in a day filled with fun and entertainment.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community and aim to benefit the entire community. We have staff and volunteers fluent in English, Cantonese, Mandarin, Vietnamese and Toisanese.

For more information about the QARI's programs and projects or the festival, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.qari.info.

THE LION DANCE will be among the entertainment featured at the 21st annual Quincy August Moon Festival Sunday, Aug. 24 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

USS Salem Haunted Ship Needs Actors, Set Builders

The staff at the USS Salem are seeking monsters, greeters, and set builders for their annual Halloween Haunted Ship.

Local teenagers, 16 years old and older are invited to try for the openings as actors while those 14 year of age and older, may apply to work behind the scenes. All minors must have parental consent.

"We want monsters who are dependable, outgoing and enthusiastic, like to work with people and love Halloween," said Michael Condon, Executive Director of the USS Salem.

"Experience is not necessary," Condon said, adding, "We will teach you everything you'll need to know in our Monster College."

Volunteers are invited to the Haunters Open House planned Monday, Aug. 18 at 7 p. m. aboard the USS SALEM, 739 Washington St., Quincy.

Condon said most actors and set builders are volunteers. The volunteers have lots of fun and "great opportunities to learn behind the scene theatrical techniques."

Volunteers can serve in many capacities at the Haunted Ship, including greeters, actors, costumed characters, special effects operators, make-up applicators, and persons building sets.

The Salem's Haunted Ship will be open Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights in October starting at 6:30 p.m.

The Haunted Ship takes place aboard the 716 ft. long USS Salem berthed at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

QCAP First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Starts Sept. 4

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) will hold a free three-session First Time Homebuyer Workshop in September at the Tufts Public Library, 46 Broad St., Weymouth.

The dates are Thursday,

A year ago I thought it worthwhile to compose a flyer focusing on the awareness of life safety issues for college students choosing to live off-campus within Quincy. I was then informed that it was of limited value and I scratched the effort.

Now a year later, I am thinking an article on the subject might be of help to those Quincy students who will be leaving to live on campuses or off-campus throughout the country.

Here are some suggestions for a safe college year:

Although laws, codes and regulations for each and every state can vary, the purpose of these rules is the same: to minimize hazards and to reduce loss of life in the event a hazardous condition exists. At the same time the properties of fire, smoke and carbon monoxide for that matter, do not change from state to state, nor do our behavior patterns that can at times place us at risk.

Therefore, let me convey a few words, which focus on a few specific areas in off-campus housing requiring some attention.

Make certain that you have smoke detectors outside bedrooms, and at the base of stairwells. Heated smoke naturally rises, and staircases can act as chimneys funneling smoke upwards. The base of stairwells is the practical location for early notification of a smoke condition on another level.

In multi-family dwellings, smoke detectors should be present within common hallways to alert residents of a smoke condition within another unit of the building.

I suggest a carbon monoxide detector be placed outside of bedrooms as well. Our Nicole's Law is quite specific requiring CO detectors on each habitable level. I can't speak for the requirements, if any, in other states.

Carbon monoxide is colorless, tasteless, odorless and deadly, so consideration for detection should be made prior to moving into housing. All exits must be clear of storage and obstruction. Remember, in an emergency, widows can be used in the event that secondary egress is required, especially if they afford access to roofs. Therefore, make certain windows can be easily opened.

Occupying bedrooms within a basement or attic without adequate secondary means of egress is hazardous and must be avoided.

Candles, their use being popular with students, must not be left unattended. Keep them a safe distance from combustibles while they should be inaccessible to pets. Do not leave lit candles unattended.

If you or others smoke, accidental ignition of upholstered furniture and mattresses is the leading cause of residential deaths throughout the United States. If you must smoke, do so responsibly.

Finally, cooking is the leading cause of residential fires and unattended cooking is the leading behavioral factor. Do not leave cooking unattended.

With all that parents and students have to think about while preparing to emigrate to cities throughout this country, off-campus housing safety might not be at the forefront of their efforts at this moment.

I therefore suggest that some consideration and preparation be given to this subject to assure a safe college year.

Thanks for doing so.

MORTON'S NEUROMA

Morton's neuroma is a thickening of nerve tissues in the toes. This enlarged nerve usually grows in the web between the third and fourth toes. The reason the nerve enlarges has not been determined. People with Morton's neuroma often experience shooting pains that extend into the toe next to the neuroma. An x-ray should be taken to ensure there is not a fracture. The pain of the neuroma becomes more severe with strenuous activity or when wearing shoes that are too tight in the toe area. Treatment of this condition usually starts with trying to decrease pain in the area of the growth. In most cases, initial treatment consists of padding and taping to disperse weight away from the neuroma.

No one should ignore foot pain. Whether you're dealing with nerve problems, bunions, sports injuries, fungal infections, or digital disorders, professional attention is the best assurance of a speedy recovery and prevention of future consequences. We are committed to delivering the most current state-of-the-art podiatric care in a relaxed, friendly environment. Excellence and personal respect are our unconditional commitments to each and every patient who seeks treatment at our office at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. We can be reached at 781-986-3668. THE DPW COLUMN

Reduce, Reuse, Recycle

By Mike and Cyndy Cotter

Since the first curbside recycling programs began in this country more than 25 years ago, we all learned to separate our bottles and cans. Now with City of Quincy's new 'single stream' collection we can toss all recyclables into one container labeled with the bumper sticker you received in the mail. But responsible waste management also encompasses an overall strategy for dealing with consumerism, which can be summed up in the familiar phrase "reduce, reuse, recycle."

The state of both the economy and the environment should inspire all of us to revisit the thinking behind these words. As the phrase implies, the first and most important step in waste reduction is reducing consumption. The average American produces twice as much garbage as the average European. If we all make choices that don't generate garbage in the first place, we'll keep our world cleaner and leave enough resources for future generations. Before you buy an item, pause to think about whether you really need it. Can you borrow it or barter something for it? Can you buy it used? If so, pursue that option. Consider Craig's List or E-Bay. If you must buy it new, consider implementing a 7- to 28-day waiting period for all purchases, other than everyday necessities. You'll be amazed at how much you can cut down on impulse spending, and the money you save can be put toward investments for your future.

After you've reduced your consumption, pursue every opportunity you can to reuse or recycle items you'd otherwise be tempted to throw away. For example, when your personal computer becomes obsolete, it might seem like the only alternative is to throw it away. Many charities, such as the Computers for Schools program, accept donations of old PCs (800/9396000), www.pcsforschools.org Or, if your PC is so old no one will take it off your hands, you can pay IBM $29.99 to recycle your machine (888/SHOP-IBM, www.ibm.com). Either way, you get the peace of mind of knowing that the toxic chemicals in your old PC aren't leaking into the air and ground in a landfill. For a comprehensive database of national computer donation and recycling centers, visit www.eiae.org.

In short, when you're about to throw something in the trash, consider other alternatives first. Used goods such as bicycles (Morgan Memorial) and eyeglasses (Lyons Club) are collected by charities and can be reused by others. Household items including leftover paint, old carpet, and manufacturers can often be recycled. Again consider www.craigslist.com or www.freecycle.org for 'Free' items that may be still usable to someone else that you are just putting out with your trash. You can also have re-usable post-renovation construction items (windows, lumber, usable appliances, etc) picked up by Boston Building Materials Co-op, www.bbmc.com Tel: 617-442-2262. For a comprehensive list of recyclable items, sorted by ZIP code, contact Earth 911, a public-private partnership devoted to making recycling easier and more accessible for all at 1 800/CLEANUP, or www.earth911.org

23 Youths From YMCA Enjoy Boston Harbor Tour

Last week, some 23 youths from the South Shore YMCA enjoyed a four-hour tour of Boston Harbor Islands, thanks to their guides from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay (SHSB).

The trip is part of SHSB's "All Access Boston Harbor," a free summer program, that, this year, offered 5,000 Boston-area youth from 68 communities the opportunity to explore the Harbor Islands.

At the same time, they learn first-hand about the marine environment and the history of Boston Harbor.

The youngsters boarded their boat, the Virginia C, at Bank of America Pavilion after a morning of singing and practice games on the pavilion. They sang sea shanties and hauled lobster traps before setting sail.

On Georges Island, the youngsters explored the Civil War fort with its eerie tunnels, cannons and parade grounds.

Marine historian David Coffin lead the historic tour through Fort Warren, telling tales, such as the story of the 'lady in black,' a woman who is said to haunt the island.

Visitors can also investigate the shore and the island through beach rack walks with Save The Harbor's marine educators who engage in scavenger hunts and help participants identify different types of marine life and sea-shells, such as Asian Shore Crabs, green crabs and periwinkles.

The SHSB programs introducing young people to these resources are a special source of pride for the group's members.

"Kids from every neighborhood deserve an opportunity to experience Boston's great harbor and our island park first-hand," said Save the Harbor President Patricia Foley.

"We are glad to be able to share these remarkable resources with young people who we hope will become the 'Harbor Stewards' of the future," Foley said.

This year, SHSB will also include trips to Spectacle Island where the youngsters can engage in active recreation, such as swimming, kite flying, hiking and nature walks.

The "All Access" founding corporate partner is the Bank of America Pavilion. The program also enjoys financial support from the region's local foundations and corporations as well as hundreds of individual donors.

Save The Harbor/Save the Bay is a non-profit, public interest, environmental advocacy organization whose mission is to restore and protect Boston Harbor and Massachusetts Bay for everyone to enjoy.

In the past eight years, SHSB has introduced over 15,000 young people to the Harbor Islands.

Receives Friends Of Wollaston Beach Award Beach Festival Recognizes Kelly's Environmental Work

The environmental efforts of Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly earned for him an Honorary Friend Award from the Friends of Wollaston Beach at the recent Arts on the Shore event.

A crowd estimated by park rangers at 1,500 adults and children attended the event which included an amateur sand castle competition, a sidewalk chalk festival and art displays.

Kelly, the third recipient of the award after historian Tom Galvin and former Mayor Frank McCauley, was recognized for his continued commitment to Quincy's shoreline and beaches.

"For four decades, Leo Kelly has been a true champion for environmental issues, including Quincy's coastal resources," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, the presenter.

"In the 70s and 80s he battled to stop chronic sewer overflows from Nut Island . . . in the 90s and through today he has led Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and improved the city's 13 public beaches."

Neil McCole, president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach, said his group "plans to continue with the Honorary Friend Awards as the 2008 beach season continues."

He noted that the year has been designated the 100th anniversary of Wollaston Beach, adding "this is a special year for Wollaston Beach and a perfect time to recognize those who have long had a passion for the beach."

Highlight of the Arts on the Shore event was the work of the master sculptor Fitzzy Snowman Sculpting of Saugus, who built a 15-foot custom sand castle.

The festival was a collaborative effort of the Friends of Wollaston Beach, the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, the Quincy Art Association, the city of Quincy and the State Department of Conservation and Recreation.

It was made possible by a grant from the Save the Harbor/Save the Bay's Better Beaches Program, the University of Phoenix—MA Campus, Tony's Clam Shop and Councillor Gutro.

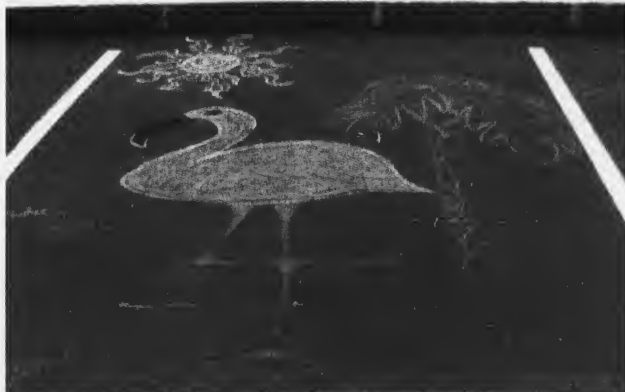

McCole also had a word of thanks for Sharron Beals, Maryanne Mahoney and the staff of the now-defunct Beechwood on the Bay, whose "hospitality and generosity were a big part of our success in 2008 from monthly meeting to events."

GIANT SAND CASTLE. Twelve-foot sand castle built by Fitzzy Snowman Sculpting of Saugus was the center piece of the recent Arts on the Shore festival hosted by the Friends of Wollaston Beach.

SIDEWALK CHALK. Rice Road parking lot was closed to allow adults and children to express their inner artist in chalk during Arts on the Shore. Each family was assigned its own parking spot to serve as its canvas for the day.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, July 28, 2008 at approximately 2:20 P.M., numerous Officers were dispatched to the Eastern Bank located at 63 Franklin Street for a report of an armed robbery that had just occurred. As the Officers arrived and began the search of the area, Sergeant Sean Duggan and Officer William Lanergan went directly to the bank to get information about the suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

Information was given out about the suspect's physical and clothing description, that he was wearing a ball cap and jacket, last seen headed towards Braintree. The other units checking the area were Officers' Paul Foley, Joe McGunigle, Paul Holland, Matt Tobin, Jim Dentrement and Paul Jackson.

After interviewing the Teller, it was learned that the suspect approached her window and handed her a note. The note, later recovered read, "This is a stic up - I have a gun and will use it at will - no dye packs 5,000 in bag". The Teller complied with the note and handed over approximately $2,000.00 to $4,000.00 in mostly 50's, 20's and 10's. According to the Teller and other witnesses, the suspect left the bank in an unknown direction with the money in a Dunkin Donuts bag. At that time, another witness who works at Alfredo's Restaurant located at 77 Franklin Street (directly next door to Eastern Bank) entered the bank and stated she needed to speak with the police. She said that a white male had just ordered three beers and an order of ravioli and left without paying (total bill approximately $17.00). She said that a few minutes later she observed the same man walking past Alfredo's and pull off a gray jacket, exposing a red shirt. She said that he was headed towards Braintree and when she learned that the bank had been robbed, she informed Officers at the bank. Detective Lieutenant Patrick Glynn, along with Detectives Ralph Willard, Mike Ward and William Monteith arrived at the bank to process the scene. Detective Monteith and Officer Lanergan further interviewed the restaurant employee, who said that the suspect had started talking to her in the bar and seemed distraught. The suspect informed her that his mother had passed four days ago and that his father owned a corner Store in Boston before selling it. The suspect also informed her that his name was Scott and that he lived on Copeland Street. Detectives followed this lead and were able to determine the full name of the suspect's father who owned the corner store. She added that she was upset when the suspect left without paying and was about to call the police regarding the incident but before she could the bank was robbed. A review of the banks video surveillance footage showed the suspect as a white male approximately 35-44 years old, wearing a gray fleece jacket, khaki tan pants, white sneakers with black stripes and a blue ball cap with the old New England Patriots logo on it. Witness accounts also indicated that the suspect was missing front teeth. An updated description was given to all the police units checking the area.

Officer Foley was on Federal Avenue and was approached by a concerned citizen who asked for an updated description and she stated she would call the police if she saw the suspect. After several minutes of checking the area, Communications notified the units in the area of the bank that a caller (the concerned citizen) had just observed a suspect that matched the description in the area of Federal Avenue going towards Goddard Street. She said that he matched the clothing description and to be sure it was him, she smiled at him and he smiled back, revealing missing teeth. Moments later, one of the Officers on a bicycle checking yards on Independence Avenue saw the suspect peer up and down Independence Avenue, as if looking for police cruisers. The suspect then ran across the street and into the CVS Pharmacy located at 22 Independence Avenue. Seconds later, Quincy Police cruisers converged on the store. Officers' Dentrement, Holland, Foley and Lanergan went into CVS and spotted the suspect walking across the front of the store. Officer Lanergan immediately recognized him from the bank robbery surveillance video and as the Officers approached the suspect, he placed his hand in his pockets. Due to the fact that the suspect mentioned a gun in his robbery note, Officers on scene ordered the suspect to show his hands but he refused to comply, so the Officers rushed the suspect and took him to the

Flashing Helps Keep Roof Watertight

Q. Some kind of critter, strike, bent back and heavily damaged some of the metal coverings around the base of my home's chimney. I can't get it to bend back smoothly. Does it have to be replaced? — George L., Hartford, Conn.

A. Replacement is the best way to ensure a tightly sealed joint. Roof flashing is important because these strips of metal help prevent rainwater from entering the seams where roof elements meet and direct that water away to the gutter system. Damage to this material can lead to leaky roofs and water damage inside the home, so maintaining it is important.

In the case of chimney flashing, the metal strips are bent inward to match the corner angle between the chimney base and the roof, and are "stepped" downward, one overlapping the next, so water sluices away from the joint.

Use the same type of metal as the original when replacing flashing — dissimilar metals will corrode where they meet. And while aluminum is a common flashing material, chimney flashing is (or should be) either galvanized steel or copper, which resist corrosion from the lime in the chimney mortar. Steel or copper sheet metal is quite difficult to cut and bend to the correct angle of the roof, so look for a step flashing kit at the home improvement store, or consider ordering pre-bent step flashing (also called "shingle tins") from a sheet metal shop or a roofing company.

To replace the damaged flashing, bend up any flashing that covers it and cut through roofing cement seals with a utility knife. Pull shingles away from the flashing base. Remove the damaged flashing (a pry bar helps here). Ensure the new flashing fits, and then apply roofing cement to the edges that will contact the chimney and roof. Slip it into place, and drive one roofing nail downward into the roof deck (not into the chimney). Reposition the shingles and overlapping flashing, and resal with roofing cement.

M.S.S., C.S.C.S.Is Strength
Training Really Necessary?

Q. My workout routine consists of walking and occasionally riding my bicycle on a trail near my home. I work out three to four days a week, and I feel great. Over the years I have tried to do strength training as well, but I am not as excited about lifting weights as I am about the cardio exercises. Is it really necessary to do strength-training exercises, or can I stick with my favorites?

A. Each type of workout has specific objectives, and all work together to keep the body in the best shape possible. Leaving one area, such as strength training, out of the plan can keep you from truly reaching your body's maximum potential.

You are not alone, as many people choose to complete only one type of exercise because they enjoy it much more than another. Cardiovascular exercise suits some people, while strength and flexibility training is the favorites of others. Finding a balance that you can live with is the key. You might not enjoy strength training, but making it a part of your workout routine could allow you to see things differently.

The benefits of strength training are extensive. Reasons to add a strength-training routine to your weekly workout include reducing the signs of medical conditions such as diabetes, osteoporosis, obesity, arthritis and depression, strengthening your muscles and bones, maintaining proper weight and body-fat percentages, maintaining your body's ability to balance, and even sleeping better.

Adding strength training to your workout does not mean you have to change what you are already doing. Start by adding a few exercises intermittently while you walk. You might walk a mile, then stop to do lunges or squats for a few minutes before proceeding with your workout. If there are stairs nearby, completing a few sets of steps to help strengthen your legs would be a great way to incorporate the two.

Exercises that don't require equipment can be a great way to start. Lunges, squats, push-ups and step-ups, to name just a few, are exercises you can complete before, during or even after your cardiovascular workout. Start by adding just a few exercises and then progress.

The use of exercise tubes also can be a great way to complete many different strength-training exercises without the need for a large space. Exercise bands can be used under your feet while holding the handles to work the shoulder and arm muscles, and when attached to a solid, secure structure can allow you to work the muscles of your chest and back. Each band is compact and easy to store or carry, making it a great way to bring together your cardiovascular and strength exercises.

Again, begin small and progress slowly, and you may find a new favorite.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. © 2008 King Features Synd., Inc.

(ARA) - If you are like many new parents out there, there's nothing you wouldn't do to provide your baby with the best start in life. Time, effort, expense -- no matter what it takes, you are committed to allowing nothing to stand in your child's way.

While a safe and loving home is one of the most valuable things we can provide for our children, five other parenting pointers come from Dr. Laura Jana, pediatrician and co-author of "Heading Home with Your Newborn: From Birth to Reality." Dr. Jana's recommendations to parents are given to help babies grow up to be "healthy, wealthy and wise." These pointers don't involve great sacrifices, going to extremes, or even spending a lot of money. Their impact, however, is guaranteed to be invaluable.

Breast milk -- the true first breakfast of champions

Commonly referred to as the ideal food for babies and recommended throughout the entire first year of life by the American Academy of Pediatrics, breast milk has risen to its current level of popularity for very good reason. Breast milk has the unrivaled ability to provide babies with a nearly perfect mix of valuable nutrients.

Factor in the added benefits of passing along extra protection against infection and allowing for plenty of built-in time to bond with your baby, and it's easy to see how breastfeeding is unquestionably one of the best ways to give your baby a head start in life.

Alphabet soup -- boosting your baby's brain power with DHA and ARA

From day one, we find ourselves on a parental quest to provide our children with nothing but the best -- taking every opportunity we can to foster good hearts and sound minds. Enter the omega fatty acids DHA and ARA. Thought to be important nutrients for infant brain and eye development and function -- not to mention DHA's strong association with heart health -- and it is no surprise that these essential fatty acids have found their way to the heart of the discussion when it comes to infant nutrition and health. And with a body of supporting evidence that seems to be growing nearly as rapidly as your baby, there is every reason to believe that including these fatty acids in your baby's diet is one of the easiest and smartest ways to get your baby started on the fast track to lifelong good health. Fortunately, these so-called good fats are found naturally in breast milk and also in DHA- and ARA-supplemented infant formulas.

Books for babies -- read all about it

Instilling in your child an early love of reading, and simply savoring the time you spend reading books together each day, can bestow upon you the magical ability to open your child's heart and mind to the world around her. It is often said that children spend the first several years learning to read, and the rest of their lives reading to learn. Sure, stray drool and teeth marks will inevitably find their way onto the scene at first, but that's the reason board books were created! While you are waiting for your child's page-turning skills to develop and attention span to grow, take heart in the fact that reading aloud to even the youngest of babies can offer rich rewards. With each turn of the page you share, you will be helping your child take one small baby step toward lifelong success. And even when the pages are upside down and flipped back and forth out of sequence.

Take a TV timeout

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that the first few years of a child's life are crucial when it comes to the growth and development of his brain, so it is fortunate that parents are afforded the opportunity to shape their child's experiences and control what he is exposed to. That said, be aware that your television runs the risk of overshadowing your efforts. No doubt about it, television watching is tempting, even for the very young. While high-quality, educational television designed specifically for children may well prove to be a positive resource, too much of what today's children are allowed to watch is accompanied by constant exposure to an adult world of "sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll" (not to mention gratuitous violence and a dizzying array of tantalizing commercials), making TV a veritable parenting minefield. Until more research determines the effect that television watching has on young children, the American Academy of Pediatrics continues to stand behind its recommendation of no television for children under the age of two. If you do on occasion choose to tune your toddler into television, make it a point to guide your child each step of the way by choosing age-appropriate shows or videos and to limit the amount of time spent in front of the TV. You can also make the experience more interactive by watching alongside your child and discussing what you watch.

Car seats -- handling with care in the car

After committing ourselves to doing our best when it comes to feeding, reading to, playing with, and comforting our children from the day they are born, it only makes sense that we'd want to do everything in our power to protect their safety. And given that today's parent spends more time than ever on the road and on the go, it should come as no surprise that selecting and properly securing your infant in a car seat rounds out this list. Which car seat is best? The one that fits your baby, that fits securely in your car, and that you will commit to using correctly each and every time your baby is in the car. And for those of you truly committed to giving your baby a true head start in life, be aware that by following the current recommendation to keep your baby rear-facing for as long as possible as determined by the limits of the car seat (but until at least one year and 20 pounds) and by looking for a seat with added side impact protection, you are providing your baby with extra head protection and therefore, protecting your most valuable investment.

Calling All
Octogenarians

If you are age 79 or older and have a sibling at least that age, the National Institute on Aging is looking for you. The Long Life Family Study is about to begin, and it's looking for as many families as possible to try to learn why certain people live so long.

If you become part of the study, you'll have a two-hour interview either at your home or at a clinic, and a blood sample will be taken. You'll be given a physical assessment (nothing too hard), and you'll be paid $25 for participating. Afterward, you'll get the results of your blood sample. The institute will even send the results to your doctor, if you wish. All of the information will be kept confidential. It seems they've thought of everything to make us comfortable about participating.

While researchers hope to find volunteers within a three-hour drive of Pittsburgh, Boston or New York, many people have relatives scattered all over, so they're set up to interview other siblings across the country, either in person or by phone or mail. Your children and grandchildren (or even a friend) are welcome to be present at the interview too, in case they can fill in additional information.

The results of the study will help researchers for years to come, so if you qualify (or know someone who does) it's important to participate. Even if we're not yet 79, we know people who are, and some of them also have siblings that age. We need to pass this information along to them.

If you would like to take part in the study or have questions, you can call one of the three toll-free numbers: 800-304-4317, 888-333-6327 or 800-872-3653.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A MOTHER'S SACRIFICE?

Recent research seems to lend some credibility to the notion that motherhood robs women of their teeth. According to analysis of data involving 2,635 women in the United States aged 18 to 64 years, women who gave birth to more children tended to lose more teeth. This was found to be true regardless of socioeconomic status. A probable cause for the increase in tooth loss among mothers is the gingivitis that women are more prone to during pregnancy. If left untreated, this buildup in bacteria between the teeth and gums can lead to more serious gum disease and, eventually, tooth loss. Moreover, women may be less likely to visit the dentist while pregnant. Being a woman is extraordinary, fun and fulfilling, but it's not always easy. A woman's body goes through so many changes that good oral hygiene is especially important. In addition to comfortable relaxing surroundings and timely and efficient service, we offer superior clinical care, whether it's a tooth cleaning or a total make over. Come visit us at 44 Greenleaf Street today and see for yourself what a great caring environment we have here. We pride ourselves in striving to make you smile with confidence. Pregnancy brings hormonal changes that are linked to an increase in the plaque on teeth, if not removed with flossing and brushing, can lead to gum disease.

Play Starts Saturday Quincy Ready For Babe Ruth World Series

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Babe Ruth World Series is heading back to Quincy.

For the third time in six years, ten teams from nine different states will descend on Adams Field this Saturday looking to become kings of the 14-year-old baseball world.

This seven-day, 25-game tournament will feature some of the best baseball players from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Florida, Ohio, Texas, California, North Dakota and Washington, and it all kicks off later this week as Quincy plays host once again to this annual event.

The main storyline for many area residents will be the play and performance of the host team, the 14-year-old Quincy Babe Ruth representative. Making a third appearance on the national stage, Quincy will be looking to show the rest of the field that baseball is as strong and competitive here in Massachusetts as it is in the baseball hotbeds like Texas, Florida and California.

The 16-member Quincy team consists of some of the best young players in the city. The team, under the direction of manager Dick Lombardi, has been preparing for this one-in-a-lifetime moment since the beginning of June, and the time spent this summer practicing and preparing for this tournament should prepare Quincy for the strong competition they are going to face starting Saturday night.

"We held tryouts in the beginning of June and since then we have been practicing hard trying to get ready for the World Series," said Lombardi last week at Merrymount Park. "This group of kids have worked hard, always coming to practice, and our goal is to be a competitive team who plays the game right."

"At this age and at this stage of baseball development, it sometimes doesn't feel like you are watching 14-year-olds play. This team understands that this is going to be a tough tournament to play in but over the last two months; this group of ballplayers has grown closer as a team and has become more mature. That maturity

7 p.m. Friday At Boston Quincy Marriott Former Major League Pitcher Tommy John Banquet Speaker

Former Major League pitcher Tommy John will serve as guest speaker at the 2008 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series 'Banquet of Champions' Friday night (August 15) at 7 p.m. at the Boston Quincy Marriott.

The Terre Haute, Indiana native was only 20 years old when he made his major league debut for the Cleveland Indians on Sept. 6, 1963. Over the next 26 years, John played for the Yankees, Dodgers, Angels and White Sox.

He appeared in four all-star games; he played in four World Series games and finished his career with three 20-win seasons.

John is best known for defying nature when he returned to baseball following reconstructive elbow surgery during the 1974 season. In fact, the surgical procedure used on John is now referred to in sports as the "Tommy John Surgery." Many current MLB players including Kerry Wood from the Chicago Cubs and John Smoltz from the Atlanta Braves have undergone the "Tommy John Surgery."

TOMMY JOHN

John began his playing career playing for the Cleveland Indians. He went 0-2 for the Indians in 1963 and was 2-9 in 1964. After two disappointing seasons, John was traded to the Chicago White Sox where he played seven seasons.

He was traded for a second time in 1972 to the Los Angeles Dodgers, and in 1974 he was having his best season as a pitcher with a 13-3 record when a ligament was torn in his pitching arm.

John learned from his doctor that if he wanted to pitch again he would have to undergo a unique surgery. No pitcher has ever undergone this kind of operation. There were no negative risks to the surgery; either his ligaments in his left pitching arm had to be reconstructed or he would never pitch in the major leagues again. He underwent the surgery known as "Tommy John Surgery" and came back in 1976 to post a 10-10 record.

John proved that serious physical problems would not suppress the determined spirit of a fierce competitor. He was awarded the Hutch Award in 1975 for displaying honor, courage and dedication to baseball both on and off the field.

He is currently the active Field Manager for the Bridgeport Bluefish Professional Baseball Club (CT), a charter team in the Atlantic League of Professional Baseball. The Bluefish hold the record for having drawn one million fans faster than any team in Connecticut minor league baseball history.

Tickets for the Banquet of Champions are now available for $30 per person at the Quincy Babe Ruth World Series Headquarters, 1 Merrymount Parkway, Quincy.

Call the Quincy Babe Ruth office at 617-376-1203 for additional information.

Quincy Youngsters Serving As Bat Boys And Ball Boys

Nine Quincy youngsters will be serving as Bat Boys/ Ball Boys for nine of the ten teams competing in the 2008 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series August 16-23 at Quincy's Adams Field.

They are:

Christopher Wallace, Gregory Paulo, Michael Munroe, James Doherty, Ciarnan O'Farrell, Chris Doyle, Anthony Gustin, Kevin McDonough and Harrison Pitts.

The regional champions from the Midwest Plains Region, West Fargo, ND, will be bringing their own bat boy/ball boy, but these nine Quincy youngsters will assist the other nine regional champions during the weeklong tournament.

Quincy Ready For World Series

is the biggest thing these kids have going for them."

With the charged atmosphere and an expected crowd in the tens of thousands over the course of the week, Quincy, and for that matter the rest of the field, will be thrust onto the national stage, and with this added pressure, Baseball 101 is going to be the difference between winning and losing.

"The talent that all these teams possess is high," added Lombardi. "They are the best 14-year-old players in the country and if you don't play fundamental ball you can be in for some trouble."

"But my team has worked hard to become better not only at the plate but in the field and on the mound as well. Over the past few weeks we have started hitting as a team, so if we can continue to play the good defense I know we are capable of and if we pitch up to our abilities, we should be competitive with everyone."

"But the coaching staff is also trying to remind the team that this is not about just wins and losses. As long as we play the game right we are going to be successful."

For the members of the Quincy team the World Series is something many of them could only dream of playing in six years ago. Many of them came to Adams Field with their families to cheer on the 2003 and 2005 teams, and that experience was something none of them could forget.

"I just remember being there and watching the best of the best play at Adams Field and it made me want to play in a World Series myself," said centerfielder/pitcher Tim Liuzzo. "I think if we play as a team and focus on defense first we should do well."

"The World Series is going to be unbelievable," added second baseman Adam Nazzaro. "It will be a thrilling atmosphere during the games and we have been looking forward to this all summer long."

Ah, summer.

Most 14-year-olds spend the summer between junior high and high school or ninth grade and tenth grade enjoying their time off before school starts up again, but these 14-year-olds have been workmanlike in their preparation; spending most of the past nine weeks playing baseball like it was their summertime job.

"We have practiced and played hard all summer and now we are ready to play for real," said catcher/3B Andrew Fonte.

"It has been baseball everyday this summer, sometimes six out of seven days a week," added shortstop Mike Stille. "But this team can do it. We have the offense, defense and pitching to win some games and that is what we are going to accomplish."

For Lombardi and his assistant coaches George Higgins and Tony Alibrandi the effort their team has put in during the summer has been off the charts.

"These kids don't shy away from pressure and hard work," said Lombardi. "They understand that this opportunity does not come around often and only a select few get to take part. They have given 100% since Day One."

"These guys have been relentless in their preparation," added Higgins. "I am proud of all of them. They have become more aggressive at the plate and have improved as a team since June."

Quincy is a loaded team when it comes to depth on the field, in the bullpen and on the bench. All sixteen members of the 2008 team should make an impact sometime during the tournament, and it all starts on the mound.

Up to seven players may see time on the hill including Liuzzo, Nazzaro, Lukas McDonough, Zach Stearns, Josue Ordonez, Joe Alibrandi, Mike Stille and Eddie McDonough.

"I would feel confident with any of these pitchers in a big spot," said Lombardi. "I think once the get over the excitement and nerves of pitching on a big stage all of them should do well. They have to try and keep their composure, but we have plenty of pitching."

Quincy's offense and defense should also be strengths in this World Series.

In the infield Alibrandi, Fonte, Nazzaro, Stille, Ordonez, Justin Coscia, Torrey Gustin, Bob Kozlowski, Sam Lawlor, Kevin White, Dennis Sullivan and Dan Higgins offer solid defense and strong batting eyes to the equation.

In the outfield Liuzzo, E. McDonough, L. McDonough, Stearns, Stille, Gustin and Lawlor hold down the fort.

"Our overall defense has gotten better since June," said Lombardi. "And all these kids can also hit the ball all over the field. We are not too worried about putting up runs, so the fielding and defense has been a major focal point in our preparation."

As the host team, Quincy is scheduled to play all four of their pool play games in primetime. On Saturday at 8 p.m. Quincy will open the 2008 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series against the Southeast Regional champion from Tallahassee, Florida; their second game is at 8 p.m. on Sunday night versus the Midwest Plains champion from West Fargo, North Dakota; their third game is August 18 at 8 p.m. versus Syracuse, New York the Middle Atlantic champion and Quincy closes pool play August 20 at 8 p.m. against Palo Alto, California the representative from the Pacific Southwest.

"Playing every game at 8 p.m. should be exciting but at the same time these games are probably some of the most watched games of the series," said Lombardi. "You can't complain about that. The eight o'clock starting times will put us in the spotlight and it will give these kids a chance to show what they got."

"We are ready."

For the city of Quincy the third time is a charm. The team maybe anxious to get started on Saturday, but for all the behind the scenes volunteers, all the fans and for the city itself, the preparation is complete and the fun can begin.

"This is a wonderful showcase event for our city and we are all proud to welcome so many players, family members and fans from across the country to the Babe Ruth World Series," said Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch. "I wish to thank all of the volunteers who make this event possible. Their hard work and dedication is a great testament to Quincy and its people."

Like the team that proudly wears its namesake, the City of Presidents is just as ready for the 2008 Babe Ruth World Series to begin.

Babe Ruth Teams From All Regions Of Country

The contiguous United States will be well represented when the 2008 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series officially opens up on Saturday at Adams Field in Quincy.

The ten-team tournament features teams from as far away as California, North Dakota and Washington; as far south as Texas and Florida; a team from Ohio, upstate New York, Connecticut and two representatives from Massachusetts, including the host team from Quincy.

The ten teams will be broken into two five-team divisions.

The American Division includes the host team from Quincy, the Middle Atlantic Regional Champion, Syracuse, NY; the Southeast Regional Champion, Tallahassee, FL; the Midwest Plains Regional Champion, West Fargo, ND and the Pacific Southwest Regional Champion, Palo Alto, CA.

The National Division includes the Eastern Massachusetts Champion, Cambridge, MA; the New England Regional Champion, Norwalk, CT; the Ohio Valley Regional Champion, Youngstown, OH; the Southwest Regional Champion, Nederland, TX and the Pacific Northwest Regional Champion, Skagit Valley, WA.

Each of the ten teams represented will play four opening round games (one against each team in its division) and when pool play concludes August 20, the top-3 teams from the American and National divisions will move on to the Single Elimination bracket.

Beginning August 21, the third place National Division team will play the second place American Division team and the second place National Division team will play the third place American Division, with the winners of those two games moving on to play the top-seeded American and National Division teams on August 22 (the two top-seeded teams with the best records after pool play earn a bye into the semifinals).

The championship game is scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday, August 23. The highest remaining seed is the home team. If the seeds are equal, a coin toss will decide the home and away teams.

The host team from Quincy is scheduled to open play August 16 at 8 p.m. versus West Fargo, ND.

Quincy's second game is scheduled for August 17 at 8 p.m. versus West Fargo, ND.

On August 18 at 8 p.m., Quincy is scheduled to play versus Syracuse, NY and its final pool play game is scheduled for August 20 at 8 p.m. versus Palo Alto, CA.

150-175 Volunteers, 33 Host Families, Babe Ruth Committee Helping to Make World Series A Success

Dedicated Volunteers Are The Backbone Of The Babe Ruth WS

By SEAN BRENNAN

The first two times that the 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series came to Quincy (2003, 2005) more than 60,000 visitors came to Adams Field to celebrate baseball and lend their support to teams from across the country and globe.

This year's event (August 16-23) is expected to continue that sense of community involvement and love for the game and none of this it would have happened if not for time and effort members of the 2008 Babe Ruth World Series Committee, the many host families and numerous volunteers who have put in since the first Babe Ruth World Series was held in Quincy back in 2003.

"Many of the volunteers, Babe Ruth Committee members and host families are the same people who have been involved with the World Series since 2002, the year before the first Babe Ruth World Series was held in Quincy," said John Norton, Vice President of the 2008 Babe Ruth WS. "Without their help, effort and time, we would not be able to put on the event."

According to Norton, this year's World Series has between 150-175 volunteers who will be at the games, answering questions and devoting their time to making this year's event even better than the previous two.

"These volunteers are the backbone of the World Series," added Norton. "Without them we would not be able to host this event. The time and hard work that they have all been putting in is what allows us to carry it out and have it be successful."

"At our last volunteer meeting (Aug. 11) these volunteers readied the credentials, organized the t-shirts, booklets etc. and got us ready to kick it off on Saturday."

With eight out-of-state teams heading to Quincy at the end of the week, a large number of these players will be staying with host families. This is one of the most important aspects of the Quincy Babe Ruth volunteer pyramid; this year Quincy will have 33 host families opening their homes and hosting players from as far away as California, Washington, Texas, Ohio, Florida, New York and Connecticut.

"At this time, we have 33 host families lined up to help us house players," said Norton. "Many of these families are the same host families that we had back in 2003 and 2005. Like the many volunteers that have signed on to help us, these families are an integral part of the process. They help to give some of these out-of-state kids a little bit of home and they help to make things run smoothly and efficiently."

Along with the volunteers and host families, members of the Babe Ruth World Series Committee have given of their time and effort for the past seven years to see that this event goes off without a hitch.

"The Committee has been at this since before the first World Series came here in 2002," said Norton. "75% of the original committee is back for a third time. We have been meeting regularly since 2002 getting ready for this. It helps to have people who are dedicated and willing to give their time and effort to see it through."

"This year we have three parents on the Committee, Beth Liuzzo, Patricia Stearns and Milan Alibrandi, who have given us the effort and time to help us get this moving forward and the Mayor's Office has been so supportive and helpful to all of our needs."

Norton singled out the work of the committee member Kathy Bowes.

"Kathy is the one who works with the different parents and families, helping them find hotel rooms and answering questions from all parties. She has been a huge part of getting us ready for Saturday."

As of Tuesday, Norton said that volunteers were still coming in to the office to donate their time or ask what they could do to help out next week.

"These volunteers have been so helpful and without them, as I have said, the Babe Ruth World Series could not happen. All of us are excited to see how it turns out."

The following is a list of the 2008 Babe Ruth World Series Committee members:

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Honorary Chairman; Richard "Dick" Lombardi, Host President; John P. Norton, Vice President; Constance J. Lombardi, Treasurer; Robert J. Griffin, Counsel and Advisory Board members Milan Alibrandi, Joe Boncek, Joe Brill, Peter J. Currie, Ron Ivil, Beth Liuzzo, Patricia Stearns, Marie Sullivan, Joe Minukis, Kathy Minukis and Kathy Bowes.

$20,000 Raised For Jimmy Fund Research

Patrick White Baseball Tournament A Success

The 8th annual Patrick White Jimmy Fund Tournament, held Aug. 2-5 at Adams Field, raised over $20,000. This brings the eight-year total of funds raised to $162,000.

The tournament is played in memory of Patrick White, a former Quincy Babe Ruth baseball player.

There was an outpouring of support from the community as over 50 of Patrick's teammates, friends, and family members volunteered their time during the event. These volunteers ran the concession stand, cooked food, announced games and selected music between innings.

Patrick's sisters, Meghan and Katie, are scheduled to deliver a $20,000 check between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. this Friday during WEEI's (850 AM) annual Jimmy Fund Telethon.

This year's tournament was the most competitive in the eight-year history of the event as no game was decided by more than five runs. There were two ties.

The 15-year-old team from Weymouth defeated Quincy's 14-year-old team in the championship game on August 5.

For more information about the tournament call Bob Griffin at 617-472-4811.

Dan Myers Pitches Wollaston Blue To 7-0 Win

Paul Oldham banged out a double and triple and had an RBI for the Blue. Dave Griffin, the Blue's offensive leader for the season (.483 avg. and 13 runs scored) scored two runs and had a hit. Other Blue players contributing hits included Dan Munkley (two RBI), Paul Carson (RBI), Tom Pepe (run) and Rob Ranalli (run). Matt Miller had the Black's lone hit of the game off Myers. Matt Jaehnig and Rick Bjork pitched well for Black as they limited the Blue to one earned run over four innings.

Blue concluded its season with a 9-8 record for its third straight winning season. Seven 18-year-olds, all, who played three seasons for Blue, provided the leadership for this season.

Pitching ace and team leader Myers led Blue in victories and batted .380. Infielder and pitcher Chris Doyle batted .345 and had three saves. Tom Pepe played stellar defense at second base and batted .320.

Dan Munkley batted .292. Paul Oldham led the Blue in extra base hits and Edwin Nunez and Chris Timmins played gold glove defense in the field.

The Blue looks forward to the return of their nine 17-year-old players including, Griffin, Ranalli, Diego Arredondo, John Parry, Greg Ouellette, Rob Yee, Tony Salaris, Paul Carson and Kevin Zagrodny.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Laws made by common consent must not be trampled on by individuals." To every description of citizens, let praise be given. But let them persevere in their affectionate vigilance over that precious depository of American happiness, the Constitution of the United States." ... "The name of America but always exalt just pride of patriotism. The independence and liberty your possess are the work of joint councils and joint efforts, of common dangers, sufferings and successes." ... "Avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves out to bear." ...

Can anyone dispute the logic and wisdom of George Washington's words? Does it not make you wonder what he would think and say if he were living today? ..

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There might still be some uncertainty about the decision you made. But a quick check of the facts should reassure you that you're doing the right thing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The tidy Taurus needs to be a little more flexible about accepting some changes to those carefully made plans. You might be pleasantly surprised by what follows.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Consider stepping away from your concentrated focus on your new project for a bit so you can get some perspective on what you've done and where you plan to take it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The understandably angry Crab might not want to accept the reason why someone might have tried to hurt you. But at least you'll have an insight into why it happened.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) There might be some facts you still need to know before leaping onto center stage. Best to move carefully at this time so that you can observe what's happening around you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to expand your outlook by getting out and around, whether you do some long-range traveling or just explore the great things to see closer to home.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your wise counsel continues to be needed as that family situation works itself out. Meanwhile, the decisions you made on your job begin to pay off quite nicely.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your job situation brightens thanks to all your hard work. Now, spend some time repairing a personal relationship you might have neglected for too long.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects favor action in the workplace. Line up your facts and show your superiors why you're the one they're looking for.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your hard work pays off on the job. Personal relationships can also benefit from more of your time and attention. Spend the weekend with loved ones.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Early feedback on your project might be disappointing. But don't be discouraged. Use it to make needed adjustments, then submit it to your superiors again.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Flattery could lure the otherwise sensible Fish into making an unwise decision. Be careful. All that praise might be an attempt to reel you in before you can learn the facts.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful sense of who you are. You are a shining example to others, helping them believe in themselves and what they can do.

LEGAL NOTICE

2008-131

Presently pending in the Ordinance Committee of the Quincy City Council.
In Title 8 Health and Safety Add a new chapter:

Chapter 8.44

Regulating the Maintenance of Vacant and Foreclosing Residential Properties

Be it ordained by the Quincy City Council, that the City of Quincy Municipal Code be amended by adding to Title 8 Health and Safety a new chapter: Chapter 8.44

Regulating the Maintenance of Vacant and Foreclosing Residential Properties.

8.44.010 (a) Purpose. It is the intent of this section to protect and preserve public safety, security, and quiet enjoyment of occupants, abutters, and neighborhoods by (i) requiring all residential property owners, including lenders, trustees, and service companies, to properly maintain vacant and/or foreclosing properties (ii) regulating the maintenance of vacant and/or foreclosing, residential properties to prevent blighted and unsecure residences.

The Director of the Inspectional Services Department has enforcement authority pursuant to, inter alia, M.G.L. c. 143, s. 3, the State Building Code, and the Zoning Code of the City of Quincy.

8.44.020 Definitions. When used in this section, unless a contrary intention clearly appears, the following terms shall have the following meanings:

City means City of Quincy.

Director means Director of the Inspectional Services Department

Days means consecutive calendar days.

Foreclosing means the process by which a property, placed as security for a real estate loan, is prepared for sale to satisfy the debt if the borrower defaults. "Initiation of the foreclosure process" means taking any of the following actions: (i) taking possession of a residential property pursuant to M.G.L. c. 244, s. 1; (ii) delivering the Mortgagee's notice of intention to foreclose to the borrower pursuant to M.G.L. c. 244, s. 17B; or (iii) commencing a foreclosure action on a property in either the Land Court or Norfolk Superior Court.

Local means within twenty (20) driving miles distance of the property in question.

Mortgagee means the creditor, including but not limited to, service companies, lenders in a mortgage agreement and any agent, servant, or employee of the mortgagee, or any successor in interest and/or assignee of the mortgagee's rights, interests or obligations under the mortgage agreement.

Owner means every person, entity, service company, property manager or real estate broker, who alone or severally with others:

(1) has legal or equitable title to any dwelling, dwelling unit, mobile dwelling unit, or parcel of land, vacant or otherwise, including a mobile home park; or

(2) has care, charge or control of any dwelling, dwelling unit, mobile dwelling unit or parcel of land, vacant or otherwise, including a mobile home park, in any capacity including but not limited to agent, executor, executrix, administrator, administratrix, trustee or guardian of the estate of the holder of legal title; or

(3) is a mortgagee in possession of any such property; or

(4) is an agent, trustee or other person appointed by the courts and vested with possession or control of any such property; or

(5) is an officer or trustee of the association of unit owners of a condominium. Each such person is bound to comply with the provisions of these minimum standards as if he were the owner. However, this ordinance shall not apply to a Condominium Association created pursuant to M.G.L. c. 138A to the extent that such Association forecloses on or initiates the foreclosure process for unpaid assessments due or owing to the Association. Owner also means every person who operates a rooming house; or

(6) is a trustee who holds, owns or controls mortgage loans for mortgage backed securities transactions and has initiated the foreclosure process.

Property means any real, residential property, or portion thereof, located in the City of Quincy, including building or structures situated on the property. For purposes of this section only, property does not include property owned or subject to the control of the City or any of its' governmental bodies. Such property includes, but is not limited to, property owned or controlled by the Quincy Housing Authority.

Residential Property means any property that contains one or more dwelling units used, intended, or designed to be occupied for living purposes.

Securing means measures that assist in making the property inaccessible to unauthorized persons.

Vacant means any property not currently legally occupied and not properly maintained or secured.

8.44.030 Registration of Vacant and/or Foreclosing Residential Properties Duty to Provide Written Notice of Vacant, Residential Property and/or Mortgage Foreclosure.

All owners must register vacant and/or foreclosing residential properties with the Director of the Inspectional Services Department on forms provided by the Director. All registrations must state the individual owner's or agent's phone number and mailing address located within the Commonwealth as required by M.G.L. c. 59, s. 57D, M.G.L. c. 156D, s. 5.02, and 950 CMR 113.20. The mailing address may not be a P.O. Box. This registration must also certify that the property was inspected and identify whether the property is vacant at the time of filing. If the property is vacant, the owner and/or registrant must designate and retain a local individual or local property management company responsible for the security and maintenance of the property. This designation must state the individual or company's name, phone number, and local mailing address. The mailing address may not be a P.O. Box. If the property is in the process of foreclosure, then the registration must be received within seven days of the initiation of the foreclosure process as defined in subsection (b). If the Director determines that the property is vacant and that foreclosure proceedings have not been initiated, the registration must be received within fourteen days of the Director's first citation for improper maintenance.

All property registrations are valid for one calendar year. An annual registration fee of one-hundred dollars and no cents ($100.00) must accompany the registration form. Subsequent annual registrations and fees are due within thirty (30) days of the expiration of the previous registration and must certify whether the foreclosing and/or foreclosed property remains vacant or not. A list of all vacant properties registered pursuant to the requirements of this ordinance shall be provided by the Director of Inspectional Services to the Chiefs of the Police and Fire Departments.

Once the property is no longer vacant or is sold, the owner must provide proof of sale or written notice and proof of occupancy to the Director of the Inspectional Services Department.

8.44.040 Maintenance Requirements

Properties subject to this section must be maintained in accordance with the relevant Sanitary Codes, Building Codes, and local regulations. The owner, local individual or local property management company must inspect and maintain the property on a monthly basis for the duration of the vacancy.

The property must contain a posting with the name and 24-hour contact phone number of the local individual or property management company responsible for the maintenance. This sign must be posted on the front of the property so it is clearly visible from the street.

Adherence to this section does not relieve the owner of any applicable obligations set forth in Code regulations, Covenant Conditions and Restrictions and/or Home Owners Association rules and regulations.

8.44.050 Inspections

The Inspectional Services Department shall have the authority and the duty to inspect properties subject to this section for compliance and to issue citations for any violations. The Inspectional Services Department shall have the discretion to determine when and how such inspections are to be made, provided that their policies are reasonably calculated to ensure that this section is enforced.

8.44.060 Enforcement and Penalties.

Failure to initially register with the Director is punishable by a fine of three hundred dollars and no cents ($300.00).

If applicable, failure to properly identify the name of the local individual or local property management company is punishable by a fine of three hundred dollars and no cents ($300.00).

Failure to maintain the property is punishable by a fine up to three hundred dollars and no cents ($300.00) for each week the property is not maintained.

Violations of this chapter shall be treated as a strict liability offense regardless of intent.

All monies collected pursuant to this section shall be directed to a specific Inspectional Services Department enforcement fund.

8.44.070 Appeal. Any person aggrieved by the requirements of this section or by a decision issued under this section by the Inspectional Services Department, may seek relief in any court of competent jurisdiction as provided by the laws of the Commonwealth.

8.44.080 Applicability. If any provision of this section imposes greater restrictions or obligations than those imposed by any other general law, special law, regulation, rule, ordinance, by law, order, or policy then the provisions of this section control.

8.44.090 Regulatory Authority. The Director of the Inspectional Services Department has the authority to promulgate rules and regulations necessary to implement and enforce this section.

8.44.100 if any provision of this section is held to be invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction then such provision shall be considered separately and apart from the remaining provisions, which shall remain in full force and effect.

8.44.110 Implementation. The provisions of this section are effectively immediately upon passage and all provisions shall be enforced immediately but no monetary fine shall be imposed pursuant hereto until ninety (90) days after passage.

8.44.120 Notice. A copy of this ordinance is to be posted on the City of Quincy web site. In addition, a copy of this ordinance is to be mailed to all loan institutions, banks, real estate offices, and management companies located in and/or having legal or equitable interest in residential property located in the City of Quincy.

A true copy.

ground. After a brief struggle to control the suspect's hands, he was handcuffed. While conducting a search of the suspect, Officer Lanergan discovered a very large amount of cash stuffed inside both pockets of the suspect. A quick inspection of the money showed the cash was held in brown paper bands, consistent with those used at banks. Officer Lanergan read the suspect Miranda Rights and asked him where the gun was.

The suspect answered, "I didn't have a gun, that was @#$%&@#$%". $4,123.00 was recovered from the suspect. Lieutenant Glynn and the Detectives went back to the bank and prepared the witnesses for a show up identification. The suspect was brought to the rear parking lot of Eastern Bank and when asked to step outside the car and stand up he stated, "I'm not going back into that bank". As the suspect stood outside the cruiser, two witnesses positively identified the suspect as the bank robber. The suspect, a 38-year-old Quincy resident, was transported to the station on the charges of "Armed Robbery, Defrauding an Inn Keeper and Knowingly Resisting Arrest".

Detective Willard determined that bank reported that $4,141.02 had been stolen. $4,123.00 was recovered from the suspect. Soon after, the robbery note, the jacket, the baseball cap and the Dunkin Donuts bag, with the note were all recovered behind the bank by Detective Ward and Officer Dentrement. Video from the bank and the CVS store were taken as evidence too. Back at the station, Officers' James Cassidy and Ed Bagley began the process of booking the suspect. The suspect asked them where he would be spending the night and he was told at the station unless he could make bail. The suspect amazingly responded, "Do you even know why I am here. . . . I just robbed a bank." Nice Work!

No West Nile Virus Found Here – So Far

what kind of shape the bird's remains are in."

So far this season (June 2 through September) 21 dead birds found in Massachusetts have tested positive for West Nile and 28 groups of mosquitos have tested positive for the virus.

The closest positive birds to Quincy were found in Boston (2), Dedham, Needham and Whitman and the closest positive mosquito pools in Boston (4), Brookline (2), Needham (2) and Abington.

Dead birds, chiefly crows and jays, should be reported to the State Department of Public Health, seven days a week, 24 hours a day, using the toll-free line 1-800-MASS-WNV (or 1-866-627-7968).

Callers should be ready to tell the species of the bird, the date and time of death, street address where the bird was found and the condition of the bird. If the bird is to be tested, the city's animal control officer will transport it to the state laboratory.

The bird will not be accepted for testing if it has been dead for more than 24 hours or shows signs of decomposition like bulging eyes, non-intact eyes or the presence of flies or maggots.

If the bird is ruled not suitable for testing, the person who reported the bird will be asked to dispose of it, taking the following precautions:

Never touched the bird with bare hands. Using gloves or a shovel, place the bird in a double plastic bag. Seal the bag. Place it in the usual trash receptacle. Wash hands with soap and water.

West Nile Virus Encephalitis is a serious disease in humans but rarely fatal. Last year, 3,630 cases were reported nationwide from 43 states with 124 fatalities. There is no vaccine or specific treatment for the disease.

The virus first appeared in the United States in 1999. It grows in birds and is transmitted from bird to bird and from birds to humans by mosquitos.

Residents can help reduce the risk of West Nile Virus by reducing the amount of standing water around the house and in the yard.

Dispose of all containers that can hold water like tin cans, pots and discarded tires or drill holes in them to let the water out, clean clogged roof gutters, fix holes in screens, turn over plastic wading pools and wheel barrows.

Avoid outdoor activities at dawn and dusk, wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants and use mosquito repellent that contains DEET, covers arms and legs of children playing near swamps, cover babies' play pens and carriages with mosquito netting.

FAMILY MEMBERS leave St. John the Baptist Church Monday after the funeral Mass for Robert (Bobby) Harvey, 28, who was killed Aug. 14 when one of the 150 ton legs of the giant crane Goliath collapsed while being dismantled at the former Fore River Shipyard. Behind the Whites, funeral director Stephen Bates (left, second row) aids the Harvey family. Work On Dismantling
'Goliath' Put On Hold

May Take Six Months To Find Crane Cause

By TOM HENSHAW
and LAURA GRIFFIN

Even as the 28-year-old victim was laid to rest, inspectors for OSHA opened what may become a six-month investigation of the partial collapse that halted temporarily the dismantling of the Goliath crane at the former Fore River Shipyard.

Robert Harvey of Weymouth, an ironworker who was helping to take down the 370-foot crane for shipment to its new home in Rumania, was killed instantly last Thursday when a portion of one of the 150-ton legs collapsed prematurely.

Norstar LLC, the Seattle-based construction company that was hired by Daewoo Mangalia Heavy Industries, the new owners of the crane, suspended dismantling work until the cause of the mishap that killed Harvey and injured two others is determined.

More than 800 persons filled the pews and stood around the nave of 600-capacity St. John the Baptist Church on School Street for the funeral Mass for Harvey, a Quincy Point native who moved to Weymouth in the past year with his wife, Jennifer.

Following the Mass, a dozen men from Harvey's union, Ironworkers Local 7, formed an honor guard on the church steps, tears lining their faces as they stood silently while the casket was taken from the church to the somber wail of three bagpipes.

"The city of Quincy and the people of Quincy were at their best," said the Rev. Richard Cannon, pastor of St. John's Church, who celebrated the Mass assisted by Deacons Paul Lewis and Jack Menz.

Quincy police provided a motorcycle escort leading a 150-car cortege from the church to Pine Hill Cemetery with cruisers from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office bringing up to the rear.

Why He Wants To Return To Board

Mariano Sees Need To Get School Buildings On Track

State Rep. Ron Mariano, who left the job after 16 years three years ago, wants back on the School Committee to help straighten out what is perceived as a school building problem in Quincy.

"I thought we had everything settled when I left," he told The Quincy Sun. "We have to finish the new Quincy High School and we need to get Central and Sterling Middle Schools back on track."

RON MARIANO

Mariano chose not to run for reelection to the School

Committee in 2005 after he was named House chairman of the powerful Joint Legislative Committee on Financial Services.

Mariano is the pick of Mayor Thomas P. Koch to succeed Kevin Mulvey was resigned from the School Committee to become director of Human Resources for the School Department.

His successor will be chosen by a joint convention of the nine members of the City Council and the six remaining members of the School Committee sometime in September.

The post is also being sought by Karl Roos, a pharmaceutical salesman and father of three kids in Quincy schools, who has never run for public office.

Mayor Koch said one of the primary reasons he asked Mariano to seek a return to the School Committee was the positive working relationship he has built over 16 years with the state officials in charge of school construction projects.

Mariano noted to The Sun that when the school building program was started in Quincy, the state reimbursement was 90 per cent. Now, he said, it is 60 per cent. He indicated something might be done about that.

However, he took a pass on the second great controversy that has plagued the schools --- the location of the new regulation track facility --- Faxon Field or Pageant Field.

"I haven't been part of the process," he said. "I would plan to get together with both sides and listen to the relative aspects.

Position May Be Overhauled

Koch Appoints O'Connor As Temporary Auditor

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch appointed Susan O'Connor as temporary auditor earlier this month after consulting with the city's legal department, according to Chris Walker, the mayor's Director of Policy. The position was vacated July 31.

O'Connor is a five-year veteran of the Audit Department with a background of more than 15 years in banking and accounting.

"This is temporary until City Council acts," Walker said, adding, "We checked with the legal department. This is not a position we can leave (unfilled) comfortably for any length of time."

Walker noted that the auditor prepares the payroll and oversees payments of city expenditures.

Under Quincy's by-laws, the City Auditor is appointed by a majority vote of the City Council and the auditor reports directly to the council which establishes his or her salary and terms of employment.

However, the City Council has been in summer recess since mid-June and has taken no official action on filling the position since their last meeting June 15.

At that time, councillors accepted Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick's resignation effective July 31. Fitzpatrick resigned to take a position with Norfolk County Agricultural School.

"We won't have a meeting until September," Council President Jay Davis said this week, adding that the council will undertake an open search for Fitzpatrick's replacement.

"There'll be a complete search for an auditor," Davis said.

In the interim, Koch and several councillors have met to discuss overhauling the position to meet the challenges of the city's $200 million plus annual budget, according to Walker and Davis.

"He's had some general meetings with several of the councillors," Walker said of the mayor, adding that any reorganization is aimed at "...making the city's financial operations more efficient."

"The auditor is there to audit the spending," said Davis, adding that many new duties have been added over the years such as preparing budgets, and payroll that "should not be done by the auditor."

Davis said that reorganizing the position could make it more efficient for the city and allow the auditor to have more time for reviewing expenditures.

"Preparing the budget and payroll should not be done by the auditor," Davis said, suggesting that a revision of the auditor's duties will make the position even more independent.

Davis, also, suggested that city officials might consider designating a "CFO" or chief financial officer "...to take over the day to day" financial operations.

In the meantime, Walker said that O'Connor is familiar with the work.

A graduate of Westfield State College, O'Connor studied management and marketing. O'Connor has been employed in the Auditor's Department for five and one half years. Prior to that, she worked for a Norwell business and in the finance departments of Bank of Boston and Bank of New York.

"She knows the ins and outs (of the position) until the City Council and the mayor move forward..." Walker said.

WORKERS TAKE AWAY last of the stones if the Abigail Adams Cairn. Mayor Thomas Koch, working with Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymond, declared the condition of the 110-year-old monument, which marks the place where Abigail and John Quincy Adams watched the Battle of Bunker Hill, in need of emergency repairs. The structure is being dismantled and rebuilt with the same material as the original.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN showing damaging cracks.

QUINCY HISTORICAL SOCIETY Executive Director Rd. Edward Fitzgerald (left) and Society President Jim Edwards inspect a time capsule unearthed during the razing of the historic Abigail Adams Cairn on Franklin Street. Officials believe the capsule is at least 110 years old. The cairn will be rebuilt with the same materials.

1896 Time Capsule Found

Abigail Adams Cairn Razed, To Be Rebuilt With Same Stones

Workers restoring the Abigail Adams Cairn atop Penn's Hill may have made a most serendipitous find --- a time capsule that apparently dates back to 1896 when the monument was built.

The copper container the size of a shoebox was discovered early Tuesday morning buried inside the stone and granite cairn by workers for the Phoenix Bay State Construction Co.

The firm is performing emergency restoration work on the 112-year-old monument ordered by Mayor Thomas P. Koch at the urging of Ward 2 City Councilor Daniel Raymond and the Quincy Historical Society.

The cairn was erected to mark the spot where Abigail Adams took her young son, John Quincy Adams, to watch the battle of Bunker Hill across Boston Harbor in Charlestown in 1775.

"It is wonderfully exciting that a project that unquestionably needed to be done to preserve a rich piece of Quincy's history will bare even more history than anyone expected," said Koch.

Raymond noted that the project was started originally as a public safety issue.

"The monument was literally falling apart at a time of intense interest in the Adams story and increased visitation to the site," he said. "To have it turn into a historic discovery is a great surprise."

The Quincy Historical Society took possession of the time capsule along with an Indian head penny and another coin found atop the box. A public opening of the capsule is planned for sometime in the next few days.

"Before we do anything, we want to talk to some folks who are experts on these types of things, how to properly open it, how to preserve what may be inside," said Dr Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Society.

"It is every exciting to think that what may be inside the capsule and what it will tell us about the cairn and Quincy of 1896."

In spite of being soldered closed, whatever is inside may have suffered some damage over the last hundred years, said Fitzgerald, since is container is not likely to be water-tight.

Renovation work on the cairn began this summer after it was declared unsafe when visible cracks were discovered and large open spaces found where stones had fallen.

Inspections showed that simply filling the cracks would not be sufficient to preserve the cairn so restoration experts were brought in the dismantle the structure and rebuild it with the same Quincy granite of the original.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 22, 1749, a troupe of English actors performs "Cato," by Joseph Addison, in a warehouse in Philadelphia. The locals considered acting to be immoral, and the city council ran the troupe out of town. The troupe fled to New York, a more theater-friendly town.

• On Aug. 24, 1814, during the War of 1812, President James Madison is present at the Battle of Bladensburg and takes command of one of the few remaining American artillery batteries, thus becoming the only president to exercise his authority as commander in chief in actual battle.

• On Aug. 19, 1909, the first automobile race is held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The track's surface of crushed rock and tar proved dangerous and was soon replaced with 3.2 million paving bricks, laid in a bed of sand and fixed with mortar. Dubbed "The Brickyard," the speedway reopened in December 1909.

• On Aug. 20, 1921, author Jacqueline Susann is born. With her novels "Valley of the Dolls," "The Love Machine" and "Once Is Not Enough," Susann became the first novelist to have three bestsellers on the list at once.

• On Aug. 18, 1941, Adolf Hitler orders that the systematic murder of the mentally ill and handicapped be brought to an end because of protests within Germany. But 50,000 people had already fallen victim to it. The practice would be revived in occupied Poland.

• On Aug. 21, 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signs a proclamation admitting Hawaii into the Union as the 50th state. The president also issued an order for an American flag featuring 50 stars. The new flag became official on July 4, 1960.

• On Aug. 23, 1999, seven people in New York die from what turns out to be the first cases of West Nile virus in the United States. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that the virus, spread by mosquitoes, had been contracted by birds throughout the area. In subsequent years, the West Nile virus moved steadily westward across the United States.

He's In That Mood Again

I'm in that grouchy mood again.

You know, when little things get to you. And grow into pet peeves.

Most of the time though, I get off to a jolly-good-fellow start in the morning. Then sometimes, suddenly it can happen. Some little thing gets in the way that annoys me. Just can't help it.

Like coming down Independence Avenue and running a little late on the way to the office and a car pops out in front of you from a side street and then goes into a slow crawl all the way to Quincy Square. With no room to pass.

Nothing really earthshaking, just one of my little pet peeves, a few of which I have aired from time to time. You must have a few of your own.

Maybe some of mine are some of yours.

Not necessarily in order of importance but you know, things like:

The pollster who wants to know who you're going to vote for. Really none of his business.

Britney Spears, Madonna and Paris Hilton. What role models!

The TV cameraman who is so fascinated with close-ups of Terry Francona in the Red Sox dugout spitting, spitting and spitting out whatever he's chewing. And Francona for giving kids a bad habit.

The hot-rodder who speeds through the Hancock parking lot as if it were the Southeast Expressway.

The cowboy who roars through a quiet neighborhood ignoring parked cars and driveways and the safety of youngsters who might dart out from them. You wouldn't feel too badly to see this guy a block or so away wrapped around a steel utility pole.

You're waiting for an important telephone call. The phone finally rings. It's a telemarker.

People who start sentences, "Me and him" or "Hey, man."

Those sitcoms with the canned laughter and the fascination with the word "boobs."

The horn tooter behind you who lets you know the second the red light turns green.

The driver who leaves his (her) car halfway in an adjoining parking space taking up two spaces while you're circling around trying to find a space.

Or those who leave their shopping carts in the middle of parking spaces. Too lazy or inconsiderate to return them to where they belong. Ran into three in a row the other day.

The swanky place where the bartender doesn't know how to make a dry martini.

The politician who thinks he knows it all, whatever the issue.

The writer who sends an angry letter to the editor claiming some kind of wrongdoing at City Hall and ending with a challenging 'I bet you don't have the guts to print this letter.' But doesn't have the guts to sign the letter.

The rumormonger spreading a juicy one about some well-known figure having an alleged affair. All talk, no proof.

People who can't stop talking during the playing of the National Anthem.

And those who abuse or show no respect for Old Glory.

The guy that likes to surprise you by waiting until he starts turning before giving you a directional signal.

Motorcycle cowboys who just can't get enough noise out of their bikes. If your car made that much noise it probably would fail an inspection sticker test.

Drivers who sail through "Walk" pedestrian lights.

The guy who sneaks a parking space reserved for the handicapped.

Kids on skateboards risking their young necks doing pretzel loop-the-loops or maneuvering alongside traffic on Hancock Street.

Some of today's baseball players with multi-million dollar contracts. If they're pulling in that much money with so-so talent, Babe Ruth, Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, etc. would be worth a billion or more.

Stupid TV commercials like the one I've mentioned before: The anti-perspirant one with the gal running around the street showing off her armpits.

Well, those are some of my little pet peeves but I'll stop before I get carried away.

You must have a few of your own. Maybe one of them is someone like me forcing mine on you.

I have a few more. But some other time.

Scenes From Yesterday

POSTMARKED IN 1919 this real photo postcard is a rare view of an electric trolley car on Billings Road looking towards Norfolk Downs. The card, appropriately labeled Billings Road Bend, is showing the trolley coming from Hancock Street in the Downs, climbing up the slightly curving grade and turning towards the south at the intersection of Calumet Street on the left and Apthorp Street on the right. The ancient Billings slate quarry was just behind the houses on the right.

From here the trolleys continued on to West Elm Avenue, where they turned right to and through Huntington Square, and rejoined Hancock Street at the end of Elm Avenue. The grocery store on the corner at the right of this view became a Chinese laundry in the late 1930's. A newer building on the same corner has been home to a number of laundries ever since. Planning Head Defends Sea Street Incinerator Site

The position of the Quincy Planning Board in favoring a Sea Street location over Hardwick's Quarry as the site for the proposed municipal incinerator was defended by Planning Director James E. Lee in a letter to the mayor and the city council.

This Week
1961
47 Years Ago

The Planning Board recently indicated its opposition to the Quarry Street location after a recent public hearing.

One of the chief objections of the Planning Board was that an incinerator at the Hardwick site would jeopardize "the future development of Quarry Hill."

BOY RESCUED AFTER FALL DOWN AIRSHAFT

Three-year old Richard Gregor of 160 Main St., Quincy Point, was quickly rescued unharmed after he plunged from the second story to the first floor in a furnace airshaft. Within minutes after police and firemen arrived, a wall was ripped out and the aluminum duct in which he was trapped, was opened.

The child emerged bewildered as he saw a living room full of firemen and policemen. He managed a grin for the photographer.

Acting Lt. Lester Hazlett was in charge of the fire detail while Capt. William F. McIntyre headed the police detail.

EUROPE ALARMED AT BERLIN GATE CLOSING

Anger, resentment and foreboding rumbled across Western Europe at the slamming of the Berlin Border gates to stop the flow of westward bound East Germans. (Editor's note: This action led to the construction of the Berlin Wall between the Eastern and Western sections of Berlin. The wall would not come down until 1989.)

READERS FORUM

Senior Center And Track Should Be In Pageant Field

On Nov. 13, 2007 a meeting was held in the Park and Recreation Building at Pageant Field. The senior community was invited to start the process for a Senior Center.

The participants were to provide information/analysis, manage own small groups, develop concepts/ideas and seek common ground and action.

One thing that was abundantly clear, all the participants wanted the Senior Center at Pageant Field.

Second, the proposed track at Pageant Field would be a magnet to draw seniors to the Center year round for exercise and planned events.

If the goal is to get maximum use out of the Senior Center, then it makes no sense to have the Center at one location and a year round track at another. I am sure that the Myles Standish School site on East Squantum Street as the location for the Senior Center, would not have been supported by the senior community at the meeting on Nov. 13, 2007, and I know of no other meeting, or process, that has taken place since then where the senior community has had input on the process or the location.

The former Myles Standish School at 440 East Squantum St. is a terrible location for a Senior Center. It is not central to the city, the intersection of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive, is a nightmare in the morning and afternoon and offers no outdoor activity for active seniors, assisted seniors and the physically challenged.

I suggest moving the Parks and Recreation Department to the former Myles Standish School and build the Senior Center and track at Pageant Field. That is what the seniors wanted. That is what makes sense and the seniors deserve better than 440 East Squantum Street.

'Goliath' Should Have Been Kept As Monument to Shipyard Workers

The recent tragedy at the former Quincy Shipyard, the third death since Jan. 2005 seems so needless. The giant "Goliath" crane that broke apart sending an ironworker to his death has indeed, as Norfolk County D.A. Bill Keating said, turned a landmark into a sad memorial.

The 30-story crane was being dismantled for a trip to East Europe where a Romanian company had purchased it.

With hindsight, it probably should have remained at the former shipyard as a reminder to the South Shore area of the importance of that Fore River site to the area's economy. For 42 years now, the crane rose above the horizon and was part of everyone's life as folks crossed over the Fore River Bridge daily.

The "Goliath" crane could have served as a monument to all those who worked there for nearly a century.

Now, it will remind people of death. It will leave the shipyard for someplace else and people will be glad to forget it.

Yet another in a series of sad endings for a shipyard that was the lifeblood of working families in Quincy, Weymouth and the entire South Shore.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Coconut Shrimp With Almonds

When I go out to a restaurant, and there's coconut shrimp on the menu, I usually order it and enjoy it. One day I tried to make them at home, and somehow, they didn't taste the same.

Today's recipe is one I found recently and it so like the ones that the restaurants serve. The only difference is that it calls for almonds as well as coconut, but that is optional. As long as the rest of the recipe is followed.

COCONUT SHRIMP WITH ALMONDS

- 1 1/2 pounds jumbo shrimp (cleaned with tails left on)
- 3/4 cup almonds (ground)
- 1 bag sweetened flake coconut (2 1/2 cups)
- 1/2 cup flour

2 eggs lightly beaten vegetable oil for frying

Combine almonds and 2/3 cup of the coconut and grind until well blended. Blend together the ground mixture and the remaining coconut and flour. In a small bowl, lightly beat the eggs.

Dip a few shrimp in the eggs, and then in the coconut mixture. Place on a waxed-paper lined baking sheet.

Heat oil and fry shrimp one to two minutes until golden brown and place on a paper towel to drain. Here is a dipping sauce to use if you wish.

Dipping Sauce

- 1 bottle duck sauce (7 ounces)
- 1/4 cup ketchup
- 1 tablespoon low sodium soy sauce

Quincy Community United Methodist To Celebrate 25th Anniversary Of Merger

The Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St, Wollaston, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its merger with four churches beginning Saturday, Sept. 13 with a dinner dance and buffet dinner.

The merger included Adams Shore, Atlantic, Quincy Center and Wollaston who all came together in 1983.

Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church said, "This is a very significant milestone in the history of the church." "It's a time to honor the past, celebrate the present, and anticipate the future."

Rev. Tony Jarek-Glidden, husband of the pastor, will be the DJ for the dance.

Persons are encouraged to wear something silver to celebrate the spirit of the weekend.

On Sunday, Sept. 14, a special worship service will be held, which will include the histories and memories of the four founding churches. Memory books, compiled by Jeannie O'Connor, will be given to all who attend.

After the worship, the annual Homecoming Hot Dog Roast will be held on the church's front lawn. Participants are asked to bring a salad, dessert, or snacks to share. Hot dogs and beverages will be provided.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Norfolk RSVP Seeks Reading Tutor Volunteer

The Norfolk County Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) is seeking volunteers to assist child literacy programs during the coming year in participating elementary schools.

"Anyone who has faced a tough subject in school can appreciate how much a tutor means to a young student who needs assistance with reading skills," said County Commission Chairman Francis O'Brien.

"Students who improve their reading will perform better in all areas, not just one; this is what makes the Norfolk County RSVP reading programs so important."

Norfolk RSVP, sponsored by the county commission, helps to place volunteers who are over 55 years of age in service positions throughout the county.

To become a volunteer or for more information, call Kimberly Driscoll at the Norfolk County RSVP office 781-329-5728.

Koch Will Recommend $10 Increase In Parking Fines

Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed increasing fines for overtime parking and more than a dozen other parking violations in an effort to bring the city's fine schedule in line with other cities and towns of the same size, according to Chris Walker, Director of Policy.

"Part of the reason we're proposing this is that, historically, Quincy has had lower fines (than similar) cities and towns," Walker said.

Under the mayor's plan, the penalty for overtime parking would increase from $15 to $25. In addition, the mayor's plan would triple the current fee for parking in a handicapped zone from $100 to $300 and, for obstructing a driveway from $5 to $25.

City Councillors who will not meet again until September must approve the proposal.

According to records provided by the mayor's office, city officials issued 9611 overtime parking tickets for $15 at last official count. Those parking tickets netted the city $144,165. With an increase of $10 per ticket, the city will collect $240,275 for the same number of tickets.

Under the proposal, collections for all parking violations in the city would increase total annual fee collections by $218,380 from $320,345 to $538,725.

BEFORE a portion collapsed, killing Robert Harvey, 28, of Weymouth, the 150-ton leg of the Goliath Crane (left foreground) was holding its own in this photo taken Tuesday afternoon ...

AND AFTER the fatal accident the space once filled by the missing leg (right foreground) is empty and that section of the 1,200-ton main crane is supported by delicate framework Thursday afternoon.

May Take Six Months To Find Crane Cause

1997 Ford 150.

"It was really important to them," said Tracey Fay of Keohane's Funeral Home.

Most of the mourners wore yellow ribbons with tags inscribed to "BH," for Bobby Harvey, which were provided by the Ironworkers Local 7.

In her eulogy, Harvey's sister, Kristen Christian, described growing up with her brother, and his close friend, Bob Hall, spoke of his two loves --- his wife and hockey.

Hall also read tributes and remembrances from Harvey's other friends and was a pallbearer along with John Paul White, Greg Christian, Mike McNally, Johnny Harvey, Jay Randall and Sean Wilkoski.

Following the burial, friends and family gathered at the Sons of Italy Hall on Quarry Street to trade reminiscences of the Quincy boy who virtually grew up at Quincy Youth Hockey Arena and once scored the first goal for Quincy High in a state championship game.

Informal memorials to Harvey's passing appeared outside the main gate of the former shipyard on Howard Street --- candles, balloons, flowers and a handmade sign promising: "We love you, Bobby. We're proud of you. We miss you. We'll never forget you."

In addition to Harvey, two others were injured in the collapse.

Thierry DeCree, 36, a Belgian living in Quincy, was taken to Quincy Medical Center then transferred to Boston Medical Center, where he was discharged Sunday after treatment for a broken leg.

Wayne Walker, 34, an ironworker from Florida, was treated and released at Quincy Medical Center.

Ted Fitzgerald, a spokesman for OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration), said the federal agency began its investigation the day the incident happened when three inspectors were dispatched to the scene in the shipyard, inactive since 1986.

"We will look at all the factors to see if there was any violation of safety standards," he said. "At this point it is hard to say how long it will take. It may take as long as six months."

The OSHA investigation will encompass the physical conditions of the accident scene, personal interviews, a check of the records and any other information as to

Walking Tips For Health

Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk Sept. 28

As the lazy, hazy days of summer wane and the fresh, crisp air of autumn approaches, it's a great time to trade in the flip-flops for a pair of walking shoes and start a walking program.

"Walking is one of the best ways to exercise because almost anyone can do it, anywhere at anytime," says Sarah DiBona, an exercise physiologist at Quincy Medical Center. "Walking can help you maintain a healthy weight and keep your heart healthy. Walking can also help to lower your blood pressure, increase the amount of 'good' cholesterol in your blood and lower your risk of diabetes, stroke, high blood pressure and osteoporosis. Plus it makes you feel better by increasing your energy, reducing stress and improving your sleep."

If you need a little push to get your walking program in gear, why not use the QMC Cancer Walk on Sunday, September 28 as your motivation to get going? Not only will you be working toward a worthy philanthropic goal, you'll be doing something healthy for yourself at the same time.

The QMC Cancer Walk supports the Marie A. Curry Fund, a permanently endowed fund at Quincy

Medical Center focused on encouraging prevention and early detection of cancer and enhancing access to vital cancer screenings and services for uninsured and underinsured women and men. The four-mile seaside course begins and ends at Pageant Field in Merry-mountain Park and is perfect for seasoned walkers and beginners alike.

When starting a walking program, begin with a modest goal, like 15 to 20 minutes at a leisurely pace, advises DiBona. "This is the best way to prevent injury and stay motivated. And always remember to include a warm-up and cool-down with plenty of stretches," she says. "Stretching is really important. It not only feels great, but it keeps your body flexible and helps prevent injuries. But it is important to warm your muscles up a bit before stretching."

Most injuries are caused by inconsistency, cautions DiBona. The key to staying healthy is to increase the intensity and duration of your walk in a gradual, progressive manner. "Once you've started your program, try adding five minutes a week to the brisk part of your walk," DiBona suggests. "Then once you're walking for 30 minutes or more, try to increase your speed and distance."

How much exercise do we need? The US Department of Health and Human Services and Agriculture recommends that individuals should perform a minimum of 30 minutes of moderate intensity exercise on most days to protect against chronic disease; at least 60 minutes of moderate- to vigorous-intensity activity on most days to prevent unhealthy weight gain; and 60 to 90 minutes of moderate-intensity activity daily to sustain weight loss in individuals who have lost substantial body weight. Similarly, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the American College of Sports Medicine have recommended that "every US adult should accumulate 30 minutes or more of moderate- and/or vigorous-intensity physical activity at least five days of the week."

For more information about the QMC Cancer Walk or to receive a QMC Cancer Walk Workout Program, contact Lola Tom (617-376-5493, ltom@quincymc.org) or Linda McCulley (617-376-5495, lmccluley@quincymc.org)

Tips for Walking Success

Warm Up

To warm up, walk at a slower pace, about 50 percent of your maximum effort, for about five minutes.

Then stop and stretch your calves, front of thigh (quadriceps), back of thigh (hamstrings) and lower back.

Stretches should be gradual and sustained, holding each for 30 seconds.

Never bounce or force movements!

Get Going!

After stretching, walk at a brisk exercise pace, but do not exert yourself too much. If you are not able to carry on a conversation while you walk, slow it down a bit.

Keep your shoulders back and relaxed, and let your arms swing naturally.

Walk tall. Hold your head up and look forward. Keep your shoulders down, back and relaxed. Tighten your abdominal muscles and buttocks.

Remember that your heel should strike the ground first, and that you should push off with your toe.

Try to keep an even stride and maintain a steady pace.

Cool down

During the last 5 minutes of your walk, gradually slow down to your warm-up pace. Then, finish with a few more stretches.

Stretching after you walk gives your body time to cool down and your muscles a chance to relax. It also helps your heart return gradually to a normal rate.

What to wear

Be kind to your feet. Wear comfortable, well-fitting walking shoes with snug arch support and lateral stability. Remember to buy your walking shoes so that they fit properly to your larger foot, since most people have one foot that is slightly bigger than the other, and try them on with type of socks you will wear when walking to get the proper fit.

Steer clear of cotton socks, which soak up perspiration, and wear socks made with fibers that draw moisture away from your skin.

Wear loose-fitting clothes. In colder temperatures, wear layers that you can take off as you warm up.

When walking at night, wear white or light-colored clothing or wear reflective clothing, a reflective vest, or a safety light.

Look for Excuses (to Walk)

Now that you've started a walking routine and have all that extra energy to burn, try building extra walking opportunities into your daily routine like taking the stairs instead of the elevator at work or parking further from the mall entrance.

Don't go it alone

If the peace and solitude of a solo walk aren't your speed, walk with a friend or family member. Dogs also make great walking companions.

Stay hydrated

Be sure to drink plenty of water. If walking around the block, drink some water before you head out and more when you return. If walking for longer than 30 minutes, take your water along. Be sure to drink every 20 minutes.

water. If walking around the block, drink some water before you head out and more when you return. If walking for longer than 30 minutes, take your water along. Be sure to drink every 20 minutes.

Be Safe

Be aware of your surroundings. Don't get so wrapped up in your walking, talking or listening to music that you fail to notice things around you: people, vehicles, dogs, etc.

Use sidewalks when possible. Where there's no sidewalk, walk facing traffic.

Take ID with you.

Carry a cell phone with you, to call for help if you need it.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, August 3, 2008, at approximately 4:50 P.M., hours, Officers' Paul Murphy and Dennis Keenan were dispatched to TJ Maxx, 100 Granite Street, on a report that shoplifting had just occurred. Quincy Police Communications, speaking with security, provided a description of the two female suspects. Suspect #1 was wearing a pink and white dress, carrying a black bag. Suspect #2 was described as wearing a white, purple and yellow tank top with jeans. Communications updated the Officers that the suspects were fleeing across Burgin Parkway toward the Parkingway and that Loss Prevention personnel from TJ Maxx had been assaulted. As Officer Murphy approached the area, he could see the two suspects crossing the Paul Harold Bridge toward the Parkingway.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Murphy approached the suspects in the parking lot of the Commonwealth Restaurant at 79 Parkingway, he observed two T.J. Maxx Loss Prevention Officers a distance away pointing at the two females he was approaching. He also noted that suspect #2 had thrown a black bag under a parked car. Officers' Dennis Keenan and Michael Duran arrived at this time. After the Officers questioned the suspects, they were informed that they were under arrest. Officer Duran handcuffed suspect #1, but suspect #2 fled. Officer Murphy gave chase and as the suspect crossed the parking lot, she came towards Officer Keenan, who was able to initially subdue her. Suspect #2 then punched Officer Keenan on the right side of the head and after a brief struggle, the suspect was brought to the ground. Officer Keenan was able to get the suspect's right hand cuffed, but she continued to flail about on the ground, yelling, "You can't do this! You don't know who my father is! You can't arrest me! You'll all lose your jobs! I'm gonna sue!"

The suspect was eventually handcuffed and placed into the rear of Officer Keenan's cruiser. Officer Murphy then retrieved the black bag under the car and to his surprise, he found a can of "Back Off" Dog Repellent. The Loss Prevention Officers approached Officer Murphy and told him that they tried to apprehend suspect #2 but she had the can in her hand and was shaking it as if she were going to spray them with it. The black bag contained several items from TJ Maxx that the Loss Prevention Officers witnessed them take. Surprisingly, there were numerous items from AJ Wright, all with price tags attached to them. Suspect #2 also had a large pink bag with her and found inside this bag were several more items with TJ Maxx price tags on them. Officer Murphy accompanied the Loss Prevention Officers back to TJ Maxx and reviewed the tapes of the store's surveillance system. They told Officer Murphy that they watched as suspect #2 placed clothing on the rack into bags that she had in a shopping cart. Suspect #1 appeared to mainly be acting a lookout for suspect #2. As the suspects were about to leave the store with several items, the Loss Prevention Officers stopped them. Suspect #2 immediately began to argue with them and then tried to push by them. Suspect #1 punched the Loss Prevention Officers and then the suspects ran toward the Granite Street Connector and then across Burgin Parkway toward the Commonwealth Restaurant. The total of items shoplifted from TJ Maxx was $412.71. During the search of the suspect #2's property, Officer Murphy found a cigarette box with a yellow string tied around it. Tucked inside the cellophane was a greenish brown vegetative substance consistent with marijuana. More of this substance was found throughout the box.

Officer Keenan transported suspect #2, a 22 year old Dorchester resident, to the station where she was charged with "Larceny over $250, Assault and Battery (2 counts), Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon, to wit, chemical spray (2 counts), Assault and Battery on a Police Officer, Illegal Possession of a Chemical Spray, Possession of a Class "D" Substance, to wit, marijuana and Knowingly Resisting Arrest." Officer Duran transported Suspect #1, a 23 year old Dorchester resident, to the Quincy Police Station where she was charged with "Larceny over $250."

Anthony Acito Selected For Chorus In TV Musical Reality TV

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Anthony Acito, the recent Quincy High School graduate who was competing for a star turn on ABC TV's summer reality show "High School Musical: Get in the Picture," is back home in Quincy.

On last week's episode, the adjudicators of the show decided to use Anthony in the chorus, where he sang backup for the young people still in contention for the brass ring, a starring role in a music video which will run during the end credits of Disney's feature film production of "High School Musical 3: Senior Year."

Although not yet aired nationally, the episode where a winner is chosen has already been filmed and the music video where you can spot Anthony as a member of the rockin' chorus has been completed. An October release date is planned in movie theatres.

Returning home this past Friday, Anthony, who has not had any formal voice training, said that he appreciated the judges' advice to him.

"They mainly told me to work on my vocals, that was pretty much it, they said my stage presence was good."

Anthony admits to the wonderful experience he had vying for a top spot during the competition in Disneyworld, and then in Salt Lake City, and speaks of how much he learned while working in such a professional environment.

"It was definitely a life changing experience, it was great to get recognized for having something special that other people didn't have."

As for his future plans, Anthony says, "I'm really not sure, I'm going to take a year off from school to try to continue acting...see if that works out for me."

May Take Six Months To Find Crane Cause

what was being done at the time.

"If it is determined that there was a violation of safety standards, then a citation will be issued," said Fitzgerald.

Norstar apparently will be starting the investigation process with a clean slate since OSHA could find no complaints from workers charging any hazardous conditions on this particular job.

Jay Duca, the director of Inspectional Services, said the city will not be involved in the investigation until OSHA has found a violation or some other defect in the procedure.

"Then we will follow up make sure the cause is identified and steps have been taken to see that it doesn't happen again," he said.

It was shortly after noon on Thursday and iron workers had removed one of the crane's four legs and were preparing the take down a second when the leg unexpectedly collapsed with a thunderous roar that was heard blocks away.

"It did collapse in the manner it was to collapse," acting Fire Chief Joseph Barron told a news conference. "It just did not collapse when it was supposed to."

The 160-foot leg of the crane was to have been cut into two 80-foot sections in a few days and lowered to the ground and moved to a barge for transport to a shipyard on the Black Sea in Mangalia, Rumania. Instead, it collapsed by itself prematurely.

The Goliath Crane has been a fixture at the former Fore River Shipyard since 1975 when it was brought in by the then-owner, General Dynamics, to hoist gigantic tanks onto liquified natural gas tankers. It had a hand in construction of 12 of them.

General Dynamics closed the shipyard for good in 1986 and its fate was uncertain until 2003 when car dealer Dan Quirk bought it at auction for $9 million. He sold the crane to Daewoo Shipbuilding & Marine Engineering of South Korea for its Rumanian shipyard.

Electrical Tool Kit

Q. When I moved to my first apartment, my dad gave me an old tool set with wrenches, pliers, a hammer and so on. He told me I need to add wire strippers and a tester. What are these? — Haley C., Boulder, Colo.

A. A wire stripper (usually a cutter/stripper) and a tester are among the basic ingredients of an electrical repair set. Most apartment dwellers will not (and should not) need to perform repairs to their wiring. However, like the rest of the items in the tool kit you received from your dad, they are handy to have around and may make an appearance while decorating the place. (Putting up a new light fixture or ceiling fan is one immediate use that comes to mind.)

A good basic electrical tool set can be put together for between $20 and $100 and should include the following items:

—A neon tester, which will tell you whether power is on in a socket, switch or receptacle.

—A wire cutter/stripper to cut small wires and strip some of the plastic casing from the ends (very useful when attaching wires to fixtures).

—Needle-nose pliers (also called long-nose pliers), which easily crimp wires and can reach into tight spaces.

—Lineman's pliers, which make twisting wires together much easier.

—Electrical tape, a handy item which covers bare wires or tacks things into place temporarily.

—Wire caps or nuts, in assorted sizes, which quickly screw over spliced wires to hold them securely in place.

Some of these tools are helpful in other areas besides electrical work — needle-nose pliers, for example, are a big help when hanging pictures, as they can quickly crimp the picture wire into shape.

When you do decide to take on an electrical project — such as hanging that ceiling fan — ask someone with experience to work with you. Always shut off the circuit to the receptacle or switch you'll be working on, and test using the neon tester to make sure no current is traveling through it before starting work.

Evening To Benefit Habitat For Humanity

John Heaney In 'Dancing With the Realtors'

Local real estate professionals and professional dancers will take to the floor of Lombardo's grand ballroom to strut their stuff for the second annual "Dancing with the Realtors," Wednesday, Oct. 15.

The fundraising competition is sponsored by the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors in support of Habitat for Humanity.

Among the local "stars" competing in the event is one of last year's champion dancers, John Heaney, of Century 21 Annex Realty in Quincy. Heaney took the gold in the 2007 South Shore and Plymouth competition, and went on to take second place in the Eastern US Dancesport Championships.

Organizers promise that the second year of "Dancing with the Realtors" will be bigger and better than the first with more than 35 PASS members and affiliates competing alongside professional dancers from local dance studios. This year's event is split into two levels of competition. Beginners will dance to swing and foxtrot, while returning competitors such as Heaney can show off their moves in the tango and cha-cha.

"I had a lot of fun last year, and we raised $37,000 for Habitat for Humanity," said Heaney. "I can't wait to participate again this year, and with two levels of competition and an increase in competitors, we have the opportunity to raise even more money for a great cause."

Seven Days, Seven Projects For A Kitchen That Sells

(ARA) - In today's market, selling a home involves much more than posting a "for-sale" sign in the yard. Preparation is key. In fact, experts agree that property appearance and condition play a big role in the home-sale process.

While home improvements can increase buyers' interests, most sellers hesitate to renovate, fearing they may not recoup their costs in the sales price. However, with strategic updates in key rooms, such as kitchens, sellers can increase the value of a home - giving them a leg up on their neighbors to sell more easily and command a higher selling price.

With just a week's time, a small investment and a bit of elbow grease, you can easily turn your kitchen into your selling feature with these seven projects.

Clean Up!

Although you may love your children's artwork or favorite magnets on the fridge, prospective homebuyers want to envision a home as theirs - not yours. Start your kitchen update by making a clean sweep of the room. Remove everything from the top and sides of your refrigerator and clear off countertops. By eliminating clutter and personal effects, your kitchen will look neat, clean - and even larger.

Fix Up Your Faucet

The faucet is the workhorse of the kitchen - and a focal point. So add new life to your sink area with a fashionable and functional new faucet. For an affordable price, you can find beautiful pull-down models, such as Moen's Solidia pull-down kitchen faucet (available in LifeShine Classic Stainless finish at The Home Depot for $219). Potential buyers will be amazed with the functionality and the updated styling that it brings to the whole room.

Pull It Together

Once you've updated the faucet, pull the rest of the finishes in the room together by updating the hardware. Drawer pulls and knobs in a beautiful stainless finish are a simple project and can add a finishing touch that dramatically updates the look of new or older cabinets.

Become Ultra-Organized

Be prepared! Potential buyers will open your closets, cabinets and drawers to assess the storage availability in your home. Be sure that you organize each of these areas to make your kitchen look like a storage dream - not a nightmare. Many cabinet manufacturers, such as Masterbrand cabinets, offer custom shelves to help organize, or you can find simple organization systems at local retailers. No matter what system you choose, your organization won't go unnoticed.

Curtain Call

Windows are a selling point in any room - allowing nature into a home by providing a source of sunlight. Be sure that windows and blinds are free of dust, fingerprints or pet nose prints for a bright and cheerful display. Adding a neutral, but classic curtain can be a nice touch to frame these focal points of the room.

Follow the Light

Does your kitchen still have the "builder-basic" or outdated brass lighting fixtures? As a focal point above your kitchen table, be sure to update your hanging chandelier with a model in a finish that coordinates with the rest of the room. A variety of classic-designed light fixtures in stainless steel or oil rubbed bronze finishes are available at local home improvement stores and will instantly light up your kitchen.

Cosmetic Cover-ups

You've lived in your kitchen so long that you may not notice the small paint chips in the trim or stain on the carpet, but to prospective homebuyers, these stick out like a sore thumb. A fresh coat of paint on walls and trim will always add more value than its cost and let buyers know that your home is well kept and clean.

Within a week you can easily increase the value of your home in the eyes of potential buyers - as well as provide an enjoyable space for yourself until you sell!

State Launches New Reverse Mortgage Web Site for Seniors

With the popularity of reverse mortgage loans on the rise among Massachusetts senior citizens, the Office of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation (OCABR) and the Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA) has launched a new web site, www.mass.gov/reversemortgage, to provide information and guidance to borrowers about these types of products. Reverse mortgages are loans that enable senior homeowners, typically 62 years and older, to convert the equity in their home into income. Many seniors turn to these types of products to help supplement Social Security income or pay for unexpected expenses. A reverse mortgage lender typically lends the borrower money based on several factors, including the value of the property, the age of the borrower and the accumulated equity in the home. Borrowers have a choice of various payment options, including a lump sum payment at settlement, monthly installments or a line-of-credit that enables a borrower to draw money when he or she chooses, until the line of credit is exhausted. Repayment on the loan is generally not required until the borrower is deceased or does not permanently reside at the property. "Reverse mortgages are extremely complicated products and consumers, beyond the required counseling, should make every effort to obtain independent legal and financial advice when considering one," said Daniel C. Crane, Undersecretary of Consumer Affairs and Business Regulation. "It is important to appreciate the costs associated with these loans and that, over time, the loan will deplete the accumulated equity in your home." "There are many services available for Massachusetts elders who wish to continue to live in their homes. Seniors should contact their local elder service provider at 1-800-AGE-INFO to learn about what programs and services are available before entering into a complex and expensive reverse mortgage," said Secretary of Elder Affairs Michael E. Festa. "We remind all consumers that, before they close on a reverse mortgage loan, they must get reverse mortgage counseling from an agency that is approved by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs." Consumers who are considering a reverse mortgage are strongly encouraged to:

- Review all aspects of the loan – lump sum, term loan, line of credit – to determine if any of these reverse mortgage options are well suited to their needs.
- Obtain independent legal and financial advice to understand the impact of the transaction including any factors that may trigger repayment of the loan.
- Explore alternative products and resources with a reverse mortgage counselor and independent financial representatives. Often the availability of no-cost or low-cost programs and benefits for home repairs and energy assistance can reduce or eliminate the need for a reverse mortgage.

- Understand all obligations under the loan including the responsibility to pay homeowners insurance and property taxes.

Massachusetts Law provides seniors obtaining a reverse mortgage with some unique protections:

- Mandatory Counseling: All reverse mortgage borrowers must obtain counseling from a counselor approved by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs. Borrowers are strongly encouraged to participate in face-to-face counseling. "Comprehensive in-home or face-to-face counseling is invaluable to both borrowers and their families," said Undersecretary Crane.

- "Cooling off" Period: Massachusetts law provides all reverse mortgage borrowers with a cooling off period which gives them the right not to proceed with the transaction for seven days after a loan commitment is issued by the mortgage lender.

- Program Approval: Massachusetts law requires all reverse mortgage programs to be approved by the Division of Banks. A list of approved reverse mortgage programs is available at www.mass.gov/reversemortgage. "It is important for all consumers who are considering obtaining a reverse mortgage to ensure that their mortgage lender's program has been approved by the Division of Banks," said Commissioner of Banks Steven L. Antonakes.

Len Raymond, Executive Director of Homeowner Options for Massachusetts Elders (H.O.M.E.), an approved reverse mortgage counseling agency in Massachusetts, stated, "A reverse mortgage should be the last resort for seniors. In-depth counseling is critical for any senior who is experiencing financial hardship. While all seniors can benefit by careful long-range planning, they should also be wary of high pressure sales tactics to obtain a reverse mortgage or to use the proceeds of a reverse mortgage to purchase annuities or other financial products." Additional information and resources can be found at the new web site www.mass.gov/reversemortgage. Reverse mortgages are complicated products and Massachusetts consumers are encouraged to consult the web site or call the Division of Banks at (617) 956-1500 to address any questions they may have.

Remodel While You Wait Out the Market

Many home sellers are finding this a grim market for sales. Houses sit ... and sit ... with For Sale signs in the yard. Knowing that the market will eventually come back, many families are instead deciding to dig in for the duration — opting to make changes to their existing home rather than try to sell in a bad market.

Remodeling your home can do two things: It can give you more of the things you want in a house right now, and it can position you well for an eventual sale when the market comes back.

With remodeling, however, the trick is to avoid making expensive mistakes.

If you'll need a contractor, get one signed up for late September or October, and negotiate a discount. The later in the year you can schedule the work, the better, as most remodeling companies count on warm months to do the bulk of their year's work. Knowing they'll have off-season work, they're more likely to agree to discounts. (Of course this might not work if you live in snow country and need a roof.)

Consult with real-estate agents so you don't spend too much in the wrong areas and not get a good return on usually sell. Kitchens and bathrooms are the biggest selling points for buyers, but even there you can go wrong if you pick update items that turn out to be only a fad, like concrete countertops in the kitchen.

Consider how serious the disruption will be to your household, and how long it will go on. How long can you realistically survive without a kitchen? Or a bathroom? (There's something to be said for offering a bonus to a contractor who finishes on time.)

Will your property taxes and insurance go up? Find out, and add those numbers into your future expenses calculations, as well as the cost of any construction loan you take out.

Above all, consider whether it is smarter to merely fix up your home instead of doing a major remodeling. An addition that includes a master suite with bathroom won't be as much of a selling point later if the exterior siding is damaged or the kitchen cabinets are falling off the hinges.

M.S.S., C.S.C.S.Crunches Are Pain in the Neck

Q. Most of my workout routine is great, but I have a big problem when it comes working my abdominals. Crunches on the floor hurt my neck, and I am only able to do 10 or so before my neck and head begin to give me pain. How can I work my abdominals without causing pain to my neck?

A. First things first. If you have an injury or medical condition that could be the source of your problem, talk with your physician. Back or neck fusions, previous head or neck injuries, and even certain medications that could cause problems should be ruled out first. Once clear, then you'll know it's safe to move on.

With so many different types of exercises available, it is important to remember to start at the most basic level and move forward slowly. Remember that our abdominal and core region consists of more than the muscles that would show a six pack. They include our back, sides and entire trunk. Neck pain can be caused by improper technique, muscle weaknesses and trying an exercise that is more advanced than your body can support.

Crunches are popular, but be sure to learn the correct way to move and position your body. Watching another exerciser and copying his or her movements is not the best way to learn an exercise. Talk with a fitness professional about the proper way to place your body, head, neck and arms.

An alternative to the crunch is the dead-bug exercise: Lay on your back with both your arms and legs toward the ceiling and together bring one leg down toward the ground while your opposite arm also moves back toward the ground, then raise the arm and leg until they meet together back at the top. Start by bringing your arm and leg slowly down and only as far as your back can stay on the floor. After completing this exercise with one leg and one arm, switch sides. This exercise should alleviate any strain to your neck, since your head never leaves the floor.

Another exercise is the plank, which is often done in classes such as yoga. Start by lying on your stomach with your elbows on the floor under your shoulders. Keeping your back straight, abdominals tightened and elbows on the ground, lift your body to your knees while trying to keep your back as straight as possible and your head aligned with your back. Once you are to your knees and feel you can maintain that position, extend both legs completely and support yourself by your toes and elbows.

Your challenge is to keep your abdominals tightened, back straight and avoid placing too much pressure on your shoulders. Hold this position for 10 seconds at a time until you are able to hold it for extended periods, then carefully lower yourself back to the floor. This exercise should not strain your neck, and it can be a great new goal to see how long you can hold the plank position.

These are just two of many great exercises that can be added to your abdominal exercise routine, and when executed correctly can make you stronger overall and pain-free.

September Is Prostate Health Month

Tips For Maintaining A Healthy Prostate

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts offers information about the importance of maintaining a healthy prostate.

In the United States, one of the two most frequently diagnosed cancers in men is prostate cancer, accounting for 10 percent of cancer-related deaths in men. The American Cancer Society estimates that one in six men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer during his lifetime.

In recognition of Prostate Health Month, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' Prevention and Wellness Program is offering the following tips on how to maintain a healthy prostate.

What is the prostate?

The prostate is a walnut-sized gland that lies at the base of the bladder and surrounds the urethra. The prostate's main function has to do with reproduction as it produces the fluid that carries sperm through the urethra. If enlarged, the doughnut-shaped prostate may restrict the flow of urine.

Prostate Risks

Prostate cancer is the most common form of non-skin cancer among U.S. men. Studies have estimated that about sixteen percent of American men will develop prostate cancer at some point in their lifetime. The disease rarely strikes before the age of forty and most often occurs after the age of sixty. Similarly, noncancerous prostate enlargement develops in most men after the age of sixty. However, inflammation of the prostate, known as prostatitis, is typically caused by a bacterial infection and can develop at any age. It is important to recognize that an enlarged prostate doesn't necessarily signify cancer. In fact, by age sixty about fifty percent of men have this condition, and by age eighty, about eighty percent.

While all men are at risk for prostate cancer age, race, and family history may increase risk. The older a man is, the greater his risk for getting prostate cancer and a man with a father, brother, or son who has had prostate cancer is two to three times more likely to develop the disease himself. Prostate cancer is more common among African American men than among white men. Men with any of these risk factors are also more likely to develop prostate cancer earlier in life than those without these characteristics.

How do you protect yourself from these risks?

In order to maintain a healthy prostate, it is important to get regular screening tests for prostate cancer. The prostate specific antigen test, more commonly known as "PSA", is a blood test measuring the prostate-specific antigen enzyme that is produced by the prostate. The measurement will determine whether the PSA level is within normal limits. In addition to regular screening tests, it is imperative for men to receive annual digital rectal exams for cancer screening. This exam allows the doctor to feel the back portion of the prostate, where most cancers begin, for size and any irregularities. Rectal exams can also reveal noncancerous prostate enlargement, which can lead to urinary difficulties.

Certain fats, such as saturated fats, milk fats, and tropical oils, are believed to speed the growth of prostate tumors and make them more harmful. While it is important for men to be aware of the threat of prostate tumors, prostate cancer poses a more significant threat.

Depending on a man's level of risk, a man should begin these screenings at age 40 or 50. Doctors have estimated that as many as nine out of ten cases of prostate cancer could be cured if caught before they spread beyond the organ -- but two out of three are found too late.

Treatment

When prostate cancer is found in its early stages and has not spread beyond the prostate, a doctor and his patient may decide upon one of three treatment options -- watchful waiting, surgery or radiation therapy. Watchful waiting involves the monitoring of the patient's prostate cancer by performing the PSA test and DRE regularly, and treating it only if and when the prostate cancer causes symptoms or shows signs of growing. A doctor and patient may also decide to remove the prostate through surgery, or destroy the cells through radiation therapy, hormone therapy, or cryotherapy.

For more information on prostate health, visit the Center for Disease Control and Prevention website at <http://www.cdc.gov/> or BCBSMA's website at <http://www.ahealthyme.com/topic/home>.

Free Prostate Screenings
At Milton Hospital Sept. 16

Milton Hospital will host free prostate screenings for men Tuesday, Sept. 16 from 5 to 6 p.m. on the second floor of the hospital in the Brooks Wing.

Registration is required for the screenings. Call the Milton Hospital Community Education Line at 617-696-881- to make an appointment.

According to the Prostate Cancer Foundation, more than 186,000 men in the United States will be diagnosed with prostate cancer this year. When caught and treated early, prostate cancer has a cure rate of over 90 percent, which underscores the importance of regular prostate cancer screenings.

Participants must have their blood drawn in advance of the screenings during the week of Sept. 8. Blood drawing may be completed on a walk-in basis in the Milton Hospital Laboratory, located on the first floor of the hospital. No appointment is necessary for the laboratory.

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, provides community-based health care. There are more than 250 physicians on staff, representing primary care and 22 different medical specialties.

Boosting Good Cholesterol

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a man in my late 60s and healthy except for some heart-valve disease. I maintain a right lifestyle, which includes walking on a treadmill for one hour, eliminating red meat and fat, eating lots of vegetables and fruits, and consuming soy instead of milk products.

My HDL cholesterol is low — 21 to 23 mg/dL (.54 to .59 mmol/L). I have taken niacin or omega-3 fatty acids and Tricor. My HDL cholesterol remains persistently too low.

Do you have any advice how to increase it? Is my diet wrong? — L.L.

ANSWER: HDL (high-density lipoprotein) cholesterol removes cholesterol deposited on artery walls and dumps it into the liver for disposal. That's why it's called good cholesterol. The higher its number, the better. An HDL-cholesterol above 40 (1.03) is good, and one higher than 60 is very good.

Your diet is perfect. Don't change it.

Exercise increases HDL cholesterol. You're spending an hour a day exercising, which is more than enough. Increasing the tempo of your exercise might have a beneficial effect on your HDL level, if your doctor says you're fit enough for an increase in exercise intensity.

In addition to limiting saturated fat, as you are doing, you have to be careful about trans fat, fat found in many commercial baked goods and in fried foods from some fast-food restaurants. If you're not a label reader, start reading label information.

Virgin olive oil increases HDL cholesterol. Use it on salads and as a spread.

Foods that suddenly boost blood sugar don't do well by HDL cholesterol. White bread, white rice and excessive sugar use are examples.

If you drink alcohol, continue to do so in moderation. Two daily drinks can raise HDL. More isn't helpful, and can be the opposite.

You've tried all the medicines suggested for increasing HDL. Have you tried them in their highest doses or in combinations?

The booklet on cholesterol explains this topic that is talked about to excess. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue—No. 201W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

THE WHITE FILLINGS FOR YOUR SMILE

While amalgam (silver) dental fillings have been around since the 1800s, they are fast losing ground to tooth-colored composite resin dental fillings. The most obvious reason for the switch to plastic dental resin is has its basis in aesthetics. In the eyes of increasing numbers of patients, it's far more preferable to have a filling material that nearly matches the color of their teeth exactly rather than a metallic filling that stands in dark contrast to white teeth. On top of that, composite dental resin actually bonds to the crown of the tooth to create a solid tooth structure. Amalgam, on the other hand, merely fills the cavity, allowing seepage around the "silver" filling over time, which can lead to decay. Mercury fillings or amalgam fillings can easily be removed and replaced with far more attractive colored fillings. We are proud to offer the best in cosmetic and family dentistry. Our friendly staff will provide you and your family with the professional care and personal attention you deserve. Our goal is to help you enjoy your teeth throughout a lifetime. But Needs Another Victory To Advance

Quincy Defeats Florida For First Babe Ruth World Series Win

By SEAN BRENNAN

When starting pitcher Josue Ordonez's groundout scored first baseman Bobby Kozlowski to cut the score to 4-2 with one out in the top of the fifth inning against Syracuse, New York Monday night at Adams Field, the Quincy Babe Ruth World Series representative looked primed to potentially run its pool play record to 2-1, and in the process, accomplish what at the beginning of this World Series seemed far-reached: advance to the single-elimination bracket as one of the top six teams in the ten team tournament.

Quincy earned its first win of the 2008 Babe Ruth World Series Saturday night with a 2-1 upset win over Tallahassee, FL.

But on this night a second victory would not be in the cards for Quincy. The Middle Atlantic representative used a two-run fifth and a one-run sixth inning to push their advantage to 7-2 and starting pitcher Jeremy Mapstone (7 innings, 2 runs, 3 hits, 5 Ks) retired the last six Quincy batters he faced to close out the game.

The loss dropped Quincy's record to 1-2 with one game remaining in pool play against the Pacific Southwest representative Palo Alto, CA (this game was played Wed. night). If Quincy won Wednesday night their dreams of moving forward in the World Series would be a reality.

Against Syracuse, Quincy got off to a fast start playing as the away team. Ordonez struck out to start the game, but second baseman Adam Nazzaro was hit by a pitch to give Quincy its first base runner. After Joe Alibrandi fanned for the second out, outfielder Mike Stille roped a double to right field. Nazzaro, who was breaking for second base, raced all the way around from first to score the game's first run.

Mapstone then walked shortstop Tim Liuzzo, but he got outfielder Torrey Gustin to ground out to end the inning, limiting the damage to just one run.

Syracuse, which beat West Fargo, ND 3-0 on Saturday, responded to Quincy's run by scoring three of their own in the bottom of the first off Ordonez. Mapstone led off with a base hit, Phillip Zdanowski walked, and after Brooks Weigl was forced out at first base leaving runners at second and third, Jeremy Kidd walked to load the bases with one out.

A walk to Nick Sinay forced in Mapstone tying the score at 1-1. With bases still loaded, Ordonez recorded a big strikeout of Marcus Warner for the second out. Teetering on the edge, Quincy was an out away from escaping major damage, but Louis Testone's hot smash to Liuzzo at shortstop ended up in centerfield and Zdanowski and Kidd scored to give Syracuse a 3-1 lead after one inning of play.

Single-Elimination Play Underway, Championship Game Saturday

The single-elimination portion of the Babe Ruth World Series at Adams Field gets underway today (Thursday) and will conclude Saturday with the Championship game at 1 p.m.

The 10 participating teams in the World Series are guaranteed to play at least four games in the pool play format. After pool play, the first, second and third-place teams in the American and National divisions advance to the single-elimination competition.

Teams will be seeded according to the position they finished in pool play. Also, pitching limitations reset at the beginning of single-elimination competition.

Pool play standings are determined as follows:

Won-loss record;

If still tied: Results of head-to-head competition;

If still tied: Fewest runs given up;

If still tied: Run differential with a maximum of 10 per game.

If, in the event of a three-way tie, it is broken before or upon completing the fourth criteria. If a two-way tie still remains, the two teams remaining tied will revert at that time back to the second criteria to break the two-way tie.

The single-elimination schedule:

Thursday, Aug. 21 (Quarterfinals)

Game A: 3rd Place National vs. 2nd Place American, 5:30 p.m.

ADAM NAZZARO crosses the plate with Quincy's first run against Syracuse. Nazzaro scored on a double by Mike Stille.

SYRACUSE'S JEREMY MAPSTONE scores to tie the game at 1-1 as Quincy catcher Danny Higgins tries to corral the loose baseball.

The two-run advantage seemed to boost Mapstone's confidence. He retired nine of the next ten Quincy batters, never allowing the host team to get any offense going.

It would not be until the top of the fifth when Kozlowski singled that Quincy seemed to rattle the Syracuse pitcher. Catcher Dan Higgins smacked Quincy's second hit of the frame and Ordenez's ground out scored Kozlowski, but with Higgins in scoring position, Nazzaro grounded out to end the fourth.

Quincy Defeats Florida But Needs Another Win To Advance In World Series

Two runs in the bottom of the fifth and one run in the sixth pushed Syracuse's lead to 7-2 and when Mapstone retired Gustin, Justin Coscia and Dennis Sullivan 1-2-3 in the top of the seventh, Quincy was faced with a win-or-go-home game on Wednesday versus Palo Alto, CA.

Sunday vs. West Fargo, ND

Coming off that 2-1 opening round win over Tallahassee, FL, a victory that has since been called the biggest win in Quincy Babe Ruth history, the host team came out flat and dropped an 8-0 game to West Fargo, ND.

"We came out of the gates against ND a little flat," said Quincy manager Dick Lombardi. "It was just a bad game for us and a little out of the ordinary. The carry over from that win against Florida didn't translate in the second game and we just didn't play great defense and couldn't get that big hit when we needed it."

West Fargo jumped out to a first inning 1-0 lead off starting pitcher Joe Alibrandi. Alibrandi struck out Andy Young to open the game, but a double and three walks plated the run. Fortunately for Quincy, Alibrandi worked his way out of any further damage and that one run was all ND would score.

But Quincy could do nothing against starting pitcher Chance Bitzer; recording just four hits all game.

"We are having some trouble putting hits together," added Lombardi who has seen his team manage just nine hits and four runs in three games. "Their pitcher was good and we just could not get anything going against them."

West Fargo, which lost to Syracuse 3-0 on Saturday, scored two more runs in the third inning, two runs in the fourth and three runs in the fifth to put the game away for good.

Also pitching for Quincy versus ND were Tim Liuzzo, Adam Nazzaro and Andrew Fonte.

"It was one game and we have to move forward and put it behind us," said Lombardi. "One loss does not end our hopes of advancing on, but we need to shore up the defense and try and get that big hit when we really need it."

Saturday vs. Tallahassee, FL

In what may go down in Quincy Babe Ruth baseball lore as the biggest win ever, Quincy opened their 2008 Babe Ruth World Series with a thrilling and improbable 2-1 upset win over Tallahassee, FL.

The boys from Tallahassee could not have seen this one coming. This group from Florida started the tournament as the defending 2007 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series champions, and there was no way the host team could knock off this giant, right?

Wrong. Quincy, behind the ace starting pitching of Lukas McDonough (complete game, 10 Ks, 4 hits, run), stunned Tallahassee 2-1.

"I think we surprised a lot of people with the way we came out and played," said Lombardi. "This is the biggest win in Quincy Babe Ruth history and to beat the defending champions at Adams Field is exciting. We are going to enjoy this win and remember it for a long time."

The host team jumped out to an early 1-0 lead against Florida's starter Tom Watson (complete game, 8 Ks, 2 hits, 2 runs). With Adam Nazzaro on third base with one out in the first inning, Mike Stille sacrificed him home for the first run of the game. That 1-0 advantage was maintained for the next six innings because of the pitching of McDonough.

McDonough, using mainly his fastball, held the high-powered Florida offense in check. His only inning of trouble was in the fifth. Florida loaded the bases behind two walks and a single, but McDonough got a pop up and a fly out to escape with the 1-0 lead intact.

In the top of the seventh, McDonough helped his own cause by sacrificing in Stille with a flyout to centerfield. Stille had reached third base after reaching on a three base error to start the frame.

Leading 2-0 and needing three outs for the win, McDonough allowed a one-out run-scoring double to Watson, cutting the lead to 2-1. With two outs and two on McDonough got Garrett Johnson to pop to shortstop to clinch the upset special.

"Lukas just dominated," said Lombardi. "He was going to finish the game, win or lose."

"I am proud of these kids. This is a win that they will always look back on fondly. Our hope is that it will carry over and we can grab at least one more win. But I told the kids to take it in; we defeated the reigning world champions on our home field."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The solution to our most difficult problems often lie simply in facing things as they are - and adding tow words - I accept...

The way of acceptance ... How often that path is rejected by people who refuse to admit limitations, who hide behind denials and excuses, who react to trouble with resentment and bitterness. And how often, conversely, when one makes the first painful move toward repairing a damaged relationship, or even a broken life, that move involves acceptance of some thorny and difficult reality that must be faced before the rebuilding can begin.

Perhaps in the long run the beginning of wisdom lies in the simple admission that things are not always the way we would like them to be; that we ourselves are not so good or so kind or so hard-working as we would like to believe. And yet ... AND YET ... with each sun that rises there is a new day, a new challenge, a new opportunity for doing better...

"Oh Lord," goes on variation of the old prayer, "grant me the strength to change things are need changing, the courage to accept things that cannot be changed, and the wisdom to know the difference."

People have call it the prayer of acceptance. They are right.

Having long symbolized both sleep and death (because of the opium extracted from them and also for their blood-red color), poppies have been used since ancient times for offerings to the dead. Commonly, the field poppy is regarded as a weed, but it is cultivated for its seeds, which are used in baking and also in the making of oil.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience with those who don't keep up with you can cause resistance, which, in turn, can lead to more delays. Best to be helpful and supportive if you want results.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise announcement from a colleague could put you on the defensive. Gather your facts and respond. You'll soon find the situation shifting in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Time spent away from a project pays off with a new awareness of options you hadn't considered before. Weigh them carefully before deciding which to choose.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Consider confronting that personal conflict while there's still time to work things out. A delay can cause more problems. A longtime colleague might offer to mediate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some emerging matters could impede the Lion's progress in completing an important project. Best advice: Deal with them now, before they can create costly delays.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your aspect continues to favor an expanding vista. This could be a good time to make a career move, and taking an out-of-town job could be a good way to do it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disruptive family disputes need to be settled so that everyone can move on. Avoid assuming this burden alone, though. Ask for — no, demand — help with this problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience is called for as you await word on an important workplace situation. A personal circumstance, however, could benefit by your taking immediate action.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't lose confidence in yourself. Those doubters are likely to back off if you demand they show solid proof why they think your ideas won't work.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A temporary setback might cause the usually sure-footed Goat some unsettling moments. But keep going. The path ahead gets easier as you move forward.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There's welcome news from the workplace. There also could be good news involving a relationship that has long held a special meaning for you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still need to cut some lingering ties to a situation that no longer has the appeal it once held. In the meantime, you can start to explore other opportunities.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your sense of what's right can inspire others if you remember not to push too hard to make your case. Moderation works best for you.

FIRST PLACE WINNER: "Shark Attack" by Fenno Street Playground.

SECOND PLACE WINNER: "Wall-E" by Kincaide Playground.

FIRST PLACE WINNER: "Palmer's Paradise" by Palmer Playground.

Recreation Arts And Crafts Display At City Hall Plaza

This summer's Quincy Recreation Department's (QRD) Arts & Crafts display at City Hall Plaza saw one of the closest contests in recent years with over 600 ballots cast and a high voter turnout from both the public and the playgrounds.

Each playground/park spent countless hours working on their projects, which made for a great final display and a close competition. All of the 16 playgrounds put in a great effort throughout the summer.

For the first time ever the competition finished in a first-placed tie. "Shark Attack" by the Fenno Street playground and "Palmer's Paradise" by the Palmer playground both earned top billing.

Coming in a close second place, separated by only three votes, was "Wall-E" by Kincaide playground. The third place winner was "Celebrate Quincy" by the Montclair playground.

Arts & Crafts Specialists Erin Croke, Shelly Donovan and Katherine Shea organized the City Hall Plaza display for the QRD.

The QRD leaders from Fenno Street were Kyle Carrigan, Aileen Croke and Matt Furey. Participants Nick Furey and Mikey Harrington worked on "Shark Attack."

The QRD leaders from Palmer were Taylor Dennehy and Mike Powers. Phu Tang, Horris Hamilton and Nick Beon created "Palmer's Paradise."

The QRD leaders from Kincaide were Mike Motto, Meg Gillespie and Terrell Staley. Ricky Carter, Ryan Carter, Corey Hernandez, Paige Mackie, Ben McDonald and Demari Dailey were the participants who worked on "Wall-E."

Third place playground, Montclair created "Celebrate Quincy" with the help of participants Jenny Dunphy, Kara Rowland, Caitlin Bulger, Madison Hally, Maeve Hally, Aidan Pugsley and Loren Miller. The QRD leaders from Montclair were John Rowland, Meg Therrien, Anthony Dipalmo and Kelly Barden.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch thanked the local merchants who supported this event by donating prizes to the winners. He said:

"Their generosity helps make this event possible. Many thanks for the kind generosity of Balducci's, Dairy Freeze, Tony's Clam Shop, The Calmbbox, Time Out Pizza, Super Chef and Baby Cakes Cupcakes. They helped to make this year's event tremendously successful once again."

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. P.J. 8/28
